HAPPY TIME IN GEORGIA

SOON, the wall-eyed mule who has a hankering for shade will stop at the end of a long furrow, where bushes fringe the creek. The honest plowman, who has a rock in one shoe and a clod in the other, will even smile. The lines will drop loose, the faithful mule will eat a day's rations of young corn, and the honest plowman will reach down alongside the bank and straighten up with his arms enfolding a striped Georgia watermelon and his face beaming with an ineffable smile.

The season verges upon the happy time when Georgia soil offers up striped watermelons as Mt. Olympus once furnished ambrosia to the Gods.

The Watermelon Philosopher of the Central railroad yards says that perhaps ambrosia never grew on vines, and that, come to think of it, nothing can equal a Georgia melon, particularly if it's striped.

With a smile that was anticipative, he looked afar off, as though he saw a vast melon, like an argosy, rising over the horizon.

"The earlier they are the sweeter they taste," he said reflectively. "Uster to be a nigger here we called Peg because he had one eye. He said that when he died he just wanted a June melon busted on his grave so the juice would sorter trickle down.

"People who wait till the Fourth of July to eat their first melon, wouldn't let St. Peter usher them through the golden gates if they didn't think the hour was proper.

FIRST IS SWEETEST.

"The first melon is the one I always remember till the next year. Once we had melons about the first day of May. That was back in the seventies. I still dream about it. If Santa Claus ever brought watermelons for Christmas gifts I'd go about borrowing stockings.

"I always liked green apples because they come early; and, if they have any little qualms in the way of reminders, that just makes the taste linger. Same way with the watermelons. Some day I'll eat a green one to see if it won't be sweet just because it's early.

"I wonder why everybody don't come to Georgia when the watermelon's ripe and the sun's hot, and there isn't anything tastes equal to melon—not even if you're thinking about apple cider.

"'Twouldn't seem natural to eat them anywhere else. Watermelons need a natural setting. The sun's got to be high, you got to have your coat off, and you got to be in Georgia. Then a melon's a melon. Anywhere else it would be a dessert.

"When the season's right, melons are just as much victuals here as cornfield peas. Of course there're never best till the sun's high, but I know a man who has watermelon regularly for breakfast all during the summer. He's going on sixty, and if the melon crops last he doesn't see a bit of reason for ever gettin' feeble. He says a taste of melon of a morning from June to August is a prime tonic.

20,000 MELONS A DAY.

"By the Fourth of July folks here will be eating 20,000 melons every day that there isn't a famine in the market. Twenty carloads is what's needed to make Atlanta feel real satisfied.

"Sometimes when conditions are just right, temperature's near a hundred, heart of a watermelon looks redder than a rose, rind's as green as any leaf, and the way it thumps makes your mouth water—take a time like that and everybody wants watermelon, and the railroads can't ship enough to satisfy folks.

"Take a time like this and everybody's waiting for matermelons. Look at the little niggers, you can't keep them away from that car."

First carload had arrived from Florida, and little "niggers" crowded about for a glimpse. The Philosopher nearly excited and barely quelled a riot. No sooner had he sliced a melon and looked about for the subject who should pose as a "Georgia Nigger With a Watermelon" than a dozen hands reached for the melon slice.

"Wait," enjoined the Philosopher, "the camera isn't ready."

But the negro's other ear disappeared from view.

But only a wooly top-knot remained in sight.

But all that was left to view was the boy's bare feet, with the two big toes wagging ecstatically.

The Watermelon Philosopher reached for another slice, took a look at the camera, and handed the melon to the nappy nigger on the crate. The camera caught him when the melon was half eaten.

The Georgia watermelon season will really begin about June 15. This year's crop will be larger than the crop of last year. But neither dealers nor railroads can estimate the increase. Enough, however, will be raised and shipped to furnish Atlanta 20,000 a day when the season is prime.

MONSIEUR CHEF, THE ARTIST

THE FAMOUS CHEFS OF ATLANTA AND THEIR FAMOUS DISHES.

AUGUST AUSTETT selected a bit of celery, measured out two grains of salt, added a taste of green pepper, and concluded with a mushroom.

"It is exquisite," he agreed. "The kaiser should himself eat it."

The greatest achievement of Senor John Biocochi, chef at the Piedmont, is spaghetti a la Caruso—such spaghetti as the senor prepared for the great senor during the latter's stay in Atlanta.

The supreme dish of Monsieur J. Gancel, chef at the Georgian Terrace, is one of several. He is inclined to "Filet Mignon Terrace," "Filet of Spanish Mackerel," and "Squab en Cocotle Grazella." He himself can't choose from the three. They are the climax of his forty years of art, and none can say which is the greatest.

"You think they are alive. They might be ready to coo to you."

THE DELECTABLE CHOP SUEY.

But there is no doubt in August Austett's mind about his greatest success. He was born in Germany at Spire-on-the-Rhine, but his skill is unequalled in chop suey.

As he added a third grain of salt, he both sighed and smiled.

"It is more Chinese," he said, than the Chinese. I learned it in Detroit. A Chinaman, a very great chef, was brought there to make only chop suey. He was paid, truly, $85 a month. I watched him for six months. I learned all he knew, for six years I improved upon his recipe. I added here, I subtracted there, until it was perfected."

His recipe for one portion is:

Celery, two stocks.
Half of a green pepper.
One piece of bamboo "shoots."
Two Chinese sweet potatoes.
Small handful of Chinese mushrooms.
Quarter of a boiled chicken.
Chinese sauce.

SPAGHETTI A LA CARUSO.

Signor Biocochi's recipe for spaghetti a la Caruso is:

"Boil one pound spaghetti in salt water for twenty minutes, drain and put back in saucepan, add four ounces of good butter and the same quantity of grated Parmesan cheese, let simmer and hold in oven until the following ingredients are separately prepared; then take the spaghetti out of the oven and make when in the center and pour the now cooked ingredients into it. One-half chopped onion, two beans of garlic, half cup olive oil, four ounces butter, eight fresh mushrooms, let all this cook until nicely browned, about four minutes, and add four fresh peeled tomatoes, let this cook thoroughly for ten minutes. Serve grated Parmesan cheese on the side.

SQUAB EN COCOTLE GRAZELLA

Monsieur's directions for making "Squab en Cocotle Grazella" are:

"Use select squabs and after they have been plucked, drawn and singed, clean them, bone the squab, stuff with foi gios put in a pan with butter. After cooked, put in the cocotle, moisten the pan with sauterne wine, add bottom of artichoke, quartered, Muscat grapes peeled and seeded, cover the squab and put in oven for five minutes."

Filet of Spanish Mackerel, Georgia style:

"Split a well cleaned mackerel down the back, take out the bone just below the head and two inches above the tail. Season the outside and fill the empty space with a fish forcemeat into which has been added some allemande sauce and fines herbs. Give the fish its original shape, roll in lightly two sheets of paper and tie at both ends. In the center and once again between these, making in all five rows of string. Place the fish on a baking pan, set it in the oven for twenty minutes, remove, unwrap and dress, serving with gooseberries. Suppress the stalks and ends, then blanch them for two minutes in boiling water in an untinned copper vessel or until they crush between the fingers, drain and then mix them in a thickened maitre d'hotel, butter garnishing of gooseberries around the fish."

Another filet is:

"Trim carefully a tenderloin of beef, remove all the fat and nerves then cut into slices, each one weighing five ounces, beat them lightly to have them all of the same thickness, then pare and cut them into round shapes, salt on both sides, saute in melted butter, and let them cook quickly. Put in shirred egg dish, on round toast, one thin slice Virginia ham, fresh mushrooms saute on top, moist the pan with thin Bordelaise sauce. Cover with glass bell and put in oven or on top of the range few minutes."

Each of the three chefs has pursued his art under great masters who have perfected the technique of the pupils and have encouraged them to put "soul" into their cooking.

Herr Austett has followed his profession for eighteen years. Senor Biocochi for perhaps twenty years and Monsieur J. Gancel for forty.

Each studied at home under the masters, each studied in Paris, each completed his art in Switzerland. In Germany and in Italy they learned the dishes of their homelands; in Paris, the art of the French; in Switzerland, the cooking of all nations.

No chef has become an artist until he has pleased the appetite of the cosmopolitan traveler in Switzerland. That is the land of all peoples and of all cooking, and is the finishing touch for the chef.

August Austett cooked at Spire-on-the-Rhine until all the country round began to know of his dishes. He went to Paris. He went to Switzerland. He came to New York. He arrived in Atlanta, and here has per- fected his chop suey and reached the real pinnacle of his art.

Biocochi learned cookery in Rome, Italy, under his father. Went to Paris, to Switzerland, to New York, to Atlanta.

Gancel began in Paris, he also advanced by degrees to New York, and finally achieved Atlanta.

Each of these three chefs, in their recipes, which include chop sueys, Caruso spaghettis, fillets and squabs en cocotle en Grazeilla, have given the world's best directions for the world's best dishes.

The masterpiece of each is indeed an achievement. For instance, Monsieur Gancel has written a book of 170 or more pages upon the dishes with which he is familiar. And surely it would take an equal number for Herr Austett or Signor Biocochi to tell of his cooking. Each has made a profound research, and the recipes that he gives are the best.

Among other famous dishes in Atlanta are the following, which have been copyrighted by the Piedmont hotel:

The George Washington "Camp Fire Chicken Stew." (A gastronomic dream of old Virginia. From Washington's Career, 1732-99, by J. J. Headley.) Chicken stewed in heavy soup stock with rice, potatoes, okra, carrots and a few small onions.

The Bonaparte Old Guard Steak—(From the Life of Napoleon, 1767-1821, by Pierre Lanfrey. The great Napoleon's favorite dish.) An extra sirloin braised with marrow and sliced potatoes, small onions, mushrooms and peas.

Frederick the Great's most loved dish (as prepared by his favorite chef, Monsieur Noel.) (From Frederick the Great and his Contemporaries 1712-1786, by Magaretha Von Peschinger.) An extra tenderloin steak cooked between two slices of veal in Italien sauce with Cepes hashed fine garnished with cauliflower and Rissolees potatoes.

Stewed lobster, from a recipe of the Hon. Joseph Willard, first president of Harvard College (one of the greatest epicures of his day): Lobster stewed in sauce composed of pulverized lobster shell, heavy soup stock, puree of tomatoes with fresh mushrooms (Morrell mushrooms) if possible, sherry to flavor.

William Shakespeare's mutton chop. (From the Life of Shakespeake, 1564-1616, by Lee Tracey.) (The dish that often gave the Bard of Stradford on Avon his inspiration.) English chop partly broiled then cooked in a deviled sauce spiced with pickled walnuts and cucumbers, and served with a special baked potato.

Braised (whole) chicken Count de Piedmont Duke of Savoy. A whole chicken braised in cooked rice, mixed with tossed chicken livers foie gras and truffles.

The Little Disciples of Health

The Battle Hill Sanitarium, Which Has Been Established by the City for the Treatment of Tuberculosis, Hopes to Preach the Gospel of Health Through the Little Children Who Are Being Treated There—Fourteen Children Are Patients at the Sanitarium, and All Are Being Taught How to Prevent Tuberculosis—When They Are Discharged, Their Example Will at Least Tend to Prevent Others From Falling Into the Heedless or Unfortunate Ways of Living That Inevitably Lead to Ill Health—Dr. Merritt, Superintendent of the Sanitarium, Says That All Patients Who Come Soon Enough and Stay Long Enough Will Practically Be Cured—The Records of the Sanitarium Show That in 14.4 Per Cent of the Cases Treated Last Year, the Sickness Was "Apparently Arrested"—That Means That Such a Proportion of the Patients Were to All Intents and Purposes Cured

THE Battle Hill auditorium, which has been established by the city the treatment of tuberculosis sees in children the one cure for this sickness which afflicts all lands and all peoples.

Children are the disciples of health who must teach the religion of "open air" to the generations to come.

Fourteen children are being treated at the sanitarium, and are being brought up in the ways of healthful living. They not only will be cured, but they also will be taught how to prevent tuberculosis.

These little children will become "teachers" whose example will at least tend to prevent thoughtless and unfortunate ways of living.

Through wholesome food, fresh air, and rest 14 4-10 per cent of patients at the sanitarium last year practically were cured. They were recorded at the sanitarium as cases where the disease was "apparently arrested." They may return to work; and, with proper care, will remain healthy.

Among 12 3-4 per cent of the patients, their sickness became "quiescent." Their illness no longer is apparent, their vigor is returned, and they have resumed their former lives, assured of continued health if they will only observe the simple rules of right-living.

They must avoid overwork, they must sleep in the open air, and they must be careful that their food is sufficient and is wholesome.

CHILDREN THE TEACHERS.

But adults have become accustomed to another way of living, and find the change unnatural, even though it is necessary. They may come to live in the open air, but they seldom impress the advantages of that life upon others.

The children are the converts to whom the sanitarium looks for its "open-air" disciples. Rules of health are a part of their A, B, C's, and healthful living will become as natural to them as it is unnatural to a large part of humankind.

A few years ago, the fate of these children would have been inevitable. The sickness, which was inherent from their birth, would have been beyond human aid. But each is now sure of recovery, simply through a course of right-living, which is independent of medicines and succeeds merely through fresh air, wholesome food, and rest.

Among the accompanying photographs is the picture of a little merry-eyed fellow, holding a terrier who is not a bit more animated than the little boy himself. When this child came to the sanitarium two years ago, almost upon the day when the institution was opened, he was too ill to walk. The last bit of his strength seemed to be gone. Apparently his recovery was beyond hope. For six months he was in bed, but bit by bit he began to grow stronger, the little weakling who had been born to sickness, slowly returned to health, and within a few weeks he will leave the sanitarium entirely well.

TWO YEARS OUT OF DOORS.

This cure was wrought simply through a routine of open air, wholesome food, and rest. During the last two years this child has spent scarcely a moment indoors. He has slept outside, passed the days in the open air, even during the winter he has attended school in open air classrooms, and even during his first six months in bed he was in a hospital room which was closed-in only so far as the roof is concerned, and had all four sides open to the air.

He has been cured by fresh air, and he has been brought up to the knowledge that fresh air is the one cure-all. This fact has been impressed upon him during every minute of the last two years, and a similar knowledge has been inculcated in each of the other little patients at the sanitarium. When they are pronounced sound and return home it is hoped that health will have become the A, B, C's of their education, and that they will become by their example and by precept, disciples of health.

Dr. S. Wickes-Merritt, superintendent of the sanitarium, in speaking of these children who are in his care, said:

"Adults are hard to charge. It is difficult to convert them from one way of life to another. But we are bringing up these children to know that health can be had only through right-living, and that right-living means fresh air, good food, and sufficient rest.

"We are training people to prevent tuberculosis, and this training will nowhere have so great an effect as among the children. They are growing accustomed to sleep out-of-doors, to pass as much of their time out-of-doors as possible, and to avoid the conditions that promote tuberculosis.

"If all would or could live as these children are being trained to live the disease of tuberculosis would cease to exist.

THE CURE FOR ALL SICKNESS.

"Nearly any sickness will yield to the treatment of fresh air, proper food, and rest, and these children are being taught that fact."

They also are a demonstration of this truth. Hardly one of the 14 seems less healthy than normal children. By reason of the fact that they are continually out-of-doors, these little ones who came to the sanitarium weak and wan, are rosy-faced, sprightly and full of life.

Dr. Merritt says that in the instance of adults as well as children, practically every case of tuberculosis that is only moderately advanced, can be arrested by the treatment followed at the sanitarium. This treatment simply means the adoption of a healthful routine.

The sanitarium is a collection of buildings which are roofed over, but which have the sides open to the winds of heaven. It has done away with the menace of "in-doors." Everything at the sanitarium is open to the air. The sleeping rooms, the dining rooms, and the rest rooms are all built so that wire screens take the place of thick walls, and that every breath which stirs through the rooms is fresh and clean.

WINTER OUT-OF-DOORS.

In the coldest part of the winter, patients spend every hour of day and night in the open air. They are not in-doors a minute, rain or shine, cold weather or warm weather. Curtains are arranged to protect them from rain or wind, but wraps are their only protection from cold. And this fact is the reason that all improve and in many instances the sickness is arrested.

The sanitorium was opened by the city on May 1, 1911, and during that year 194 patients were admitted. The benefits in these cases was: 4 3-10 apparently arrested; 18 9-10, quiescent; and 13 per cent improved.

Last year 313 patients were admitted, and the good results were: 14 4-10 per cent apparently arrested; 12 3-4 quiescent; and 16 6-10 improved.

The sanitorium can accommodate 180 patients at one time, and as a part of this accommodation, it affords quarters for negroes, which are equally as well equipped as those for white patients.

The institution is owned and maintained by the city, and requires no payment whatever from patients. It is in Battle Hill, 10 minutes' walk from the car line, and rests upon a hill which commands a view of all the surrounding country.

"If patients will come soon enough," says Dr. Merritt, the superintendent, "and will stay long enough, they will be practically cured. If they delay in coming here, and yet will stay long enough after they do come, they can be returned as useful citizens.

"Incipient cases must stay six months. To remain a shorter time merely gives them instructions in how to live. In more clearly developed cases they must stay longer."

GIRL GETS "HUNCH" FOR PLAY FROM THE VISIT OF BURGLAR

Discussed Literature With Her as He Proceeded to Loot Home—Was Perfectly Polite, Highly Educated, and Talked Entertainingly While Helping Himself to Valuables

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 31.—He was highly cultured, a perfect gentleman, and—a burglar.

He and a pal recently entered the house of David Reese, 71 Jordan avenue, a wealthy cigar manufacturer, and got away with $1,000 worth of jewelry and silverware. So far, neither he nor his pal have been caught.

But that is not the story.

Reese's daughter, Edna, is of a literary bent. She is a playwright. She had such a pleasant little visit with the gentlemanly burglar that she really doesn't care whether he is ever caught or not, because she got a "hunch" for a corking good drama out of the adventure.

"He wakened me by flashing his electric searchlight in my face," said Miss Reese. "Then after warning me not to make an outcry, covered my head with the bed clothing.

"'Are you afraid?' he asked.

"'No,' I said, and was very cool.

"'It is mental telepathy,' he said. 'I am thinking earnestly that you must not be afraid and you will not be. Are you a student of psychology?'

"Then he asked if I had any money or jewels and I told him 'no.' Then he looked around my room and finding some manuscripts he said: 'Why, you're a very studious little girl, my dear.' He picked up a book I had been reading and asked if I was a Christian Scientist. Then he sat down on the edge of the bed and began to read another little book, a sort of New Thought book.

"He read several pages and kept talking to me in the meantime. His partner, who was keeping guard in the hall, became very impatient because we were chatting and urged the burglar to hurry up and burgle. I asked him, the gentleman, to not scare my father, and he said he wouldn't scare him any more than he had to. Then I told him not to go in my brothers' rooms because they would be sure to start a fight.

"'Now, don't worry about me,' he said. 'I've had considerable experience in this business and I'm sure I can present terms to your brothers which they will be glad to accept.'

"I asked him what made him become a burglar. 'You know it isn't honest,' I said. 'My dear girl,' he replied, 'there are many things in this world that might drive a man to this.'"

"Monte Carlo"

LONDON, May 31.—The amazing career of "Monte Carlo" Wells, who is now undergoing a sentence of penal servitude in France for bank frauds, was recalled by a discussion in Mr. Justice Bucknill's court arising out of a dispute between Wells English and French creditors. As far back as 1885 "Monte Carlo" Wells began operations in Paris, and was sentenced (in his absence) to two years for fraud under the name of Charles da Ville Wells. He gained his greatest notoriety through breaking the bank at Monte Carlo for $200,000. He had told the story of his gambling in two books, "How I Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," and "How the Bank May be Broken." He explained how, starting with a capital of $200,000, he bet on runs or series, staking $100 or $50,000, the minimum and maximum amounts.

CHARLIE BURCH is going back to the island of Malta, back to his birthplace which he has not seen for fifty-four years.

He is going back with the memory of a half century of roving from Hudson Bay to Cape Horn behind him; with experiences as sailor, railroad man, night watchman, and Atlanta financier, all so rich and varied that they would fill a book of adventure.

With him he will take the money which he has earned since the day, twenty-six years ago, when he entered Atlanta without a cent in his pockets; and in Malta he will find awaiting him a fortune which may be worth shillings and may be worth pounds, millions of pounds.

Since his eleventh birthday in the year 1859, when he quit his father's roof to ship as cabin boy on the barque Mary Bantley, Charlie Burch has never sighted the green shores of the little island tucked away in the beryl wash of the Mediterranean, the British possession which has made Maltese cats and Maltese crosses more famous than Schlitz beer has made Milwaukee.

His father and mother he never will see in this world, for five years ago they died, unknowing whether their boy was alive or dead, unwitting that in far off Atlanta he was slowly building up a fortune.

FORTUNE AWAITS HIM.

It is only the news that in Malta there are real estate properties worth much gold to which he and his sister are the only surviving claimants, that is leading him to leave Atlanta, the city which he has grown to love.

When Burch bade Malta farewell fifty-four years ago his father had just leased all the property he owned for a ninety-nine year term, on the agreement that all improvements made on the lots should revert to him or his heirs at the expiration of that time.

It is yet a long call to the end of the ninety-nine years, but the revenue which has been pouring in annually since Charlie Burch left home, amounts now to a sum of very generous size.

If Burch goes back to Malta, and he says he will, it will be as a common sailor, according to the view he now takes of it, for a firm love of the ocean and her sons is deep-rooted in his heart.

In his little cottage on Dillon street, where he plies his present trade of painter and contractor "Admiral" Burch, for such they call him, looks at the cobble-stones in the street and the rusty fence across the way. Instead of the pavement he sees a brig under full sail, and in place of the cracked boards his mind's eye conjures up a picture of the good old days when he was second mate on the barque Sunrise, "the tyrant of the seas."

Burch has the salt blood of generation after generation of mariners coursing through his veins. His father was an officer in the British navy, and little Charlie's first recollections were of the time when he accompanied his daddy on voyages to many of the most famous ports of Europe.

WENT TO SEA AT EIGHT.

As a child of eight he was with his father on his majesty's ship of the line, the two-decker Hannibal, as she cruised along the coast of Italy, one of the watchful eyes of the British bulldog crouching over the revolutionary ridden nation.

Garribaldi was striking the blow that freed his country, and the Hannibal was there to protect England's possessions. The most vivid recollection of Charlie Burch's childhood is the day the famous general came on board to see the admiral of the flagship.

"It was outside the harbor of Palermo," says Burch. "Garibaldi came over the side, a large man with a terrific fringe of red whiskers around his chin. He told our admiral that unless he captured Palermo that Saturday evening that his men would have to fight on the Sabbath. Well, he captured the town Saturday night.

"There was another time he came on board," Burch continued, rolling a cigarette, "to tell the admiral that he would march into Naples without shedding a drop of blood. He did it, too, for not a man was killed as Garibaldi entered the town, the people cheering him and the troops throwing down their arms on every side."

At the age of eleven Burch quit the paternal wing. The cartoonist has drawn a picture of him "running away to sea," but as a matter of fact he had the consent of both his father and mother.

The Mary Bantley was in port, and Burch was taken on board as cabin boy with the munificent salary of twenty-five cents a month. The Mary Bantley was a New York ship, Captain R. K. Clark, a man who was later tried in San Francisco for murder and cruelty on the high seas.

It took Burch's first ship sixty-two days to make the voyage between Malta and New York. From New York the Mary Bantley went to Cape St. Francis, and coming back was wrecked in a storm in the gulf stream.

The Mary Bantley went down, but the crew, including young Burch, was rescued by the barque St. Peter and taken to New York.

PROTEGE OF CAPTAIN CLARK.

It was then that Captain Clark became captain of the barque Sunrise, the most notorious ship of the day, on the decks of which so many and such ghastly crimes were committed that it became known as "the tyrant of the seas."

Captain Clark had the reputation of being the most cruel captain on the ocean, yet to the boy, Burch, he was a second father. Burch says he has seen three men commit suicide on the ship because of the captain's ferocity; he has seen men starve there for lack of food; he has seen men killed with hand spikes before his eyes.

One summer day the Sunrise sailed into San Francisco. Burch and the others had been hard at work painting the decks to remove the blood stains and gore which blotted them from end to end.

But in Frisco town Captain Clark was arrested, together with his first mate. They were tried and condemned for murder and cruelty. The mate paid the penalty of his misdeeds, but Clark was pardoned, after serving a long term in prison, on account of his wife and children.

Burch went back to New York and shipped on board a fishing smack sailing to the Grand banks out of Gloucester. It was one of a fleet of thirty-two vessels, and was named the Average Steat. Out of the thirty-two which left Gloucester harbor on a summer's day, but half returned a year later.

One whole fleet was caught in a terrific storm off the Gorges banks, and although the Average Steat was one of the leakiest old tubs in the lot yet Burch and the rest of the crew managed to pull the vessel through and return to Gloucester with a record catch of cod.

END OF HIS SEAFARING.

Burch tried the fisherman's life for four years, when he shipped as steward on the schooner Ajax, sailing from New York to Galveston with a cargo of railroad iron. When the schooner stopped at Pensacola, Burch quit her and went by land to New Orleans. It was the last time he has set foot on a rolling deck.

That was about thirty-five years ago.

From New Orleans Burch went to Mobile, thence to Sesma, Ala., where he got employment with Wilcox & Gillespie, railroading contractors.

They placed him in charge of the blasting gang, a position to which Burch owes the loss of two fingers and the thumb of his left hand.

The gang was blasting an extension through Brown's cut, when a premature explosion killed two men and tore Burch's hand into shreds. All save his two middle fingers had to be amputated.

Burch left his job and went to Chattanooga, where he became timekeeper in a rolling mill. Later he went to Ringgold, Ga., and acquired a half interest in a farm.

Twenty-six years ago the ex-sailor, railroader, farmer and timekeeper breezed into Atlanta "dead broke." He went to M. M. Mauck and was given a job as painter. His present prosperity dates from that hour.

As a contractor he has directed the building of hundreds of the city's houses, as a painter he has coated as many or more, as a night watchman he has kept them safe from harm through many long hours of the night.

He has guarded two of Atlanta's highest sky scrapers while they were in process of construction. He was night watchman of the Fourth National bank building, and from May, 1911, to January 20, 1912, he performed the same office for the Third National bank building. He has since been night watchman for the Davidson-Paxon-Stokes stores, but retired a short time ago to "take a little vacation," as he expresses it.

It may be several weeks before Burch goes back to Malta, it may be several months. All he has to do is to wind up his affairs in Atlanta, place his three little girls in school, and then, it is back to the continent, with the prospect of a life of ease and a fortune which has only come to him through years of work and adventure in more capacities than it is given to any man to have, unless it be one Stevenson's heroes.

Sight-Seeing in the National Capital

BY MRS. W. H. FELTON

Washington, D. C., May 22, 1913.

Dear Semi-Weekly: Since Tuesday morning I have ridden over miles and miles of Washington City streets. The town was never more beautiful in its spring attire. It is the most perfect of all cities on this western continent, as tourists say.

The Speedway, which was known as the Potomac Flats when I was here in the seventies, is the most beautiful of places for driving. Not only has this beautiful place the profusion of green trees and velvety grass, but the river has been deepened and the grounds drained, until it has been made into a scene of bewitching beauty, with water scenery.

I have been through Chevy Chase park, where millions of dollars have been expended in these later years, and through miles of Rock Creek park, where the native woods are still preserved and in beautiful profusion.

How these woods have been so well taken care of, and so near this great city, I cannot understand, when I think of the vandalism that has prevailed in our southern country.

I am enjoying the trip very greatly. My right eye, which was injured in a wreck some eighteen months ago, has been troubling me for several weeks, and I found it needful to hold up on reading, etc. So I decided to come on this little jaunt and try to give the eye its needful rest. I can ride and see these fresh and beautiful scenes when I might be longing (if at home) to read, as was always my habit during a long life. By the courtesy of Hon. Gordon Lee, who instructed his chauffeur (who, by the way, is one of our Cartersville boys) to drive me in his fine new car to these delightful parks and over Washington City streets, I have been greatly favored. It was really the very thing that pleased me most, as I have been more or less lame since the wreck on the Southern railway occurred in September, 1911.

I accompanied the Old Guard of Atlanta to the White House on Tuesday morning, in company with a dozen or more Atlanta ladies, and enjoyed their company and the White House ceremony very greatly together. President and Mrs. Wilson were introduced to the Atlanta party by Senator Hoke Smith, and I also met Representative W. Schley Howard and Hon. Thomas Hardwick in the East room, with the soldiers, at the same time.

The Old Guard made a fine display as they marched from near the capitol down Pennsylvania avenue to the executive mansion. I expected to see the Misses Wilson, but theye were absent on that day, perhaps entertaining the crowds of sightseers who throng the city in the lovely springtime. We were admitted at a side entrance into the gallery, where the portraits of former presidents' wives are placed. I shall expect to see Mrs. Wilson's portrait in the same gallery if I ever visit the White House in later years. I knew Mrs. Hayes better than all the presidents' wives to whom I have been ever introduced, and I had seen her in the beautiful ruby velvet robe which the artist faithfully copied in this handsome portrait that I glimpsed on Tuesday.

The Old Guard were not in the White House exceeding fifteen minutes, but they bore themselves proudly and the people on the avenue gathered in great crowds to witness this military parade of Georgia soldiers.

As the house of representatives is not holding regular sessions I do not see much of the congressmen, and a number of them are at home on brief visits. I propose to go this forenoon to the senate and hear these distinguished senators talk on popular subjects. I so well remember the distinguished men who occupied these congressional positions more than thirty years ago that I can, I hope, see our later statesmen as worthy successors of Hon. Allen Thurman and Senator George F. Edmunds, of Vermont, who were very interesting to me in gone by days, because I appreciated their active and virile patriotism in pushing forward that wonderful "Thurman bill," which saved to the United States government many millions of dollars at a time when the Pacific railroads were determined to avoid this righteous payment of its obligations.

But these old veterans in statesmanship are gone, and there are but a very few of those senators between 1875 to 1881 left on earth to recall the scenes that occurred at the time mentioned. I will write you something of what these newer statesmen talk about in a later article.

A NEW ORGANIZATION PROPOSED.

As we have conventions without number, conferences galore, and political caucuses continually, and the women's clubs tackle everything in sight, for discussion and action, why shouldn't womenkind get together, to convene, confer and caucus on a suitable kind of fashions for women's wear?

I saw a young woman go down our street the other day, and the hind part of her frock was so narrow and so awkward that she kicked it out at one step and kicked it in at the next step, until I agreed with some visitors that she had certainly reached the limit for ugliness as well as uncomfortableness in her style of dress. It was just long enough for her high-heeled shoe to catch the hem and jerk it back and forth as herein noted, automatically.

I asked myself why we women were so utterly incapable of making fashions for our own wear? When you consider the amount of time, study, money and material that this subject of dress covers, it is just astonishing that women must wear frocks that are skin-tight on the limbs, and almost nude on the neck and bust, and so scant that they must hobble like they were trussed and bandaged on their lower limbs. On top of this, you generally see a hat expansive enough for a parasol, and with a perfect garden of flowers or mayhap a forest of plumes to decorate the headgear. I can never forget a likely young woman I saw at the old depot in Atlanta one of the hottest of last summer's days. She might have tipped the scales at less than 200, but I thought she would have cleared 240.

She was corseted to the limit, trying to hold the extra fatness in place, and the tightness around her body made her face more than rosy, and her fat arms were sweatin gjust as her face and neck were performing on that hot day. The dress was lingerie, made elaborately with lace and tucks and it had possibly been fresh washed and ironed the day before, but the heat, the dust and the skin-tight goods had all stamped their marks on the outfit. She sat down because she was dead tired with fatigue and adipose tissue, but when she took a seat the tight skirt pulled up and gave all of us a view of her stockings and far above those bovine ankles. Everything had been made fine as to texture, but now drabbled with sweat and dust.

On her head there was an immense fine hat with a magnificent ostrich plume on it. I suppose she paid somewhere between $75 and $100 for the headgear, and she had considerable jewelery thrown in to add to the expense. Everything she wore seemed to increase her very ample proportions, and yet she wore such a tight skirt that there was no difficulty in outlining her anatomy, whether she was standing up or sitting down. She had the money, I guess, and yet she had no judgment or private perception as to what would be suitable for her wardrobe.

I recall the pity and even sympathy I felt for this overgrown woman, and I think of her when I urge the necessity for a convention or a caucus of patriotic women to study the subject of female attire from a sensible standpoint.

Why, even Chicago preachers are telling their congregations that something must be done to abate these vulgarly suggestive, skin-tight dresses!

And if Chicago has a spasm of virtuous impulse certainly the rest of the country should set up and take notice. I commend this new organization to the energies of our reform clubs, who are actually in straits occasionally for "new worlds to conquor."

HOW I FOUGHT A LION, SAVED MY LIFE AND LOST SOME FINGERS

Editor's Note—George Thompson is an American soldier of fortune who has sought adventure in many lands and is a master of many trades. He is now living the simple life as cook on a great lakes steamer. This is a true story of an experience he had on a recent hunting trip, which reconciled him to a cook's life.

BY GEORGE THOMPSON.

I've had enough of hunting big game, whether to shoot it or to trap it. The little mix-up I had with a lion in East Africa last December has settled the matter. I don't care to furnish any more of my own meat for hungry lionesses and such.

Our expedition was out to capture animals for circuses and zoos, and we were working south of Nairobi. We had caught plenty of hyenas and other small animals, but wanted a few lions and tigers and a rhino or two.

We made pitfalls in the jungle, set the traps and made the rounds, and on the first round got three full-grown lions and a lioness. We caged them and sent them back to camp and proceeded through the hills on foot.

Suddenly, as our party moved through the dense, thorn-covered bushes, the men in front heard a growl and saw a lioness crouching in the brush, with three fat cubs romping near her. One of the hunters shot her with an express rifle and she toppled over. They took the cubs alive and went on, leaving two natives to skin the lioness.

I was bringing up in the rear when I heard a shriek from one of the natives. The next moment the bushes behind me crackled and as I turned there stood the lioness, bleeding from a gash in her throat. The bullet had not killed her, and at the touch of the knife, when they started to skin her, she had leaped up, killing one native and scaring the other away.

Before I had time to bring my rifle to my shoulder the beast let out a roar and leaped for me. I saw her huge form fly into the air, her paws outstretched and her fangs gleaming.

I never had a chance. I didn't even yell, for in a moment she struck me, knocking me to the ground. I felt my gun dashed from my hand and everything grew back.

I came to in a few moments. And there was the lioness crouching over me, biting at the tough cloth of my hunting coat. I could feel her hot breath. Her body rested against mine and I couldn't move.

I was paralyzed at first and then my mind started working. I shut my eyes, pretending I was dead, and slowly, without attracting the attention of the animal, I managed to draw my heavy caliber revolver from its holster. I twisted it till the muzzle pressed against her belly and pulled the trigger.

With a howl of pain she leaped straight into the air. She landed on her feet, and while she stood a moment glowering at me I half rose and fired again. The shot failed to drop her, and all at once she rushed forward, mouth open, and snapped at my right hand.

As her jaws closed on my hand and the smoking revolver I pulled the trigger again. And this time the weapon discharged inside the beast's mouth, doing terrible execution. She toppled over dead, with my hand still in her bloody jaws.

In a few minutes my companions came running up and carried me to camp. I wasn't hurt so very much. I had only lost a couple of fingers and got the rest of my hand scarred up.

But so far as I'm concerned, all the circuses and zoos in creation can get along without animals hereafter.

"Affianceship"

BERLIN, May 31.—In trying a breach of promise case on appeal, the Leipzig imperial court has decided that an "engagement" is not a "mutual, binding obligation to marry," but only a "mutual promise leading immediately to a condition described as affianceship."

The condition of "affianceship" is thus established as a separate institution. Persons breaking off this condition are liable to be sued for damages.

GEORGIA INVESTORS WOULD BE SAVED $5,000,000 A YEAR BY A LAW AGAINST "GET-RICH-QUICK" WALLINGFORDS

---HUGH M. WILLET

Members of Committee Which Has Drafted a "Blue Sky" Bill to Be Introduced at Coming Session of the Legislature, Believe That Such a Law Would Be Next in Importance to the Measure Preventing the Operation of Bucket Shops--The "Blue Sky" Bill Will Be Approved Within a Short While By the Chamber of Commerce, and Will Be Placed in the Hands of Fulton County's Representatives for Introduction to the Legislature. This Measure Seeks to Protect Investors By Regulating the Sale of Securities--Mr. Willet, Chairman of the Committee Which Has Drawn the Bill, Says That It Will Serve to Broaden the Field for Legitimate Business

H. M. WILLET,

Chairman of the committee which has drafted a "blue sky" bill through which to protect Georgia investors from the sale of fraudulent securities.

The state of Kansas two years ago passed a law against the sale of worthless stock, and since that time the problem of the "Wallingford" class of promotors has been considered by many states. Several "blue sky" laws were introduced at the last session of the Georgia legislature, but none reached a final vote. In explaining the measure that has been prepared for introduction to the legislature this year, Mr. Willet says that it has been so drawn as to secure the maximum protection with the minimum restriction of business.

Mr. Rufus Wallingford in Business, Is Said to Be Even More Successful Than Mr. Rufus Wallingford "The Best Seller"---The Easy Money He Gets in Literature Is Said to Be Just as Easy and Just as Plentiful in Real Life---According to a Statement By the Postoffice Department, Investors in the United States Lost $120,000,000 Through the Schemes of 'Wallingford' Promoters---Georgia Has Suffered Less Than Other States, But It Is Said That the Loss, Nevertheless, Has Been Great

By Angus Perkerson

THE postoffice department estimates that investors in the United States were robbed of $120,000,000 last year by "Get-Rich-Quick" Wallingfords.

H. M. Willet, of Atlanta, chairman of a committee which has prepared a bill to protect investors in Georgia from such promotors, believes that at least $3,000,000 and probably $5,000,000 was lost in this state last year through such swindlers.

Georgia has suffered no more than other states. But in the opinion of the committee, a "blue sky" law for Georgia would be as important as the law against bucket shops.

Mr. Willet believes that a measure against the Wallingford class of swindlers would save $5,000,000 a year to Georgia investors. President Wilmer L. Moore, of the chamber of commerce, by which body the bill will be urged, says that it is perhaps the most important legislation that will be submitted to the coming session of the legislature.

THE EXAMPLE OF KANSAS.

Two years ago Kansas enacted a law against dealers in fraudulent stocks, and since that time the problem of the "Wallingford" crook has become a topic in all states.

Georgia has now come to a consideration of this problem and to a knowledge of what a tax swindlers of this class are to the country as a whole.

The south has suffered less than other sections, but Mr. Willet believes that even in Georgia the loss through investment in worthless stocks may amount to a great fortune each year.

The committee thinks that the money misspent upon worthless securities reaches to such a large total that the "promotor" has become an evil as great as the one-time bucket-shop broker.

In Georgia, as in other states, men and women of all degrees have suffered from the dishonesty of dealers who sell worthless securities. It is said that one investor recently lost $110,000 to a shrewd Mr. Wallingford, and that another spent $30,000 for paper which had no other value than the aesthetic quality of its gilt edge.

BUSINESS MEN DRAFT BILL.

For the purpose of preventing such losses, a committee consisting of bankers, manufacturers, brokers, and other business men of Atlanta have drafted a new "blue sky" law which will be introduced to the legislature by representatives of Fulton county.

This bill will be submitted to the chamber of commerce, and will be approved, probably without changes. Afterward it will be placed in the hands of the Fulton county representatives.

H. M. Willet, chairman of the committee which has drafted the bill, says that this measure not only will protect investors from fraud but also will broaden the field for legitimate securities.

The purpose of the bill is to give the secretary of state authority over stock salesmen. It provides that he shall have the right to prohibit a dealer from selling securities which seem to be offered in bad faith. But it also provides that the salesman may appeal to the courts from the decision of the secretary of state. This provision has been inserted to prevent the bill from being harsh.

Several "blue sky" laws wer introduced last year to the Georgia legislature, but they were pushed aside by other measures. The need of protection from the "Wallingford" class of swindlers, however, was generally realized, and it is probable that several cities will be ready this year with measures which have the same purpose as the bill drafted by Mr. Willet's committee.

FIVE MILLIONS SAVED.

The bank commissioner of Kansas estimates that during the first year the Kansas "blue sky" law was in effect, 500 promoters were excluded from the state, and investors were saved at least $5,000,000. He thinks that the law is too rigid and that for the sake of legitimate business it should be modified. But he also considers it one of the wisest measures ever enacted by the state of Kansas.

"Blue sky" is a phrase that the promoters themselves, in a humorous mood, adopted. Selling their worthless stock is likened by them to the sale of a handful of blue sky pulled out of the clouds. These peddlers of worthless securities all have something of the flavor of the short-story Wallingford. They are not swindlers who scheme merely for money. They also are artists who take great pride in their work.

Their chief purpose is to demonstrate to the astute business man that they can take his money from him. And they are artists of the sort whose purpose seldom goes unachieved.

They have no objection to the widow's mite, but they find it more satisfactory as well as more profitable to take a leading citizen's bankroll.

When a promoter comes to town he casts a sportsman's eye upon the thriftiest man of the community, and lays his plans to make that level-headed individual pay good money for gilt-edged paper. Usually, he works to this end by using well-known business men as cat's paws.

A PROMOTER'S KIT.

But first of all he prepares his "kit." This consists in statistics of successful companies which he is imitating in his fraudulent way and which he intends to use as an illustration of what his own dishonest schemes will accomplish.

A promoter's "kit" really is a work of art. It is made important and impressive by photographs of the tall office buildings of successful companies; it teems with statistics; it is bound in nice soft leather; and all in all it will convince not only the unwary but also the shrewdest.

With his "kit," which is a recital of the success of other companies which his own promotion scheme is to parallel, Mr. Wallingford approaches a leading citizen, and before he is done he has that business man as an officer of his company. He brings others of name and influence into his scheme, and proffers his worthless stock with the assurance that the company is countenanced by men of standing.

This guarantee and the big profits that the company's promises seldom fail to sell stock. Not many years ago worthless paper which was promoted in the south was sold even in Honduras and now threatens to bring about international complications.

PROSECUTION IS INFREQUENT.

But seldom is the promoter prosecuted. The care that he has used to keep just within the law and his shrewdness in inducing prominent men to become officers of the company, are usually sufficient protection. But the government arrested over 1,000 such swindlers last year in various parts of the United States, and convicted nearly 500.

The fraudulent stocks which are offered for sale are of all kinds. But they have this in common that each holds up to the eyes of the investor a vision of millions. Each promises to yield a vast profit, and each is sold through that common desire to "get rich quick."

The promoters themselves are men of distinct brilliancy. In legitimate business they would deserve that well known description "Napoleans of finance." But legitimate business fails to offer the excitement and the triumph of "taking" money from a clear-headed business man who has a pride in his acumen.

As one who has made an investigation into this profession of the sharpsters said: "You couldn't make one live straight if he could earn a million at it. He prefers to be crooked."

H. M. Willet, chairman of the committee which has drafted the "blue sky" bill to be introduced by Fulton county representatives, says of this measure:

"The term 'blue sky' has in recent years been applied to all those laws whose object is to prohibit the sale of fraudulent and otherwise worthless securities. Since the enactment of the Kansas law, nearly every state in the Union has been discussing the passage of similar legislation. Some of the bills introduced have been absolutely impracticable, others have been unconstitutional, and others have been so drastic as to seriously limit, if not entirely destroy, all dealings in investment securities.

"All of us are more or less interested in the passage of laws directed against the sellers of spurious and fraudulent securities. Citizens of Georgia, by alluring promises of extraordinary profits, have been robbed of millions of dollars of hard earned money. The fakers handling such securities have found their best customers among those of moderate means, such as school teachers, ministers, women earning small salaries—often those of high intelligence, but lacking in worldly wisdom.

"Atlanta, as the financial center of the state, has naturally been the home of many of these get-rich-quick schemers. Some of them have been hatched by shrewd promotors from other sections who got their first experience elsewhere, and came to our city when found out in their own communities.

"To assist in better protecting our citizens from the operations of such schemers, and to help purify the investment field, the chamber of commerce, through a carefully selected committee, is having drafted a 'blue sky' bill which it will ask the next luegislature to enact into law.

DIFFICULTIES OF BILL.

"To draw such a bill is no easy matter. Any measure to regulate the sale of securities should be as simple as possible so that it could be easily understood. While not hampering legitimate business, such a measure, however, should furnish a real weapon against unscrupulous vendors of securities. It should be enacted with a view of protecting especially the small investor who cannot afford to make an investigation on his own account, and who is not sufficiently familiar with financial affairs to distinguish between good and bad faith among those offering securities.

"The central idea of the bill is to give to the secretary of the state the right to issue an order to any dealer not to sell in the state securities which seem not to be offered in good faith. In order to remove any apprehension o arbitrariness the proposed draft expressly provides a right of appeal to the courts. To carry out this thought provision is made for the filing of certain definite information as a prerequisite of doing business in the state except in certain well-known and specially exempted securities. While this initial requirement is simple so as to allow a reasonable freedom of dealing in legitimate securities, it yet places in the hands of the secretary of state an effective weapon for quickly driving an unscrupulous dealer out of the state, as the character of their business is not such as will bear investigation.

"While the draft of the bill in the final shape has not yet been approved by the chamber of commerce, it has been prepared with such extreme care that it is not likely much change will be made. The various laws enacted by different states of the Union have been critically examined—the beneficial sections of each of such laws have been incorporated, and such modifications have been made as would adapt the bill to conditions obtaining in this state, and to the requirements of our state constitution. While it is impossible to draw any bill that will be perfect in all respects, and will meet all conditions, it is believed that the bill now nearing completion will give the maximum of protection to the citizens of our state from fraudulent transactions with the minimum of restriction upon those that are entirely legitimate.

"The enactment of such a law in Georgia will be of far-reaching effect. It will vastly improve the conditions under which investments in securities are made, it will broaden the field o legitimate dealers in securities."

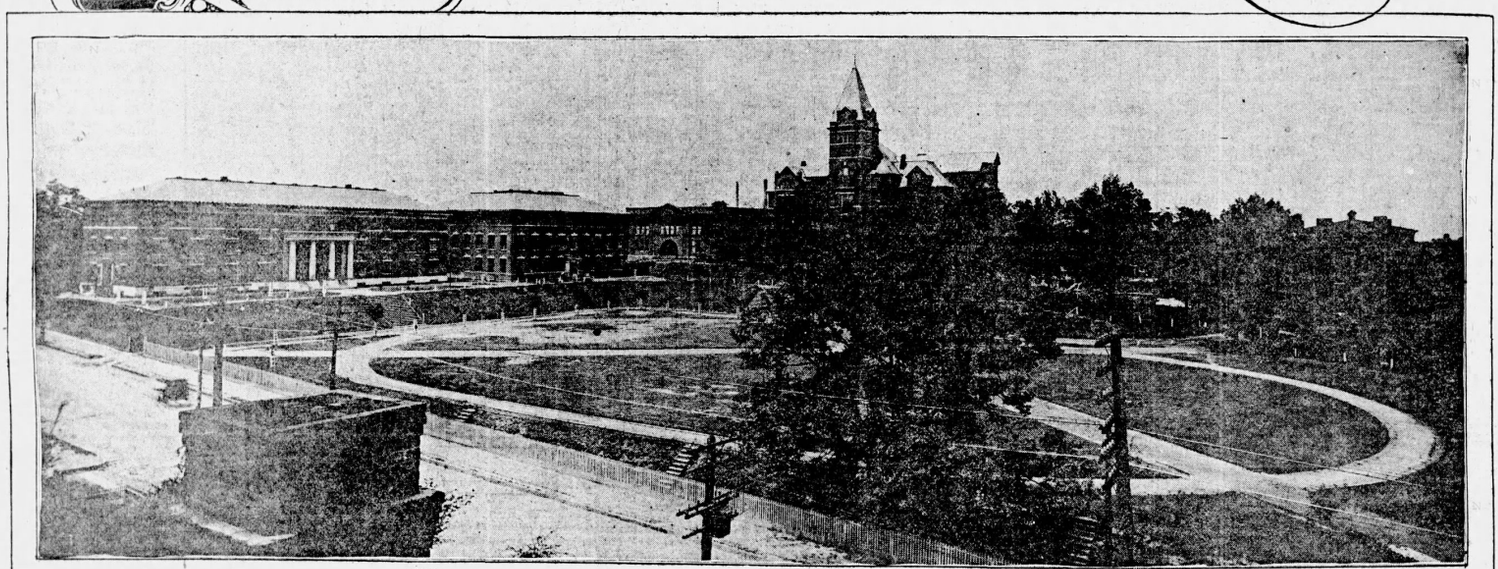
QUARTER CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY OF GEORGIA TECH TO BE CELEBRATED THIS WEEK

COL. N.E. HARRIS OF MACON FOUNDER OF GA. TECH.



IN CONNECTION WITH REGULAR COMMENCEMET EXERCISES

DR. J. S. HOPKINS - 1ST PRES. OF TECH. DR. LYMAN HALL - 2ND PRES. OF TECH. DR. K. G. MATHESON - 3RD PRES. OF TECH.

THE GEORGIA SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY will celebrate the 25th anniversary of its founding this week and next week, in connection with the annual commencement exercises.

The commencement will be the most notable in the history of the institution, and the most famous speakers who have ever been secured for a commencement in the south will make the principal addresses.

Famous speakers who will take part in the celebration are U. S. Commissioner of Education P. E. Claxton, Dr. Thos. E. Green, of Chicago, C. Alphonso Smith, of the University of Virginia, and Dr. Herbert S. Bigelow, of Cincinnati.

This quarter-centennial celebration will give the people of Georgia a remarkable opportunity of seeing what their institution has accomplished during the past 25 years. The history of Tech's growth is remarkable in many ways.

THE PROLOGUE.

While the actual history of Georgia Tech begins in 1888, when Hon. N. E. Harris' measure for the establishment of the school was put into execution, the prologue to the story goes back several years further to the early eighties, when Dr. Isaac S. Hopkins, who was then professor of Latin in Emory college, fitted up as a workshop an old log cabin in the back yard of his home. Dr. Hopkins, who had a love of mechanics and a genius for invention, fitted out the shop for his own pleasure and recreation, but students of Emory used to eagerly gather around him and watch his work at the bench and with the lathe, and yielding to the requests from patrons of the boys who were deeply interested, Dr. Hopkins began tentative instruction in tool craft in 1884 in this little workshop. This the idea of providing a technical education for the boys of the south first took definite shape. In 1885, the bill for a state technological school in connection with the State University, introduced by Hon. N. E. Harris, was passed by the state legislature, and in 1888 the buildings and part of the equipment were ready.

THE FOUNDING.

Colonel Harris, who thus became the founder of Georgia Tech, has never ceased to take an active and effective interest in working out its destinies, and is today the president of its board of trustees. Colonel Harris was chairman of the commission appointed by the legislature, and had more to do than any other one man with establishing the institution.

When this commission assembled in Atlanta in April, 1888, to choose a president for the newly established school of technology, Dr. I. S. Hopkins, who in the meantime had been made president at Emory, was unanimously chosen. The Atlanta Journal in its issue of April 6, 1888, had the following to say of Dr. Hopkins:

"He is considered the pioneer of technological education in Georgia, and his successful experience with the technological department at Emory, with his high character as an educator, will give prestige and enthusiasm to a technological school from the outset."

THE GROWTH.

The growth of Tech under Dr. Hopkins' administration readily bore out The Journal's prediction. During his presidency he also did ministerial work in some of Atlanta's leading churches.

When Dr. Hopkins resigned during the school year of 1895-96, the late Dr. Lyman Hall, then a distinguished member of the Tech faculty, was chosen to succeed him. Dr. Hall was a native of Americus, Ga., and came of colonial Georgia stock. He studied at Mercer University, and in 1877 went to West Point, by the appointment of General Phil Cook, graduating with distinction in 1881. Immediately after graduation he received an honorable discharge from the army, owing to an accident received on the parade ground during drill. Thus prevented from following a career in the army, he became a teacher in a military school and entered upon his destined life-work without knowing it. He was commandant of the old Georgia Military Institute when the Georgia Techonology formally opened its doors in October, 1888. He became a member of the original Tech faculty in the capacity of professor of mathematics.

When Dr. Hall was elected president of Tech in 1896, he began at once carefully to lay plans for the development of the institution, to enlarge the plant, to extend its influence, to raise the standard and value of its work. He threw himself into this work with a generous ordor and devotion that made failure impossible. It is said to be a literal truth that during the 10 years of his incumbency, Dr. Hall had not a single day of vacation. While others were away for their summer rest, he might be found day after day in his office, planning and scheming how to make the school's absurdly small income meet what he saw to be its needs.

DR. HALL'S SACRIFICE.

The institution grew by leaps and bounds, but a strain such as Dr. Hall was under could not last indefinitely, and the collapse came just as he was realizing the fruition of his labor. Those years of overwork undermined his health. His friends realized his condition, and for months before his death plead with him to lay his work by and seek a year's complete repost. Deaf to their urging, he continued his fight until 1905, when his condition became such as to require his surrender. He went to a sanatorium at Danville, N. Y., for treatment, but the vitality was spent, and in August, 1905, he died, having literally given his life for Tech.

Dr. Hall had the distinction of teaching the south the essential difference between technical training and technical education; he drew a definite line of demarkation between the artisan and engineer. At its beginning, the purpose of the school was not understood. It was regarded as a sort of industrial or manual training school, and a large part of its students were sent there under this misconception. Herein, however, there has been wrought a radical change. For years past the school has drawn its patronage from leading families of practically all the southern states and many northern ones, and in few colleges will be found as uniformly excellent a standard of conduct and scholarship.

DR. K. G. MATHESON.

On the death of Dr. Hall, the board of trustees wisely selected to continue his work a man whose long association with Dr. Hall, coupled with natural ability and wide experience, made him the one person best able to take up the work and prosecute it ably—Dr. K. G. Matheson, then head of the department of English at Tech.

Dr. Matheson was made chairman of the faculty on August 16, 1905, holding that position until June, 1906, when he was made president of the school. Under Dr. Matheson's direction the school has seen a fuller fruition of its hopes and ideals than in the other periods of its history.

For a long time after its establishment the finances and equipment at the Tech were inadequate in every particular. The plant consisted of two lonely brick buildings and a couple of eight-room wooden dormitories, bleakly perched on a red hill and accessible by a long, narrow foot bridge spanning a deep valley, as wild as when nature had just fashioned it.

TECH TODAY.

Today, the institution of which Dr. Matheson is the head, is one of the largest and most splendidly equipped technological schools in the world. It has a student body this year of some 650 young men. Its graduating class this year has over seventy members.

It has sixteen buildings and about twenty acres of land. The whole Tech property today is said to be worth in the neighborhood of $800,000. It has sixty-five members and associate members of the faculty, among whom are some of the most distinguished educators in the south.

The greatest material strides in the institution's growth have been during Dr. Matheson's incumbency. Since he was elected president in 1906, the following improvements have been made:

Approximately thirteen acres of land have been added to the campus.

The income of the school has been nearly doubled.

Carnegie library has been built and its support provided for.

The Night School has been established, which gives industrial education to a large number of Atlanta artisans and employes generally.

A large and flourishing summer school has been established, and is successfully conducted each summer.

The Joseph Brown Whitehead Memorial Hospital has been built and its support provided for.

Three of the five units of the handsome fire-proof mechanical engineering buildings have been erected.

The finest athletic field in the south has been secured, providing two complete gridirons and baseball fields, many tennis courts, quarter-mile track, etc. Also a reinforced concrete stadium will be erected this summer.

A number of scholarships, paying from $150 to $200 per year to needy young students have been secured.

The enrollment of the school has been practically doubled, and large additions have been made to the faculty, and all courses have been raised in standard and efficiency.

Decided improvements have been made upon the campus, so that it is rapidly becoming an attractive park.

Tentative donations in equipment for a new heating power, and lighting station, amounting to more than $100,000 have been secured.

A most successful course in architecture has been added; and, generally speaking, large additions of equipment have been made to the various departments of the school, and the reputation of the school for work of the highest order has been extended throughout the country.

At the quarter-centennial celebration which begins this week, friends and alumni from all parts of the country are coming to take part in the ceremonies, which will mark the splendid achievements of these past twenty-five years.

THE VOGUE OF CHECKED FABRICS IN STREET SUITS

CHECKS, broken, in neat shepherd patterns or large sizes, will always hold a place in the smartly dressed woman's favor, for they combine with a plain clothes to such fashionable advantage that they never surprise the keen observer of styles when their returned popularity forms an important chapter of the styles.

To the practical eye this page of checked coats in combination with skirts trimmed with checked bands is full of suggestion. The array shows variety that answers the need of all types of figures and all lengths of remnants. The summer suit of linen, lightweight serge, ratine or heavier weaves for cool days is here shown as Paris has offered it to her chic patrons. It is for Americans to profit by the clear sketches.

Plain white linen is used for the skirt of the first costume. There is a long tunic, lapped in front, edged with a shaped band of checked fabric. A hem is stitched above; and, needless to say, the skirt is given its tailored finish by a pressing which all good dressmakers consider a necessity.

The coat of this suit is of checked linen in khaki color and white. There is fullness in the blouse and a cutaway peplum is joined to it under a belt of white linen trimmed with a brass buckle. A rolled collar of white extends at the back in a curved line. Crystal and brass buttons fasten the front line. The sleeves are long, fitted into an armhole, with white cuffs with tabs on the outer line held down under buttons.

Next in the quartet is a coat, with kimono sleeves and square collar and revers, which are edged with bands of blue satin. Beige and blue-checked cloth is used, the plain beige cloth forming the cuffs, collar and the skirt. The jacket is bloused and has a long peplum and a gipsy sash of blue satin. On the lower edge of the skirt is a deep band of checked material. An ecru batiste blouse is worn with this stunning suit.

In a stunning short length is a jacket with decided cutaway front line, a side fastening under three velvet buttons. Green-and-white checked serge with a chamois finish is used for the jacket. The collar and cuffs are of white cloth with green velvet inlays. On the skirt of white are two shaped bands, the points in the center. A green velvet girdle is worn with the suit, and a white and green hat with a Robin Hood quill makes the costume a distinctive one for seashore or for any afternoon wear.

In the fourth costume pink-and-gray checked matine forms a Russian blouse, with a cording denning the waist line. The peplum is bordered with plain pink linen. The cuffs on the kimono sleeves with dropped armholes are also plain. A yoke of plain pink linen has heavy gray lace in points as shown. The skirt of plain linen is plain, with a deep hem set on with a cording. In front the blouse and skirt fasten at the side under gray bone buttons.

Any checked material in combination with plain will work up admirably after these models. Remnants have an excellent opportunity to play the friendly role for which they are noted. In the stores the opportunities of buying short lengths at little prices should be seized by practical buyers and fashioned into these stunning combination frocks with a gratifying success.

The Summer Girl's Wardrobe

TO THE summer girl, of course, quite the most essential thing in life is a brand-new summer wardrobe. Remaking last year's garments is much like attempting to rehabilitate last year's love affairs: they are just a wee bit worn and are lacking in that quality of "difference" which nowadays is as necessary to the world of fashion as the divorce court is to marriage.

It may take "nine tailors to make a man," but it only takes one new spring suit to make a whole crop of new spring suitors. There was a fascinating model down at Madam Biff's the other day—such a relief after the inevitable dark blue serge, which is as bromidic as dandelions when buttercups and daisies are in bloom; not that dark blue serge is not admirable—there are some splendid frogs, too, played by every hurdy-gurdy in the street. This model was a chiffon broadcloth in an odd shade of dark gray just escaping the taupe, the coat cut after the pattern of a man's dress coat, short in front and swallow-tailed in back, the collar and revers of corded silk in a similar color. Below this an overskirt imitated the exact contour of the lower edge of the coat, and below this again a straight and narrow skirt with a naughty little directoire slash as a provocative bit of accident in crossing gutters. Oh, yes, there is no question about it, the directoire is the mother of invention!—we just had to have that slit. There was a delicious waist to go with this costume, with a foundation of white crepe meteor, gray chiffon, and over this a pointed shadow lace. Expensive? Hum! well, yes, a trifle; but entirely charming; and the spring suit is a sort of "piece de resistance." Besides, all the flimsy summer frocks, like the "entree" of a hotel dinner, may be made up economically of odds and ends.

It really is remarkable what smart summer costumes some women can acquire by picking up remnants here and there—a trifly reduced yard or so of lace, a fancy buckle and a dress length of linen at half price.

Men may come and men may go, but linens go on forever," the reason thereof being that they differentiate from men, inasmuch as they are always smart, always cool, always durable. Two linen skirts are essential to every summer wardrobe. They can be quite plain, buttoning down the left side of the front with Irish crochet buttons. While the colored belts are elaborately exquisite this season, it is suggested, unless a woman be the quintessence of neatness, the linen skirt and separate belt are inclined to sag apart, and the linen belt is more practical to get into in the morning hours when coldhearted head waiters are taking out their watches, relentlessly determined to close doors regardless of breakfastless humanity. Linen skirts undress in the moonlight and have slept forty winks too long in consequence. There should be at least six skirt waists to go with these linen skirts—four quite plain, with wide hand-tucks and briar stitching; two may be made "dressy" by the introduction of embroidery and lace.

The silk ratine is an exquisite material and effective for both morning and afternoon wear; a gown of this in chamois or gray shade of yellow is very lovely with a similar color in ratine lace.

The waist is made in kimono style, the lace running the distance of the shoulder and down into a point upon the sleeve. A vest of the deep cream-colored net fills in the front and is trimmed with tiny pale blue satin buttons; the tunic, long in front, short on the sides and long again in back, is also trimmed with the ratine lace, and it is introduced just above the hem.

Something less elaborate is violet-and-white striped and plain violet-colored gingham combined. This model fastens directly in the front with square white pearl buttons; the waist is of a striped material, save where the shoulder line is met by the plain goods of the sleeve turning back into a cuff trimmed with buttons in a diminutive size. The pointed cuffs and turned-back collar have an overset of sheer lawn, embroidered in a deeper shade of violet. A violet striped tunic has the normal waist line with oriental long-waisted girdle hanging at the side; from under the tunic a circular flounce of the plain material appears and then the striped slip of the foundation.

Draperies are almost an obsession, but being somewhat of an anomaly when destined for the tub, Dame Fashion is working her rage for them upon the evening gown. Some of the materials are positively twisted and tortured into place; draperies start somewhere in the vicinity of the shoulder and writhe and wriggle down the figure apparently devoid of sense, design or system—yet artistic, mind you, like an unkempt beggar maid. Lace and chiffon or lace and tulle are almost exclusively favored for the sleeves and upper portion of decollete waists. Flesh-colored chiffon or tulle creates a delightful illusion of transparency, most becoming to the neck; from the bust line some vivid colored charmeuse drapes down into an odd-shaped tunic and under the tunic the charmeuse is caught up largely at the knee; this falls apart, displaying pleated lace beneath. Hosiery and slippers are invariably the colors of the gown, and a chic touch is often added by flowers in odd contrasting shade.

Of course, some of last year's lovers—that is to say, dresses—may come in handy; then there is the bathing suit, most vitally important.

It is impossible to improve upon black satin for a bathing suit, severely plain, with perhaps the addition of dotted Swiss cuffs and collar, a deep-yoked skirt, the lower portion slashed on both sides, displaying the pleated foulard beneath; silk stockings, of course, and a dainty ruffled fou and cap.

Two hats, one small and dark and chic, one large and picturesque, are sufficient for the summer girl; she's more inclined to let the sun and wind caress her curly locks, while Cupid congenials himself within their shining depth, aiming deadly arrows at the all-unconscious summer youths.

Two pairs of white canvas pumps are also necessary. To wear clumsy boots with light summer gowns is as incongruous as high-heeled slippers for a bathing costume. Then there are all the little accessories so dear to every feminine heart — parasols, veils, lingerie, gloves, etc. They are so dear, it would possibly be a good idea, before dipping into these, to spend a solicitous evening with "papa," fetch his easy slippers and rumple the stray hairs upon his bald spot, convince him you are the most deserving and dutiful of daughters. After this you may delicately whisper that, bewitching as these dainty accessories are, they necessitate a more lavish expenditure than the summer gowns themselves.

Her Fascinating Fan

DOWN through the vistas of the ages fans have played an important role in the lives of dainty femininity.

Cleopatra's fans are as closely associated with her history as her crown. Medieval ladies prized their wrought-metal, jewel-incrusted fans among their dearest possessions.

During the brilliant days of the seventeenth century the lovely beauties of Louis XVI's court flirted and coquetted with their exquisite fans.

"Tis a world-old heritage which descends to the woman of the present, and she may still practice her wiles and little artifices behind the miniature screen of carved ivory and lace.

Many women have among their treasured possessions fans which belonged to belles of the past. They are in perfect condition, the laces are more beautiful because ivory tinted with age.

Artists whose names are well to the fore among those whom time has made famous leave fitting examples of their talent in the fans which bear their signatures. Rural scenes, perfect in perspective and detail, where laughing shepherdesses and their attendant swains recline beneath the trees, are pictured upon sheerest silk.

Watteau fans, where stately ladies attired in gorgeous brocades, dance the minuet with their adoring courtiers, are worthy of the admiration of any connoisseur.

The sticks of these fans are of rare wood handsomely carved and illuminated. Sheerest silken fabrics transparent and fine enough to sift sunbeams are hand-painted with watercolors. Famous paintings are copied, or lovely floral designs are used to decorate these dainty fans.

The sticks are of carved ivory, sandalwood or satinwood inset with jewels or sequins, which sparkle and scintillate with every wave of the fan.

Rare old laces much too valuable for any other use are beautifully mounted upon skeletons of mother-of-pearl and carved ivory to make exquisite fans to add to milady's attractions.

Duchess lace is combined with medallions of rose point. Bits of handwork so fine it appears to be fashioned by fairy fingers are mounted to do service as a fan.

Where the almond-eyed beauties reign in the orient the fans are brilliant in coloring and of odd workmanship. Feather fans of rarest plumage are mounted upon jeweled handles. Gorgeously embroidered fans done in the most brilliant colorings, with sticks of sandalwood, fill the air with their delightfully soothing fragrance at every motion.

Fans should harmonize with the gown worn; for instance, with the dainty frock of net, gauze or chiffon the hand-painted or fan of lace should be carried. With the elaborate gown of velvet, satin or brocade the brilliantly colored fan of feathers or embroidery produces the more artistic effect.

The debutante of the present age affects a fan so tiny it seems fit for the doll's wardrobe.

The evening toilette does not seem complete without the fan suspended from its jeweled chain.

Poet bards immortalized the graces of the fan; it has featured in many gems of literature and is responsible for innumerable romances. It is one accessory which has never gone out of fashion.

This season finds them much sought after, the quaint styles calling forth their use.

NEW NOTES IN HATS AND NECKWEAR

THOSE important accessories, hats and neckwear, are ever circling into the light of interest, and perhaps show more changes, more little touches and reflections of fashion's caprices, than any other department of dress.

In the little turban with the high brim of light straw at one side is shown ribbon which is not in the ubiquitous wired sails extending out at the back. The same color in the straw is matched in the faille ribbon and a bow is made at the sideback. With wire to hold the loops high above the crown.

In the neckwear under this hat is a model of a large collar. It is of sheer linen, with an insertion of Irish lace that divides the collar in two parts, each of which is ornamented with soutache braid, which, by the way, is a new note that should be heeded if you would reflect the latest styles. A piping of dark blue taffeta gives a line of color which ends at the top in loops and long ends with blue bead tassels.

A large dark blue straw hat has a crown of strawberry-pink linen. The band and bow of pink linen are edged with blue velvet ribbon. The shape is a slightly rolled sailor, the bow being tied at the back.

In the double-pointed collar is shown a new idea of a double ruffle applied in a very full line. Hemstitching gives a finish that shows excellently on the sheer linen of which the collar is made.

Of white linen is the large shape that is edged with cerise-colored straw. This gives a tailored finish easily applied to a linen hat made over a wire or buckram frame. The crown is defined by black-and-white striped ribbon tied in a bow at the back.

Sheer linen is used for the full collar which falls in a round line over the shoulders. Black-and-white striped linen is used as a band set in above the hem. Colnepots or groups of French knots border the upper and the lower edge of the band. A cerise taffeta bow is used to give a touch of color at the top. It can be changed to carry out any scheme of color that you wish.

Seal-brown straw is used for the turban with the puffed crown of fabric. It is of pale blue tissue sponge and has no wire support. This makes it soft, flexible and comfortable. A band of brocaded blue and violet ribbon surrounds the crown. At one side on the edge of the brim is a silk rose made of blue and violet taffeta.

Dotted tulle combined with a strip of plain above the hem is pleated to form the collar, which suggests a butterfly. Bands of violet velvet ribbon are used to give the color note which is a decided feature on summer neckwear. A butterfly bow of velvet fastens the front.

With a good-fitting simple linen frock and a hat and neckpiece modeled after these sketches any woman in America should be as well dressed as her French sister. Why not try?

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, May 22.

PRESIDENT and Madame Poincare are delighting the Parisians by not only attending to their official duties, but by continuing their personal friendships and the pleasures of their intellectual lives as well. The predecessors of Monsieur Poincare limited themselves to the gala performances at the Opera, but the president and his charming wife attend all the first performance of interesting plays. They have given private dinners and receptions to Parisian society and the literary world. There was a notable gathering of smart people and the ladies were resplendent in exquisite gowns, created by the leading couturieres.

Paquin was represented by a lovely toilette of pale green pleated mousseline de soie with a pointed train. Over this was worn a tunic of old-rose gauze embroidered with silver. This gown was practically sleeveless, the folds of mousseline forming the upper portion of the bodice being drawn over the shoulders.

The pliase dresses, over which are arranged scarfs, oriental draperies and belt effects, will be very much worn, for they are youthful and have a decidedly Parisian air about them.

Frequently these robes of mousseline de soie or pleated gauze are trimmed with a wide scarf, embroidered in oriental style, which is turned about the hips and tied in a double knot, sometimes in front and again at the side. Jewel effects of rich colorings are often used to clasp the scarfs.

The summer evening wraps are more oriental looking than last year, and are made of silk, chiffon or transparent crepe. Brilliant eastern colors embroidered with huge golden dragons or large flower designs are lined with chiffon. Beautiful wraps of black chiffon are embroidered with roses in pink, crimson and gold, and are lined with two layers of pink chiffon.

The moire costume for street wear is, without a doubt, the Parisienne's favorite mode. Our ancestors would scarcely recognize the moire of today, for instead of the stiff, staid, alone fabric we have the soft, supple quality which lends itself admirably to any manner of draping. Even the tailors have adopted the material as one having many possibilities.

A stunning silver-gray moire costume, designed by Drecoll, has the skirt draped about the figure in a most fascinating manner. The blouse accompanying this is of the Directoire type, with a vest effect of tucked net and maline lace. Over this is worn a smart little eton jacket extending to the wide girdle in front and to the hips at the back. A single button of cut steel fastens the jacket at the bust line.

For afternoon wear the gown of white crepe de chine or satin is much worn, and a fascinating touch of black is always introduced on the bodice or girdle. A particularly chic model has folds of black mousseline de soie outlining the neck line and the crossed-over front of the surplice bodice, while another frock has a girdle of black satin.

At a little shop on the Rue Vignon are sold dainty frocks of cotton crepon, and these are so girlishly simple that they are much admired.

Those of plain white and cream are hand-tucked and trimmed with cluny, Irish crochet or filet lace. Broad sash girdles of bright blue, red, green or yellow taffeta are drawn in soft folds about the waist. A lovely model of pale-rose embroidered crepon, trimmed with lace, has a wide girdle, with sash ends of plaid ribbon in tones of red, blue and yellow against a white background.

The frocks of sheer materials are more lovely than ever, and a quaint model of rose-pink muli has a ruching of the same material adorning the bodice and skirt.

Serge and flowered linen are frequently combined to make smart little frocks for children. The linen is almost as sheer as batiste and comes in a great variety of flower designs. A jumper dress of the serge is worn over an underbodice of the linen. A model of dull green serge has the gulmpe with long sleeves of pink flowered linen. Sheer hand-tucked linen is adorned with eyelet embroidery and lace is used for juvenile coats. These are lined with pale-rose or blue silk.

Smart little coats of white serge have collars and cuffs of colored satin. Ball buttons covered with the same material are used to fasten the coat.

Pale blue batiste is used for a charming frock and the low belt of folded taffeta is caught at the side with a pink rose.

Large flat or bullet buttons of wood are used on many of the cloth tailored suits, and leather buttons appear on motor and steamer coats.

The latest offering of the millinery world is the hat of changeable silk or satin veiled with tulle and trimmed with flowers.

A dark blue satin hat is veiled with blue tulle and trimmed with scarlet cherries and leaves. Another large garden-party hat of changeable pink silk is covered with black chantilly lace and the crown is wreathed with tiny pink velvet roses. Larger hats are more generally worn, and a dainty model of pink straw is faced with corneau-blue moire silk, and two roses, one of yellow and the other deep pink, adorn the sides.

There will never be anything to usurp the popularity of the leghorn hat for midsummer wear, and many of the loveliest models are trimmed with pleated frills of lace and flowers.

Bright-colored silk hose are worn with the white lingerie frock, and the color matches that of the sash.

The fashionable sash of brocaded silk in brilliant coloring adorns many of the smartest gowns. It is drawn well over the hips and the long ends are bordered with bead or silk fringe.

A gradual widening in the silhouette has been noticed during the past month and the greatest width is at the hips, reviving the peg-top effect.

Following the natural order of things, the fall coat promises to be long, for many of the advance models have three-quarter length coats.

The transparent hat was introduced at Longchamps last Sunday, and smart women have decided to adopt the mode. Tulle, net, chiffon, point d'esprit and lace are shirred over foundations of wire and trimmed with lace, maline flowers, ribbon or feathers.

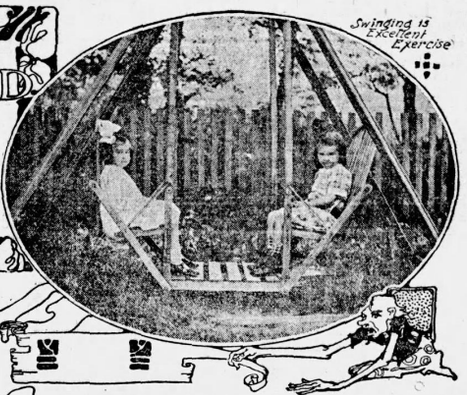
CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By Mrs. HENRY SYMES

Tenpins on the Lawn is Fun



DOG days spell danger for the small child. Then it is, during the humid days and nights of the summer, that child mortality is highest—breathless nights and "sizzling" days strike terror to the heart of every mother worthy of the name. In summer, if ever, she must guard her baby from the ravages of "summer complaint," cholera infantum and diseases that are sudden and sure in their dread results.

The problem, then, of how to keep the child robust and cool in hot weather confronts every mother of children, and it is a serious one.

First of all, let the baby be comfortably attired. A specialist in children's diseases says that "more children die as a direct result of too much clothing than of too little." Therefore, let me impress upon you mothers to clothe your children in as little as the law allows when the thermometer flirts with the hundred mark.

A thin little gauze shirt, diaper and a pair of rompers covering them, with sandals on the feet, is all the clothing any healthy child requires in hot weather. If he has grown old enough to wear muslin drawers, then leave off the shirt and put the little waist with buttons on it next to his skin, the thinnest drawers you can find, and the rompers over them.

Don't even think of making him uncomfortable with a flannel petticoat. It is an old-fashioned notion that a child must wear a petticoat of thick flannel no matter what the weather. If he has any stomach or intestinal trouble, and requires a piece of flannel next his abdomen, it can be supplied by basting a square piece of flannel inside the little shirt, and thus do away with the hot folds of a thick skirt.

Let the children run barefooted whenever it is comfortable for them, and in a place where they will not injure their tender little feet on rough stones or a hard pavement.

A sand pile in a shaded corner is an unending source of delight, and in that lie can dispense with stockings and shoes. Most parents, even dwellers in the crowded parts of the large cities, can afford to have a load or two of sand from the seashore, or a builder's, dumped in their back yard where little Tommy and Tot will spend hours of real fun, making sand pies and letting their imagination carry them through many adventures on the shores of the rolling sea. A lawn swing, placed in the shade of the trees, will be not only a delightful plaything, but a means of gaining excellent exercise.

Two little children, one on each seat of the swing, push on the baseboard to start the swing and keep it going and in that way strengthen the muscles of their legs and back.

By all means provide them with games to play out of doors. Croquet brings into active use muscles of the back, arms and wrists; all do their part toward keeping baby strong, while the spirit of the game keeps them happy, and happiness, you know, is one of the main factors in keeping good health.

Tenpins on the lawn give healthful exercise to all parts of the body. The game requires a steady hand and quick eye, besides being fun for everybody in the game.

Keeping the children out in the fresh air, clothed in a sensible manner and occupied with healthful play are some of the secrets of keeping them robust in summer.

What shall they eat? That is the subject which should be solved by each mother under the advice of the family physician.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chester Adams
most cordially invites her friends to bring to her these Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time

[If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed, stamped envelope should be inclosed.]

THE WEDDING RECEPTION

IF YOU are conversant with the forms of a big reception, a wedding reception will not trouble you in its details, as it resembles the former except in a few minor points. For the benefit of those who wish to refresh their memories I shall give a little talk on the reception after the wedding.

It may be held in the afternoon or the evening after the ceremony, and either the home of the bride or her nearest relative, or a drawing room of a hotel hired for the occasion, can be the scene of the reception. Flowers or green shrubs and palms make a lovely setting for the receiving party. Blossoming in huge bunches placed in all places make a simple, effective decoration. Field flowers, daisies being particularly good just now, make a beautiful floral background. A little daisy party before the wedding day is an excellent way to have your friends meet and help in the gathering of the blossoms.

Huge floral bells are made by florists and hung over the bride and groom in an improvised bower, if the more elaborate decorations are preferred. I prefer the simpler setting, and I think that most of my readers agree with me in this matter.

After the reception the bride and the groom should take their position for receiving congratulations from friends. At the left of the bride the maid of honor and bridesmaids stand in a curved line and receive the wedding guests after the bride and groom have greeted them.

At the door, the host and hostess, who are the father and mother of the bride, or any relatives who have announced the wedding, should stand and be the ones to greet first all the guests. The father and mother of the groom are also in the room at some other point.

The bride should extend her hand and voice her thanks for the good wishes of the guests. She should introduce her husband to any one to whom he is unknown. By no means should the bride detain any guest too long, forgetting the others waiting in the line. The exchange of greetings should be short, courteous and gracious. The bride and groom should not leave their places while there are still guests arriving.

The mother of the bride must also be in the room while there is any possibility of the arrival of guests. The father, however, after remaining for a half hour or so, may leave his wife's side and superintend affairs in other parts of the house, looking after the comfort of his guests and seeing that all things run smoothly.

If the bride enters the dining room, she does so in the beginning of the evening, before the stream of guests arrive. She enters with her husband and cuts the bride's cake, which is later on cut in small pieces and put in wedding-cake boxes and distributed to the ushers.

When it is time for leaving, the bride goes quietly upstairs with one or two of the bridesmaids, and changes her dress for a traveling suit. meets the groom, who has been taken to a dressing room for the same purpose, and when the two are ready they depart.

Confetti can be supplied by the host. Rice, old shoes and any other of the customary missiles that may injure a person are no longer considered good form. There should be placed a ban on all practical jokes by relatives or friends, and an insistence on a refined, dignified observance of wedding customs.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Invited to Call on His Mother

Dear Mrs. Adams.

A man friend has asked me to call on his mother. Would it be proper for me to do so? IN DOUBT.

Yes, if the invitation comes from his mother and the son is acting as her messenger.

Inviting Correspondence

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When a boy goes away from his home town may a girl ask him to write to her while he is absent? HOSTESS.

It would be better to let the boy ask permission to carry on a correspondence with the girl.

Postponing a Dinner Party

Dear Mrs. Adams.

If it is necessary for a hostess to cancel or postpone a dinner, she should send as soon as possible, either by special delivery or messenger, a letter to each guest who has accepted the invitation. The letter should be written either in the first or third person, and should state the reason and express regrets.

The Meaning of a Phrase

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please tell me what "to the manner born" means. ELSIE.

"To the manner born" means that the fashion of one's speech and behavior has grown with one since childhood.

First Calls

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Kindly give me a hint as to when first calls are made. IGNORANCE.

New neighbors and brides are called upon first.

After a country visit, the visitor should call first upon the hostess when the latter returns to town.

The younger of unmarried woman calls first upon the older or married woman.

A woman returning to town before another one would make the first call.

If one woman issues her at home card before another, she should receive the first call.

The Number of Cards

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When a husband and wife have issued invitations to a reception how many cards should a man leave or send? HORACE.

He should leave or send two of his cards.

A Wife's Men Friends

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Before I was married I had quite a number of men friends, of whose success I am deeply interested. My husband objects to my corresponding with them. Do you think he should do this? A BRIDE.

It is always comfortable when husband and wife accept each other's friends jointly. However, if your husband, through jealousy, does not care to have you correspond with other men, it would be better to discontinue if you wish to maintain home happiness. How unhappy would you feel if you knew he was corresponding with other girls? This is usually a good test to make one understand the situation.

Two Callers

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When I am calling on a girl and another man calls, which one should leave first. JACK.

The first comer should leave shortly after the arrival of the second, unless the conversation so includes him that he feels sure of his welcome, when he may remain for a brief time.

On Silver

Dear Mrs. Adams.

A friend has been married two years. I am having a piece of silver engraved for her. Should it bear the initial of her husband's surname or her maiden surname? DOUBTFUL.

It should be marked with the initial of her husband's name.

An Old Acquaintance

Dear Mrs. Adams.

I have a girl friend who is in much better circumstances than I. We lived in the same town for years, but later were separated. She went to college, while I found employment in an office. She is now in my city and I should like very much to see her. Do you think it would be all right for me to call on her? I was always very fond of her and should like to see her again, but I do not want her to think I am trying to force in her social standing. INEXPERIENCED.

I advise you to call on the girl. Her treatment of you during your visit before should be enough to convince you whether she is desirous of renewing the acquaintance.

The Proper Suit

Dear Mrs. Adams.

When a bride is married in a coat suit, what should the bridegroom wear? JENNIE.

The bridegroom should wear a business suit of some dark cloth. The coat may be a cutaway, or a sack cloth. With this should be worn a fold or wing collar, four-in-hand tie, tan or gray gloves and black shoes.

The Ring Bearer

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Please tell me how a ring is presented by a wedding when a ringbearer carries it instead of the best man. ROBE.

At a signal from the best man the little ring-bearer approaches the bridegroom, carrying the ring on a white satin cushion. This he holds out to the bridegroom, who takes the ring from it.

Giving Daughter Away

Dear Mrs. Adams.

My daughter is to be married in a church. Her father is dead and so I wish to be the one to give her away. Kindly tell me how this is done. MOTHER.

Your daughter may come up the aisle on the arm of some male relative, or, if she prefers, she may walk alone. You should occupy one of the front pews, and when the minister asks who gives the bride away, you should rise and bow your acquiescence and then be seated.

The Bridegroom's Dress

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Kindly tell me if it is proper for a bridegroom to wear full dress at a four o'clock wedding. IRENE.

No; the correct dress for the bridegroom at an afternoon wedding consists of a frock coat, white waistcoat, gray or black trousers, light gray necktie and light gloves.

The Bride's Bouquet

Dear Mrs. Adams.

Will you kindly tell me what the bride does with her bouquet? EVELYN.

Just before the bride and bridegroom start on their wedding trip and as they are about to descend the stairs, the bride throws her bouquet to those assembled at the foot of the stairs. It is supposed that the girl who catches it will be the next married.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters sent to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Dandruff Cure

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly publish a recipe for a dandruff cure? J. P.

Alcohol applied several times a week to the scalp will cure dandruff. If you find that this makes the scalp and hair too dry, add six teaspoonfuls of castor oil to one pint of alcohol.

No one should neglect curing dandruff once it has appeared. If allowed to continue the hair will become very thin and baldness may result. It is very necessary to keep the scalp clean while it is thus diseased. Dandruff is infectious, so be very careful that no one uses your comb and brush or wears your hat. These are the things that usually spread the disease.

For Perspiring Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly give me the recipe for a lotion which I may use on my hands, which perspire freely? AGNES.

A very splendid lotion for your trouble is made of:

Boric acid	50 grains
Borax	120 grains
Salicylic acid	120 grains
Glycerin	2 ounces

Rub on the hands four or five times a day. Wash the hands in warm water before applying and carefully shake well. If the glycerin is heated, it will increase the solubility of the preparation.

An Auburn Tint

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I should like to give my hair an auburn tint and will appreciate it very much if you will publish the recipe for a stain which I may use. P. P.

Here is the recipe for a stain which you may apply to your hair:

Henna Hair Stain

Steep one ounce of henna leaves in a pint of boiling water for twenty minutes, let stand until cold, then strain the liquid. Apply to the hair by the aid of a small sponge. The henna will sometimes stain the scalp, but the stain can easily be removed by soap and water.

Olive Oil on the Face

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I have heard that olive oil will cleanse the face. Is this so, and how often should it be used?

The occasional anointing of the face with the oil will thoroughly cleanse the face. It is not necessary to apply it more than once a week. Always remove the oil, wiping the face with a soft cloth. If the skin is not a dry one, the application may be followed by a good washing with soap and water.

A Red Nose

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I am very much annoyed by having a red nose. Please tell me what causes it and what to do to cure it. ANNOYED.

Indigestion is usually to blame for a red nose. Until the cause is removed there can be no improvement in the nose. Local treatment, such as bathing the nose with witch hazel, will help to hasten good results.

Outstanding Ears

Dear Mrs. Symes.

1. Can outstanding ears be made to lie close to the head?

2. How can I develop the fingers between my knuckles? The skin on my knuckles is dry. What will soften it?

3. My finger tips are very wide at the top. I have been massaging them, but see no improvement.

4. How can I make the finger nails grow even with the fingers? Theirs is the fault I had off when a small child. It never grown out, but looks black and ugly. Can anything be done for this?

5. I have a small scar over my eye. The skin appears to be drawn together. Can anything be done to remove it?

I have used your sulphur recipe for dandruff and have found it very satisfactory. The dandruff on my head disappeared and my hair became glossy. A. G. L.

1. The ears may be trained to lie closer to the head by wearing a cap made of tape. Of course, if the person is advanced in years there is not much chance that the ears will benefit by the treatment.

2. The long slender hand is considered the beautiful one, so do not try to make yours fat. You can give your fingers graceful lines and can soften the skin by rubbing olive oil into them every day.

3. To make the ends of your fingers taper you should continue to massage them and, if possible, wear finger clips.

4. By filing the nails when they grow out beyond the fingers you can keep them the length you desire. I do not think you can do anything for the discolored nail.

5. When the true skin is scarred nothing can be done to remove the blemish.

White Spots

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I am visiting in this city and have heard that you have helped many people. Will you kindly advise me?

1. My skin in some places is very white, which makes my face look spotted. How shall I cure it?

2. I am only 16 years old, but my hair is turning gray. I have a great many things to worry me. Do you think this is the cause of the turn in color?

3. My hands are very rough. Please tell me how I may keep them soft. BILLIE L. M.

1. You did not mention the size of the spots on your face, but I presume they are imprisoned freckles. I advise you to treat them in the following way every night: Apply a cloth, wring from hot water and then scrub the face. After wiping the face massage with cold cream and wipe off the softened matter. Now rinse the face with water to which a little witch hazel has been added.

2. Worrying is often responsible for gray hair. You are extremely young to be troubled with serious affairs and should do your best to be more optimistic. Keep your scalp in a healthy condition by massaging it every day and by brushing it thoroughly. Rub kerosene into the scalp every other day.

3. To soften your hands massage them daily, rubbing into the skin olive oil.

To Reduce the Weight

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I am too fleshy for my height. Please tell me what to do to reduce. A READER.

Avoid all starchy and sweetened food, all cereals, vegetables containing sugar or starch, such as peas, beans, corn, potatoes, etc. Have your bread toasted; excellent substitute for butter. Milk, I regret to say, if it be pure and good, is fattening. Skimmed milk may be drunk. Hot water is an excellent substitute for other liquids. Add a little of the juice of limes or lemons to it, if you choose. Limit your sleeping hours to seven at the outside. No naps.

If you cannot walk at least five miles a day, go to one of the institutions where mechanical massage is given. Several of my correspondents report excellent results from this method of getting the vigorous exercise they require. The system, though rather wearisome and not expensive. In reducing flesh one fact to recollect is that fat is carbon. Oxygen destroys or burns out carbon. You must consume the carbon by oxygen you take through your lungs. The more exercise the more oxygen, and consequent destruction of fat by the one healthful method of curing obesity.

The more starch and sugar you eat the more carbon to burn away.

Bust Is Too Large

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly publish a remedy for reducing the bust? AN ANXIOUS GIRL.

Dieting and exercising are the safest measures to take to reduce the bust. Of course these will decrease the weight generally. Many girls become discouraged when they have tried the treatment for two weeks or more, and throw it aside forever. It should be remembered that it took some time for the fat to form, and it will take longer time for it to disappear. Likewise you to eat three scant meals a day, and avoid the rich and starchy foods. Do not partake of food between meals. The green vegetables and fresh fruits should be the main items on your menu.

Rolling exercises will reduce one, and so will rapid walking.

Bloom of Roses

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you kindly give me the recipe for a rouge? M. M.

Following is the recipe you desire:

Bloom of Roses

Rosanilin	77 grains
White wax	1¼ ounces
Spermaceti	30 grains
White petrolatum	200 grains
Alcohol	½ fluid dram

Perfume to suit.

Dissolve the dye in alcohol, add this solution to the wax previously heated and incorporate the whole together, continuing the stirring until the mixture has cooled.

A Dry Scalp

Dear Mrs. Symes.

My scalp is very dry. Will you please tell me what I may do to relieve this condition? MARTHA.

You can improve the condition of your scalp by applying castor oil to it several times a week, or you can use the lotion for which I am giving the recipe:

Lotion for Dry Scalp

Glycerin	1 ounce
Eau de cologne	½ pint
Liquid ammonia	1 dram
Oil of origanum	½ dram
Oil of rosemary	½ dram
Tincture of cantharides	2 ounces

Briskly agitate for ten minutes, then add camphor julep, ½ pint, and again agitate and stir. A few drops of essence of musk or other perfume can be added.

To make camphor julep take:

Camphor	120 grains
Myrrh	120 grains
Sugar	240 grains
Water	8 ounces

Superfluous Hairs

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I should like you to give me a remedy for removing a fine growth of hair on my arms.

If you refer to the fine growth of hair that covers the whole body you would be very foolish to attempt to remove the hairs. But if you mean that there is a growth of superfluous hair on your arms then I advise you to bleach them with a lotion made of one part ammonia to six parts peroxide. If this is applied regularly and for a long time the roots of the hairs will be killed gradually.

Beneath the Eyes

Dear Mrs. Symes.

I have used several creams and tissue builders constantly for the reddening of deep wrinkles under my eyes, but they were of no use.

I write you of a dandruff cure, and it is certainly an excellent one. Please accept my sincerest thanks. MAYMIE.

If the wrinkles are due to a habit of expression, such as frowning, scowling or in any way drawing up the muscles around the eyes, you must break the habit before you can expect a cure. For local treatment I advise you to use the lotion for which here is the recipe:

Milk of White Roses

(A cure for wrinkles)

Rosewater	½ pint
Simple tincture of benzoin	½ ounce
Attar of roses	3 drops

Put the rosewater in a basin. Add the tincture of benzoin, a drop at a time. Add attar of roses and bottle. Apply with cotton at night.

I am very glad that the dandruff cure proved so satisfactory and thank you for your kind words of appreciation.

A Large Face

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Many people have told me I am very pretty, but my mirror tells me my face is too large. Is there any way to make it look smaller?

1. What is a good bleach for the teeth?

2. When can I use to keep my hair in curl on damp days? K. Y. Z.

1. Nothing can be done to make your face smaller, but you should be careful to arrange your hair so that it will not emphasize the fullness of your face. The same care should be taken when you select a hat. Avoid high, tightfitting collars. These always make a stout face look stouter.

2. To bleach the teeth cleanse them several times a week with equal parts of peroxide and water. You should consult a dentist give them a thorough cleansing once every six months.

3. Following is the recipe for a fluid which you may use to keep your hair in curl:

Bruised quinceseeds	1 tablespoon
Hot water	1 pint

Pour the water over the seeds and allow the mixture to stand for several hours. The resultant mucilage may then be thinned with a few drops of essence of violet. Moisten the hair with the fluid before arranging it in curlers.

Freckles and Pimples

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please tell me how to get rid of freckles and pimples? L. M.

Lemon juice applied several times a day will cause the freckles to fade away. If your skin is easily spotted by the sun you should be most particular about it when in the large hat, a sunshade or an application of cold cream and powder before going out.

If your face is full of pimples there is probably trouble with your digestion. Avoid fried, rich and highly seasoned foods for a few days and drink at least an hour in the open air every day and do not neglect the bath. Bathe the pimples with water as hot as you can stand and then after drying the skin apply the cream for which here is the recipe:

Fosatti Cream for Pimples

Extract of violets	10 drops
Sweet almond oil	30 drops
Sulphur precipitate	75 grains
Lanolin	75 grains
Oxide of zinc	2 scruples

Exercises to Reduce

Dear Mrs. Symes.

Will you please give directions for exercises that a woman of 50 can practice to decrease the flesh? I have heard of exercises that can be taken in my room night and morning.

I presume that, like most women, your excessive weight is due to large hips. A large hip measures 42 inches by the tape measure. I am, therefore, giving you directions for exercises that will reduce these particular parts. Along with these it is important that you pay strict attention to your diet. Eat no sweets between meals, and at mealtime avoid foods that contain a great deal of starch and sugar. Of course before you can go through this treatment you must be sure that your system will stand for it.

To Reduce the Hips

1. Bring the knee up to the chest, remaining perfectly erect. Practice in alternate movements.

2. Place hands on hips, shoulders well back. Raise the right knee forward, and give it high, quick side kick. Repeat the foot back and kick. Repeat 10 times with the right foot, then with the left.

3. Take standing position, hands on hips, and rotate the hips, bending the knees and keeping the shoulders immovable. Contract all the muscles used in this exercise and repeat.

Bending exercises also are good.

To Reduce the Abdomen

In standing position contract the muscles over the abdomen, pushing the muscles of the abdomen forward. Relax and repeat, keeping the muscles well contracted throughout the bending. Rest for taking three deep breaths between each exercise.

To Reduce the Waist Measure

Deep breathing will help to reduce the waist measure and enlarge the bust. The stretching exercises you are advised to take deplete. Raise the arms high above the head, then, bending knees straight, try to touch the floor with the fingertips. Stand erect, place hands on hips, bend from the waist as far as possible to the right, then to the left.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

STRAWBERRIES IN SUNDRY STYLES.

Is it really worth while to say anything in praise of the strawberry? Of course, every one quotes the good old English bishop's verdict that doubtless God could have made a better berry than the strawberry but that doubtless God never did, and most of us agree with him.

Once in a while we meet some one who does not care for the exquisite flavor of the berry—like that other English writer of a recent day who lamented that strawberries look and smell so much better than they taste, but of such an one we are rather inclined to suspect, as did Coleridge concerning a man who refused apple dumplings—that he cannot have a pure mind!

Jesting aside, I do not believe there is another small fruit which is so popular as the strawberry or which is more easily digested by the majority of persons. Occasionally we meet some one who declares she is poisoned by strawberries—I myself have met such people, but they are greatly in the minority. When strawberries are ripe and fresh they are usually wholesome as well as delicious, and it is worth while for any housekeeper to study ways in which to present them to her family.

Not that there is any better method than to offer them au naturel, either hulled, to be smothered in sugar and cream, or with their caps on, to be dipped in sugar and eaten with the fingers, as our English cousins serve them. But a variety is desirable even with perfection, and there are many ways in which strawberries can be compounded into delectable desserts. When they are plenty it is wise to preserve them for future use, either in jam or conserve or jelly, for although the peculiarly delicious aroma of the berry is to some extent lost in cooking, even so it is good enough to satisfy the taste when the fresh fruit is out of season.

A word as to washing the strawberry. It is well to cleanse them. But do this carefully. Put the hulled berries into a colander, pour cold, fresh water over them, tossing them lightly about that they may all be rinsed, and then let them drain a few minutes before turning them into a dish. And don't put sugar on them until you serve them; then sweeten them for each eater. If the berries are washed and then sprinkled with sugar they lie in a bath of syrupy liquor which ruins their taste as well as wilts them.

Favorite among strawberry dishes is probably the shortcake. There are two ways of preparing this—one which might be termed the original strawberry shortcake, which came to us from New England, the other the method preferred by those who like better sweet cake for the foundation of their dessert than a biscuit dough. I give both that all may have their choice.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE—I.

Chop a tablespoon of butter into a pint of flour with which you have sifted a teaspoon of baking powder and a half teaspoon of salt. When the shortening is well mixed moisten with enough milk to make a soft dough. Roll or shape with the hands into a round loaf and put to bake in a steady oven. When done split it open, cutting only the edge and then tearing the rest of it apart and put between the two thicknesses a quart of berries which you have mashed and sprinkled thickly with sugar. Leave enough of the berries to heap on the top. Eat this warm with cream and sugar. If you choose you can add to the looks and the deliciousness of the dish by putting whipped cream around the cake and on top of it.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE II.

Cream a cup of sugar and two tablespoons of butter and stir into them three eggs, beaten light, and half a cup of rich milk. Beat well, put in a cup of flour, which has been sifted, with a teaspoon of baking powder, and bake in three layers in jelly cake tins. When cold, take the cakes from the tins and spread haived strawberries between the bottom and second and the second and third layers, reserving enough whole berries to arrange on top. Heap whipped cream over all and pass cream with the cake.

STRAWBERRY FLOAT.

Crush two quarts of ripe strawberries, drain the juice from them, sweeten it to taste, and mix with it a pint of rich cream. Whip light the whites of four eggs with as many tablespoons of powdered sugar, beat the crushed berries into this, adding a little more sugar if the berries are unusually tart. Pour the cream and juice into a glass dish and heap the berries on top of this. If you wish you can line the bottom of the dish with split lady fingers.

STRAWBERRY CHARLOTTE.

Mash a quart of ripe berries and strew them with sugar, let them stand for ten minutes and then put through a vegetable press. Whip the whites of four eggs to a stiff froth and then beat in by degrees the berries you pressed through the sieve. Cut sponge cake into thin slices, line a glass dish with this, heap the whipped berries on top of it, sprinkle with sugar, and arrange ripe berries on it here and there.

STRAWBERRY JELLY.

Soak a package of gelatin in a cup of cold water for an hour, unless you use the instantaneous gelatin, in which case a shorter time is required. Crush two cups of ripe berries and set them aside for a quarter hour with a cup of granulated sugar stirred into them. Dissolve the gelatin in a pint of boiling water, add the sugar and mashed berries, and strain through a fine sieve or a coarse cloth. Set aside to get cold. When this stage is reached, whip the whites of five eggs to a stiff froth and beat the partially formed jelly into it, a little at a time. Turn into a mold, let it stand on the ice until thoroughly chilled, and serve with whipped cream.

STRAWBERRY TRIFLE.

Line the bottom of glass dish with slices of sponge cake or with split lady fingers. Moisten with a little strawberry juice, mixed with as much cream. Cover the layer of cake with one of berries which have been crushed lightly with the back of a spoon, not mashed to a pulp. Over these place another layer of cake and another of the berries. Continue until the dish is about three-quarters full, then pour over all a custard, made by cooking together the yolks of three eggs, two tablespoons of sugar, and a pint of milk. This should be ice cold before it is poured over the berries: it is better to make it early in the morning or even the day before. Whip the whites left from the custard to a stiff froth with a little powdered sugar, heap this over the dish after the custard has been poured in, decorate, if you wish, with a few whole berries, and serve. Should you prefer a simpler dish omit the custard and cover the cake and fruit with whipped cream.

"Put the hulled berries into a colander."

STRAWBERRY TARTS.

Line patty pans with a good puff paste and bake. Prepare a good boiled custard of the yolks of three eggs, two tablespoons of sugar, and a pint of milk; cook together until smooth and thick, and when cold pour into the pastry shells. Lay in enough ripe berries to fill the shapes—there should be only, enough custard to make them about half full, whip the whites of the eggs stiff with a little powdered sugar, heap on sugar, cover with a top crust, and bake. When done lift the upper crust and pour in a cream made by putting the beaten whites of two eggs with a cup of cream, a tablespoon of sugar, half teaspoon of cornstarch, cooking all together in a double boiler until thick. Replace the crust, sprinkle powdered sugar over the top, and serve.

STRAWBERRIES IN AMBUSH.

Arrange hulled strawberries in little straight sided nappies, sprinkle the berries with powdered sugar, and pour over them a couple of teaspoons of sherry to each nappy. Heap them with whipped cream just before they go to table and have them cold. It is well to put them on the ice for an hour or two before serving.

STRAWBERRY FLUMMERY.

Soak a small cup of pearl tapioca over night in two cups of cold water, then put it over the fire with two cups of boiling water and stir until clear. Add a half cup of granulated sugar and set aside until cool, then stir in a quart of berries, hulled, put the dish on the ice, and leave it there until cold. Eat with cream and sugar.

STRAWBERRY SOUFFLE.

Beat to a stiff froth the whites of five eggs, fold in lightly the pulp of a quart of strawberries, which you have crushed, and sweeten liberally. Put into a bake dish, set in a moderate oven for twenty minutes, and serve at once with cold whipped cream as sauce. If the soufflé is allowed to stand it will become heavy.

STRAWBERRY SAUCE, I.

Cream together a tablespoon of butter and a heaping cup of powdered sugar, add the white of one egg beaten to a stiff froth, and a cup of ripe berries, mashed to a thoroughly soft pulp. Serve cold.

STRAWBERRY SAUCE, II.

Whip a half pint of cream light and add a half pint of crushed strawberries, well sweetened. Beat all well together. Either one of these sauces makes a delicious dish of a plain cornstarch pudding, served cold, or of a plain blanc mange.

STRAWBERRIES PRESERVED WHOLE.

Cap the berries, saving all the juice from them, and weigh the fruit. To each pound of it allow a pound of granulated sugar. Cook sugar and juice together in the preserving kettle until the sugar is dissolved, then lay in the berries carefully. Cook quietly at a gentle simmer for seven minutes, then transfer to shallow stoneware dishes and set in the hot sun. Cover each dish with a pane of glass or with netting and put the dishes in the sun every day until the strup is thick. Turn into preserve jars and keep in a dark, dry, cool closet.

STRAWBERRY JAM.

To six pounds of hulled berries allow four and a half pounds of sugar. Crush the berries with the back of a wooden spoon and put pulp and juice over the fire in a preserving kettle, bring to a boil, and after this cook for half an hour, stirring often. Add the sugar at the end of the half hour, cook twenty minutes more, and put boiling hot into jars. Should there be more juice than you wish dip out part of it and convert it into jelly.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

"BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a shooting in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them. Marion Harland.

"I AM over 70 years old, and in consequence of a nervous condition I am unable to stand or walk alone and have been incapable of earning a cent for over six years. I have no income and no money. Day after day I sit in the house or on the steps and life is very monotonous. A wheeled chair would afford me much relief. I see that a friend has offered one and I presume there will be many applications for it. I fear I may be too late. I will try to raise the express charges if I am so lucky as to obtain the chair. GEORGIA R. M."

It hurts me to say that the chair has already been given away. If there is one time of the year when it is irksome and depressing to be confined to the house or to the steps, it is in the spring and early summer, when the miracle of nature has been wrought and the beauty of a freshly clothed earth is before us. For a man who has presumably led an active life to be held in the grip of a nervous disease when he is 70 years old must be unspeakably dreary. Has not some one else a wheel chair for this sufferer? His home is in Chicago, one of the centers for beautiful beneficence to the unhappy and afflicted. Will not some one of the many who are on the lookout for ways to be of service try to find a chair for the correspondent? If the thought of what it would be to one of us to be thus bound and hampered could only be brought home keenly, I know the effort to relieve this our brother would be prompt and effectual.

Would Be Grateful for Music.

"I have noticed an offer of music. As I cannot afford to buy music myself, I should be grateful for it. P. P."

Another request that comes too late. This, too, I hope may be answered by some other Cornerite who has music to give away. I hold P. P.'s address.

Home for a Woman.

"We would like to give a good home to some motherly, good woman over 60 years old. I am alone at night and want her for company. There are three of us in the family, one a girl of 15. I don't care how crippled the woman is if she is able to wait on herself. Of course we would exchange references. G. H."

After asking for gifts it does me good to print an offer such as this, and with all my heart I hope the right woman may see it. I can imagine just the sort of "motherly good woman" who has been left alone and longs for family life. She need not necessarily be a married woman or a widow. I have known many single women who had motherliness enough to have supplied half a dozen matrons. When the woman to whom the position appeals sees it I hope she will write me promptly. The home offered her is in Kansas City, and it would be well if she could go to it from somewhere not too far off. The references can be exchanged after the address has been given.

Recipe for Angel Food Cake.

"Will you please accept a good recipe for angel food sake from a new member? It is fine. I don't understand just how to send things to your department, but I trust this may reach you. "MRS. M. H."

"Whites of six eggs, beaten stiff; three-quarters of a cup of sugar, sifted twice. Stir into the eggs slowly, adding a small quantity at a time. Half cup flour, with a half teaspoon cream of tartar sifted with it six times. Add a little at a time to eggs and sugar. Flavor with a few drops of vanilla, and bake in an ungreased pan. "MRS. M. H."

We are happy to accept both the new member and the recipe. To send things to the department, just address the Marion Harland Corner in the care of the paper in which it appears. I shall hope to hear from you again soon.

Recipe for Potato Cake.

"I hope you will like the following recipe for potato cake:

"One and a half cups sugar, two-thirds cup butter, one cup mashed potato, used while warm. One-third cup grated chocolate, one cup walnuts, chopped, one and a half cups flour, one teaspoon each cloves, cinnamon, and vanilla, three eggs, one and a half teaspoons baking powder. Bake in layers and use any kind of filling you wish.

"A while ago some one gave a recipe for pineapple pie. Can you tell me in what number it appeared? LOS ANGELITES."

I am sorry that I cannot give you the time when the recipe came out. I thank you for your potato cake, which is new to me.

Making Pumpkin Pie Lost Art.

"I would like to speak my mind on recipes for pumpkin pies that appear every fall not only in your columns but in all the periodicals. Every one of them begins: 'Stew the pumpkin until it is soft.' After that they seem to think it is ready to use. Some say 'pour off the water.' I want to say that people who have only eaten pumpkin pie prepared in this way have never eaten a good pumpkin pie. That is pretty broad, but it is true. Pumpkin should be cooked down dry. To shorten the task I do pour the water off, but only in a suitable vessel for boiling down. When it is thick or strupy I pour it back into the pumpkin and cook on the back of the stove until stiff. I set it off the stove when the fire is needed for other things, putting it back again, heating it carefully, often in the oven, so as not to scorch it, but cooking until it is a rich mahogany color. Then you have something that is worth making into pie. My people were Quakers of Ohio, from the old western reserve, and they knew how to make pumpkin pie. It is almost a lost art nowadays.

"A help that will be appreciated by those who like cider apple butter and have no cider is the following: Take small and specked apples that are sold cheap and cut them up without peeling them; cover with water and cook as you would for jelly; strain and boil three or four minutes with care; use half as much sugar as if making without cider, and it will prove to be good eating. I know that neither of these recipes is really in season now, but the readers can save them until wanted.

"WESTFIELD."

I wish they were in season! I don't feel as if I could be fully satisfied until I have eaten a pie made of pumpkin cooked to a "rich mahogany color." If the pies I have eaten and found delicious have been so pleasing, what must the pie made by the above directions be? Have any of our other Cornerites prepared it in this way?

Wages of the Child.

"The question which was asked by you, 'To whom belong the wages of the child?' can be looked at from various points of view. The letter of 'Young Man' shows him to be what I call a selfish snob. But there is more to the question than the parents' right or the child's duty. A young wage earner needs to know how to spend money as well as to make it, and this cannot be done if every cent is turned over to the parents, nor if all the money earned is spent on the earner. The case where the child is saving for some special purpose, such as extra schooling, perhaps does not belong to the discussion. My belief is, as soon as the child enters the ranks of the wage earners a sum of money should be paid every week for board, whether the parents need it or not. Further to learn the value of the money, the child should be taught to buy his own clothes, and allowed something for spending money. Not to allow the child who has earned the money something for spending is a gross wrong. To my mind, beyond the board question, it is hard to make a rule. On the other hand, it is hard on children who have to make their own way to contribute much of their substance to their parents. In my own case I handed over a good portion of my salary to my parents for years, denying myself to make them comfortable, and when they were gone and there was enough left to have reimbursed me, everything was given to the sons and not one cent to me. M. A. E."

You undoubtedly have an excellent idea with regard to the children learning how to spend their money, as they could not if it were all bestowed upon the parents. The question, after all, is one largely settled by circumstances, but there can be but one opinion as to the injustice of giving your parents' money to your brothers. To me it seems as if the law could have been invoked to the extent of obliging the children to have divided the money equally among them.

Offers Free Music Lessons.

"I noticed your appeal for musical instruction for a small boy and offer my services. I am a piano teacher and pay special attention to beginners. If the boy wanted to do something in return he could help care for the lawn, and if he cares to call and see me and make arrangements, I shall be glad. H. B."

Here is a kindly and generous offer which cannot be utilized because H. B. omits to give the signature appended to the boy's application for lessons! With the hundreds of letters that come to the department and are printed every week, it is impossible to identify requests unless these are "tagged," so to speak, by the signature which appears with them in the paper. I think the offer of H. B., whose home is in Los Angeles, in the hope that the would-be musician may see it and write to me for her address—which I hold.

Children Want a Wagon.

"I am a widow with four children. We are poor and the children have to go to the county agent for some of our supplies. It is hard to carry them, and I would be thankful to any one who would give a wagon to the children so they could draw the things home. I would be glad to call for it any night. MRS. S."

This appeal comes from Chicago. Can any one out of the castoff tops of the household supply the need of this family? Hardly a small boy but has sooner or later had a stout little wagon that he has outgrown, while it was still in fair condition. Such a carrier as this would answer as well as a new wagon. I hope it may be found before long.

Caramel Pie.

"Your Corner has been a great benefit to me and I am happy to send you not only a recipe for caramel pie, which one of your correspondents wishes, but also a quickly made filling for pies, which I found out for myself. To make it soak four ounces of currants or of raisins cut small in sirup. I used grape sirup. Mix the white of an egg with two ounces of icing sugar and add the fruit. My little girl likes the paste that is left over rolled out thin, sprinkled with cinnamon and sugar, and made into small turnovers. Baking is fascinating work and the more of it one does the more one appreciates the suggestions of your readers.

"CARAMEL PIE.—One quart sweet milk, five eggs, five ounces of sugar, one cupful of damson preserves. Beat the yolks of five eggs and the whites of two until very light, mix in sugar and milk and stir well; then put in damsons. Roll pie crust out thin and line the pie dish, put in the filling and bake. When nearly done put over the top a meringue made of the whites of the three eggs and three tablespoons sugar and let it brown. The quantity I have given will make two pies.

"R. L. G., Ontario."

Other recipes for caramel pie have been sent me, but none like this, and I am glad to make room for it, as well as for the appreciative remarks in connection with the help given this correspondent by other Cornerites. It strikes me that she has qualified pretty well as one of the helpers now.

Ten Years an Invalid.

"I have been almost a shut-in for over ten years and now I am going to get well I can hardly realize it, but the doctor assures me I shall be all right again. I have enjoyed your page so much and have watched for it so long I feel that I belong. May I send some southern recipes? I have had great success in cooking them and they all are easy. They are great favorites in Florida and I have never seen them elsewhere. MRS. F. W. L."

Of course you belong! We welcome you and congratulate you on your return to health and we welcome the recipes and congratulate ourselves on getting them! They shall appear before long in another section of the paper and will help the constituency to introduce a little more variety into their bills of fare. Thank you for them and for your letter.

Offer to Cornerites.

"I have been an interested reader of the Corner for a long time and have had many helps from it. I am a young housekeeper, only 21 years old, with two babies. Now, I wish to make an offer to the other Cornerites. I have some sheet music, some good religious books, some new pieces of gingham, and percale for patchwork, or will crochet babies' sacks or bootees, or knit a shawl in exchange for a willow plume. My heart's desire has been for one for a long time. I would be glad to get an old one which I could fix up for myself. Is there any one who would like such an exchange with me? "MRS. M. R. SEYMOUR."

This is a fair offer. I am quite sure I would think I was giving the full value of a willow plume and something over if I gave even part of the goods Mrs. M. R. is willing to send in place of the plume she yearns for. I hope her desire may be granted.

Fruit Cake Without Eggs.

"I can sympathize with the trials of Mrs. A. D. and beg to offer her an inexpensive recipe for a good fruit cake without eggs. I have tried it many times:

"One cupful brown sugar, one cupful seeded raisins, one cupful water, one cupful butter, one scant teaspoonful salt, one teaspoonful cinnamon, cloves, allspice, half teaspoonful nutmeg, one teaspoonful soda. Put all together and let boil one minute; set aside to cool. When lukewarm add two cupfuls sifted flour. Bake in a moderate oven forty-five minutes. I use a caramel icing. Mrs. C. F. D."

I hope this recipe will meet Mrs. A. D.'s eyes and her wishes as well.

DRAPED TAILORED SKIRTS and CONTRASTING COATS

BY MARY BUEL

Costume of medium shade of green velour de laine, the material being unusually soft and supple. The skirt is draped to form a sort of pannier, with rows of cording at the top, the cording making little puffs. The lower part of the skirt is also draped by being drawn around from the left to the right side, where it is caught up under the pannier and fastened with heavy ornaments in green and a dull shade of red. The coat has a basque back and front and there is a row of puffing formed of cords, which makes a sort of belt. The garment opens a trifle in front and shows a bodice of green chiffon veiling red silk. The collar and cuffs are also of red silk and there is fluted tulle ruching that falls from below the sleeves. Model from Canet.

Gown of printed mousseline de soie, veiling the thinnest of liberty satin. The upper skirt is very much draped, and in front this and the lower one also are opened sufficiently to show the top of the foot and the ankle. The background of the material is yellow, the design being elaborate and in variety of bright shades. The bodice is of maroon tulle, veiling a little of the printed fabric and white chiffon. The chiffon appears at the top of the corsage and in the basque at the back and sides. The tulle is put on with a great deal of fullness and the wide plaitings which edge the basque are also very full. These last are buttonholed in yellow and there is a yellow cord which outlines the shape twice about the basque. The sleeves are simply draped, one edge being buttonholed, and in front there is a touch of cream lace. A novel note in the gown is a made ornament of gold beads and pearls. This falls in the back like a small square collar, passes over the shoulders, is caught in at the waist line and then hangs in two long ends each ornamented with fringe and crystal rings. The belt of the gown is cording made of the tulle, two rows of this being seen. Model from Rondeau.

Gown of white corded silk made with a skirt that is draped at the right side of the back but slightly. The bodice is of geranium red silk entirely veiled in the thinnest of black Chantilly lace. This is put on perfectly smooth and the edge forms the basque which falls over the skirt below the waist. The collar and cuffs are of the silk, these being unveiled, but the latter are finished with a tiny plaiting of lace put on at the top. The belt is of the silk corded with a made ornament to fasten in front. Model from Premet.

PARIS. — [Special Correspondence.] — With bright sunshine and a fairly balmy atmosphere all the world and his wife are out of doors, and the latter is radiant in all that is newest and best in this season's offerings. In the morning smart people promenade in the Bois, the women wearing late models in tailored gowns, brightened with the inevitable buttonhole bouquet; and in the afternoon these smart women go to the races at Auteuil, reinforced by hundreds of others, who perhaps are not so smart but who are certainly good to look at. New costumes are as plentiful as the proverbial blackberries in summer, and as for the latest thing in hats after the first dozen are duly observed and admired they become an old story and quite fail to attract attention.

The spring race meet at Auteuil is one of the greatest fashion displays of the year, and the pelouse in front of the president's box and the grandstand might be compared to a theater where a fashion comedy is being played. The waits between the races are long and there is ample time for seeing and being seen, and those who look on have the same privilege that is accorded them at the play, that of criticising or praising.

Draped Tailored Skirt a Success.

The dominant note that was struck at the races was the draped tailored skirt and the wearing of contrasting coats and skirts. It has been a mooted question for some time past as to whether or not the tailored skirt that was more or less elaborately draped would be a success, for it has been feared that it would detract from the long slim silhouette that has become familiar and has achieved such popularity. But the Parisian couturier is nothing if not resourceful, and so he has managed to make the cloth skirts that are draped, plaited, and gathered just as close to the figure and with just as graceful lines as were the plain, clinging frocks of a season past. To say how these are fashioned is beyond the power of even the most expert writer on feminine foibles, for every bit of the drapery is contrived by the cut of the material, and so varied is this that it is almost safe to say that there are scarcely two alike.

A favorite model shows the skirt plaited four times into the waist band in front, these plaits falling loose in front, but with the material taken up sharply at the sides and with the same four plaits in the back. The wonderful part is that the skirt is straight about the lower edge, it being apparently a perfectly even piece of material, which, of course, it is not. The side drapery stands out just at the knees, but otherwise the skirt is as narrow as possible.

Another model has the material gathered into a seam that extends down the center of the front the gathering being just the same as one used to see in long, close fitting sleeves, both sides showing an equal amount of fullness. This is also a puzzle skirt, for why the material—for the model seen was in heavy blue serge—does not bag in the back or at the sides is something that one must figure out, if they can. It is the tightest of all the draped skirts, and also it has the appearance of being one of the most draped, and so the why and wherefore are what make the puzzle.

Smart Suit in Contrasting Shades.

In contrasting coats and skirts I have noticed many at the race meetings, and most of them from some noted establishment. One, for instance, from Drécoll was of sulphur colored serge, the skirt being draped on both sides and rather high. The coat was short, almost like a bolero in front, but with a lengthened back and so loose as to be nearly without fit. This was in an inch square check, green and sulphur, the former color being very bright. There was a small black satin collar in the back and small revers, these last being of plain green velour de laine. From beneath the coat in front could be seen a black satin girdle, and at the side of this hung a little tab of embroidery worked in green, black, and orange colored wooden beads. It was one of the smartest frocks worn.

Another noticeable model was in black satin—or rather the skirt was of that—and this showed the center draping that has already been mentioned. The coat was of white velour de laine, which showed also a broché design. It was of Russian blouse shape, the basque part being nearly to the knees and rounded away a trifle in front. On either side of the upper part there were several rows of heavy cording, which extended from the waist to the shoulders, and the same style of cording was seen on the outside of the sleeves from shoulder to wrist. The coat was provided with small revers and a short square collar, these being of velour de laine piped in black satin. Instead of the usual belt to match the skirt, this costume showed a folded girdle of emerald green satin, upon which were placed odd shaped motifs in black, one of these forming the fastening at the side, and from it dangled a tassel shaped ornament of green and black beads. A green hat, faced in black and trimmed with a black aigrette, was worn with the costume, which was as conspicuous as any at Auteuil.

Black and White Checks in Favor.

In addition to these more or less elaborate costumes which I saw at Auteuil there were many that were simple to a degree, for a lot of women favor only the plainest toilets when attending the races. That black and white checks are again to be the mode was shown by the number of skirts of cheviot, of velour de laine, and other soft materials, in both small and large checks. The draping of these was less intricate than of many others, most of them being caught up slightly at the sides and hanging straight back and front. Almost without exception the coats worn with these were in black, plain little cut away affairs with collar, revers, and hip pockets all of the material, which was generally of diagonal serge or a fine quality of velour de laine. Plain as they are, these costumes have much chic, for they are always worn with an elaborate effect of jabot, such as plaitings of lace, ruffles of tulle, and sometimes the two combined.

A lot of afternoon and evening gowns, and sometimes a tailored suit, show an odd arrangement of the waist line and one that is only to be found on the models made after the general openings. In front the belt is at the normal or even the short waist line, but in the back it curves downward three or four inches, bringing it way below what is natural. This fashion has brought into use any number of fantastic and remarkable girdles, some of satin, some of cords, and some of metal and stones. Those of satin are the most becoming and are more in vogue than the others, and in addition to black, which is always in good taste, there are many ceintures of the brightest shades of red, green, and purple, these being worn with black, white, or neutral tinted frocks. The majority fasten in front, which gives the opportunity for all sorts of trimming and decoration. One or two ends fall from these folded or twisted belts, and these are finished with deep fringe, or they are embroidered and adorned with motifs.

Old Basque Effects Coming In.

Besides these lengthened belts there is a tendency all up and down dressmakers' row to introduce the old fashioned basque effects, particularly in frocks made of soft fabrics and trimmed with lace. Two of this week's photographs show this style of drapery, if it can be called that, and there are many other models which show regular basques, some being even all around, others very short in front, or with nothing below the belt, but with basques in the back that are rounded and have some fullness. The prettiest models, however, are those which are combined with lace or do not in any way detract from the curving lines of the waist and hips. This fashion will be awfully attractive for summer toilets and will give opportunity for utilising bits of old lace or portions of lace shawls, if one is fortunate enough to possess such.

While on the subject of figures, hips, etc., it may be mentioned that all the mannequins who are showing models in such establishments as Poiret, Mongé, Zimmerman, and half a dozen others are corsetless, or, if there is anything worn, it is simply a ceinture, just sufficient to keep the girdle of the gown in place. To be fashionable, one must be supple, and that is the effect aimed at by all of the dressmakers, some, of course, much more than others.

Jabots Assuming Large Dimensions.

With the discarding of furs, long out of door garments and enveloping wraps all sorts of neckwear have come into prominence, for there is nothing that dresses up a tailored suit and gives it such an air of smartness as does the jabot and collar for the throat. This season the former have taken on such dimensions that they frequently cover the entire front of the coat and are really beautiful in their fineness and make. When large as these are they are always made of lace, preferably real; but if not, of some of the novelty lace that is so soft and effective. Instead of being mounted onto chiffon or batiste, as was formerly the case, these lace jabots are now being made up with tulle or the finest mohair net. The prettiest are made of ten inch lace, two rows of this being mounted onto a half yard length of net. This is knife plaited and then pulled out, and it is either attached under a high neck band, also of net, or is simply turned under at the throat and caught with an oblong pin. To be pretty, the jabot must be unusually full, so that in falling over the coat it has a very ample appearance, some of the models being fully a yard across their lower edge.

Next to lace, tulle is the most popular of anything for neckwear, and there are some darling little jabots of this being shown that are the daintiest things imaginable. They consist of tiny ruffles, put on one above the other, on a foundation that is also tulle, sometimes eight or ten ruffles appearing on a jabot. Instead of being plaited these ruffles are fluted, that being the newest mode of treatment. The fluting is a very old fashion revived, and it is extremely pretty, for it has a crispness that plaiting does not possess.

Tulle in All Shades Extensively Used.

A word must be said about the enormous use of tulle—black, white, and of all colors. Besides being employed in every manner possible for neckwear it is the most fashionable trimming of any for hats, and for this purpose is used in plaitings that stand, pufflings that are arranged on the brims, folds to edge these, ruchings that encircle the crowns, huge bows, and tiny rosettes; there are tulle crowns with straw brims, or tulle brims with straw or satin crowns, and no matter how or in what manner it may be arranged it is considered smart.

Gowns are trimmed in tulle, and petticoats; all of these are among the novelties. Linen handkerchiefs are bordered with tulle, and the tops of gloves have it inserted into them in narrow bands. Tulle rosettes are the smartest of any, for slippers and sashes with long ends are worn with more than half of the evening frocks shown. Every jewelry shop in the Rue de la Paix is making a display of small tulle bows. These invariably are black, into which is set some sort of stunning ornament. They are intended to be worn at the throat or to be fastened to the corsage of a low gown, and they are among the most decorative of any of the ornaments shown. At the theaters half the women present are wearing enormous tulle bows in the hair, these generally being of some brilliant color, either to match the costume or as a contrast to it. Of all the different fabrics in use this season, tulle is far and away the most popular, and if there is any way in which it can be still more utilized it is safe to say that this will be done.

The Ideal Woman Is Discribed By Chancellor David Barrow In His Address at Commencement Exercises at Brenau College

The Charming Woman, and the Gifted and Influential Wife and Mother, He Said, Must Have Steadfastness of Purpose, Tact, Modest Reserve, and a High Spirited Interest in the Things That Must Be Done---"Home," He Said, "Is the Most Important Human Institution, and the Making of It Lies in the Hands of Women"

This Year's Commencement Was the Most Brilliant in the History of Brenau College--The Distinctive feature of the Exercises Was the Decennial Reunion of the Class of 1903--This Year's Graduates Were the First to Receive Diplomas Under an Advanced Curriculum, Which Makes the Course of Study at Brenau Equal to That of the Leading Colleges for Women

BY MARY CARTER WINTER

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 31.—When the big Southern train thundered into Gainesville Tuesday afternoon, it was assailed by an excited, chattering throng of college girls, all eager to secure a seat for their journey homeward. Some were laden with graduation bouquets, and in their arms they bore brilliant red-bound volumes, "The Sweet Girl Graduate, Her Own Book," or the soft suede-covered college annuals for the year. Sorority and fraternity pins made sparkling array on chic tailored suits or silken shirtwaists; and all in all there was the unmistakable atmosphere of commencement in a college town.

"A-h-ha-ah," exclaimed a Sherlock Holmes of a traveller in a confidential aside to the whole train. "This must be a college town."

"Humph!" ejaculated a morose individual who foresaw the loss of his seat, "it must be," with a sarcastic inflection on the "must." "I should judge so. They're Brenau college girls—several hundred of them here during the season. School is just out."

"You don't say so," said the Sherlock Holmes traveler in a "wish-I'd-known-it-sooner tone of voice. With that he arose, pulled down his modish gray coat so that it would fit more snugly, brushed a stray lock of hair in place, surveyed his dip-brimmed straw hat before replacing it at a fetching angle on his head; and forsook the cars for the ground, where he struck particularly attractive pose—as he thought. Not satisfied, however, he switched his weight to the other foot, pulled out a long black cigar, and stuck it between his teeth.

"Now look at me," his whole attitude seemed to say but there was "nothing doing." The girls were too busy saying good-bye and any attendeschen to friends they were leaving behind.

Poor Mr. Man, mere Mr. Man, had to content himself with watching narrow-skirted, charming young collegians ascend the high steps to the train.

As the coaches shook with a preliminary quiver, there were final raptures embraces, promises of undying devotion, and then, as the train pulled slowly out, the air became alive with messages and good-byes.

When the last puff of smoke had vanished on the horizon, friends and teachers who had come to the station to give good wishes to departing girls, returned to the college, where already great quiet and tranquility reigned. Commencement week was over, and after a most brilliant year and a most enjoyable closing, those remaining behind could look back to see just what the year and week had meant to Brenau.

Undoubtedly the girls went away this year with one of the strongest and most helpful graduating messages ever given from the platform of the auditorium.

CHANCELLOR BARROW'S ADDRESS.

Chancellor David C. Barrow, of the University of Georgia, addressed the girls, his talk being, as he phrased it, "a simple talk about simple things which are yet most vital." When he had finished, the girls had adopted him as "Uncle Dave," also putting in a rival claim against the university boys, who know their kindly dignified chancellor by that homely loving title.

The chancellor based his talk on the story of Ruth and Naomi, illustrating by Ruth's character the graces and virtues which should appertain to a young woman's character and which make for success in life.

Presenting an ideal of womanhood bred in the heart of a southern gentleman who at the same time is a scholar and culture, with mind intelligently in touch with transitional and progressive movements of the day, the chancellor sought to awaken in the minds of the young girls a high reverence for home and for the simple, yet vital things of life.

His ideas were those of the deep thinker who sees in the home the foundation of the nation, and who views with alarm and disapproval the modern tendencies drawing women into activities removed from the home. Clubs, suffrage and the tendency to eliminate responsibilities in favor of ease and pleasure were touched by the kindly criticism of the educator, who won his way into the hearts of the audience by his singular lack of bitterness and harshness in connection with the subjects under discussion.

THE IDEAL WOMAN.

According to the chancellor the following qualities make the charming woman and the gifted, influential wife and mother: Steadfastness of purpose, tact, modest reserve, high spirited interest in things that must be done.

"Much rudeness," declared the chancellor, "is paraded under the name of honesty and much stupidity covered by the same name. It is a woman's place to be tactful and gracious."

"Home," said the chancellor, "is the most important human institution, and nothing should be allowed to interfere with it. It should be protected. Government should reign within it. It should be a religious unit. It should be beautiful, hygienic, but above all things it should be spiritually restful, and permanent and proper ideals should make its influence helpful and uplifting."

Chancellor Barrow regretted the dominating influences of modern club-life, including both men and women in his appeal that home interests shall not be sacrificed in the pursuit of club interests.

He declared that he believed women competent enough, wise enough and good enough to vote, but that in his opinion the highest problem of society is the founding of the perfect home —a task which men can never accomplish and which lies, with the future of the nations, in the hands of women.

Tumultuous applause at the conclusion of his address showed the chancellor the deep impression he had made, the girls being unsatisfied until he had acknowledged their applause.

BISHOP CANDLER DELIVERS SERMON.

Chancellor Barrow's address was the second notable one of this year's commencement. Bishop Warren A. Candler delivered a strong sermon Sunday on the needs of clinging to the old faith in preference to following new will-of-the wisps of religious creeds.

The commencement exercises began on Friday, the 23d, and continued through Tuesday, the 27th. Friday evening the annual play by the school of oratory was given, Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest," being chosen. Saturday evening the alumnae dinner was the event of interest.

The distinctive feature of the commencement, which is the thirty-fourth, was the decennial reunion of the class of 1903. The members of the class were guests of honor at the alumnae banquet.

DECENNIAL CLASS REUNION.

The active spirit of the reunion, which is the largest and most successful in the history of the college, was Mrs. Gayle Riley, who as a student was Miss Anna McConnell, of Gainesville.

Prominent among the members of the class are Miss Ruth Baker, of Owensboro, Ky., but now professor of ancient languages in Belhaven college, Jackson, Miss.; also Mrs. Oscar Davidson, Athens, Ga.; Miss Bonnie Brock, Jefferson, Ga.; Mrs. H. R. Sherard, Williamston, S. C.; Miss Lucile Canning, Chicasha, Okla.; Mrs. Addison Combs, Barnesville, Ga.; Mrs. J. C. Thomas, Adel, Ga.; Mrs. L. N. McWhorter, Royston, Ga.; Mrs. C. T. Stoney, Jefferson, Ga.; Miss Julia Bell McLeod, Abbeville, Ga.; Mrs. C. R. Flick, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. P. M. Stevens, Ft. Logan, Colo.; Mrs. John Oates, Charlotte, N. C., and Miss Daisy Wilson, of Atlanta, now head of the music department of the Florida School of the Blind at St. Augustine.

Of equal interest with the visit of the class of 1903 was the presence of a large number of the Brenau colony of Atlanta. The organization is composed of forty or fifty Brenau students who now live in Atlanta. A dozen or more of the members of the colony were prominent figures at the alumnae banquet on Saturday night and at a box party given by Miss Florence Overton on the occasion of the annual play.

The members in attendance were, Mrs. Karl W. Brittain, (Annette Tiller), Mrs. Eugene Cox, (Mary Wartman), Miss Sadye Andrews, Miss Mary Lucy Turner, Miss Alma Glenn, Miss Bernice Schuessler, Miss Ednah Mooney, Miss Bessie Smith, Mrs. V. J. Adams, Mrs. Opal Reaves Mearns, Mrs. B. C. Wilkerson, Mrs. William A. McCullough and Mrs. Nichols.

Monday at 1:30 the class of 1903 was entertained at a luncheon, Dr. H. J. Pearce and Dr. T. J. Simmons being hosts.

CLASS DAY EXERCISES.

Monday afternoon the class day exercises took place, the event being one of picturesque beauty as well as college interest.

After the processional, in which the girls bore the ivy chain about the campus walks as they sang college songs, a short program was given from the terrace by the auditorium.

Miss Frances Gay said the salutatory. The class will was read by Miss Lucy Ferguson, Miss Mary Wood responding for the juniors.

The valedictory address by Miss Estelle Nottingham, was of unusual depth and interest.

Other events of interest during commencement were the sacred concert on Sunday afternoon, the grand concert Monday evening, and the art and domestic science exhibits.

The exhibits were especially fine. The art students are learning to interpret the every-day things about them, and are using the landscapes about the college as subjects for painting. Imaginative and illustrative work also contributed largely to the splendid showing made, the paintings illustrating the successive incidents in Red Riding Hood and other well-known fairy stories being especially attractive and interesting.

Brenau, which inaugurated the domestic science work as a part of the regular collegiate courses, has advanced rapidly in the work. Its model cottage and the courses offered are most attractive, and many of the girls are studying the art of housekeeping and the science and economy of cooking. Diplomas were awarded this year in the domestic science work as well as in other departments.

The graduating class was one of the smallest in many years, owing to the act that Brenau recently raised its curriculum, materially increasing the high standing of the college. The change became effective four years ago, and this year's class was the first to graduate under the more difficult requirements.

Signalizing the higher rank of the institution, the two presidents appeared at commencement this year in their university robes and caps. Chancellor Barrow also wore the collegiate gown and cap, which lent added dignity to the graduating exercises.

THE GRADUATING CLASS.

Those receiving diplomas and certificates were:

Flora Mildred Adkins, Nellie Maud Carter, Pauline Inez Castleberry, Gladys Wilson Johns, Estelle Nottingham, Coralye S. R. Richardson, Kate Robertson, Laura McNair Weddell, Bachelor of Arts.

Mary Schroder Hahn, Bachelor of Domestic Science.

Jessie Lorraine Kytle, Elma Martha Matthews, Bessie May Stovall, Licentiate of Instruction.

Kathleen A. Evans, Diploma of Art.

Louise Boyd, Diploma in Violin.

Ella Leone Denton, Sally Weddell Evans, Lucie Ferguson, Blanche Eleanor Loftain, Opal Overpack, Jack Charlton Wood, Diploma in Voice.

Ethel Bird Harreld, Mable Kanouse, Iona Lena Peterman, Diploma in Piano.

The first photograph shows the processional on graduation day, Chancellor David C. Barrow, Dr. H. J. Pierce and Dr. T. J. Simmons, in university robes, leading. Next is a coach full of girls ready for their homeward journey. At the lower left appears Yonah hall, the main entrance to Brenau, and at the right is Lake Lanier and the Country club.

A NOTABLE SHORT STORY BY A FAMOUS WRITER

THE MAN IN POSSESSION

BY RALPH CODINO

DENTON CARR, looking about the room in which he sat, felt himself a criminal. He steadied himself with the reflection that he had not come, another man—less sympathetic—would have been here in his place.

His eyes went to the window and surveyed the garden. He saw a woman, young, graceful, walking across the lawn. She was moving quickly toward the room in which he was.

The window opened to the ground. Miss Senly stepped into the room, holding her skirts against her as though she feared to touch Carr.

His lips set tightly as he noticed this involuntary gesture of disdain.

"I must speak to you," she said. Her tone conveyed the impression that necessity had driven her to it. Carr's silence would have beat pleased her.

"I am at your service," he replied.

"It is as distasteful for me to be here," he said, "as it is for you to have me here. In both cases the reason is lack of means."

"Oh, I know you were sent here as a matter of business. Still——" She hesitated, noting the air of breeding which shinged to this man.

"Even a bailiff may have a heart," he told her.

In the silence that ensued, Carr realized that this woman's beauty was one with the soft coloring of the room in which they stood. It was a beauty of quietness and repose. And the fact that everything about her suggested calm made her present distress a startling thing.

Carr spoke again.

"Since I am here, believe that I desire to efface myself as much as possible."

She regarded him attentively. This man was undeniably a gentleman.

"It is most awkward that you should have come now. If it had been a few days later——"

Realizing the change in her manner Carr said: "Tell me how, being here, I can serve you."

"What is your name?" she queried.

"Carr."

"Not surely, a relation of Mr. Billings Carr?"

"His nephew."

"Then why—"

"We quarreled over a private matter, and I found myself cut off with the proverbial shilling. If you knew him—"

"I have heard of him," she interposed. Understanding was in her voice.

"I had been his secretary and his reputed heir. We disagreed—and there was an end of it. It was necessary to live and I accepted this—"

"But——" She spoke with some hesitation—"there were surely other things to be done, things that would have been more congenial."

"It is difficult to get desirable posts," he said briefly.

He took a step toward her.

"I am here, an unwelcome visitor. But I want you to understand that I realize how you feel about it."

"I will tell you why it is annoying that a crisis should have come just now," she said. "We are expecting a visitor, an aunt of mine. She is a—a most particular kind of person."

"She need not know of my presence," Carr reassured her.

"The mere fact that you have been sent here tells you that we have money troubles—serious ones. My only hope is in the aunt who comes today. She is rich, and in her way good-hearted. But there are some things she would find it hard to forgive."

"And my being here would be one of them?"

"In your present capacity—yes. I had hoped this crisis could have been staved off for a time." Her voice shook. "All the servants have left, except the cook," she ended.

"By Jove, it's hard lines," Carr said.

"And my aunt—Miss Bruce—is not the kind of person who enjoys a picnic." She gave a quick gesture of dismay.

"I have an idea," Carr said. "Instead of effacing myself let me buttle for you. It's perfectly correct to have a butler in the house, whereas a bailiff——" He dismissed this as impossible under the circumstances.

Miss Senly leaned toward him.

"Do you really mean it?"

"Rather. Look here, Miss Senly, I wish you'd understand that I want to make myself useful. I don't want to be a nuisance. When does your visitor arrive?"

"At tea time."

"Then there's plenty of time for me to learn my way about."

Laughter leaped from her eyes to his, and came to her lips as they discussed details.

Even the particular Miss Bruce must have approved the appearance of the man servant who admitted her that afternoon. Tea was carried into the library in an irreproachable manner. Louisa Senly, alert, vivacious, made an excellent hostess. Carr, moving about the tea table, thought her pluck admirable. Mr. Senly's attempts to hide his feelings were not so successful.

At dinner time Miss Bruce became talkative.

She dismissed Europe in a sentence. America she honored with five minutes talk. She returned to England and spoke of house parties.

"Ah, the eccentric. One hears of him." Senly expressed interest.

"Eccentric certainly. Has fads, goes in for spells of temperament. Just now he has been imagining that he hasn't got a heart."

The butler handed Miss Bruce meringue. Louisa, watching him furtively, approved the immobility of his countenance.

"Marriage, for instance," Miss Bruce continued, "he regards merely as an affair of the money market. He tried to thrust his theories down his nephew's throat and didn't succeed. The young man was to have been his heir, I understand. But he was sent off with the usual shilling. It seems this young fellow was all heart. He had the most extraordinary ideas. Old Billings Carr scented a modern Don Quixote in him, tilting at windmills."

"At what particular windmill is he tilting now?" Senley asked.

"Why—it's an extraordinary idea—he's a bailiff."

"Ah! I see." Senly spilt some cream on the tablecloth.

"He had the idea that it was a walk in life that demanded tact, sympathy. Can you wonder that Billings Carr cut such a young man off with a shilling?"

"I think," mused Louisa, "that his idea of sympathy was a beautiful one."

"Umph!" said Miss Bruce. "Well, anyhow, nobody has heard anything of him for months."

"You had not known Billings Carr before?" Senly asked.

"Never met him in my life till last week." Louisa breathed freely.

Miss Bruce's next sentence came into the room like a clap of thunder.

"Why," she asked, "have you got a bailiff in the house?"

Louisa gasped. Speech was beyond her.

"So you," Miss Bruce added, "are the latest windmill at which Denton Carr tilts."

"How . . . what do you . . . I mean how do you know?"

"Old Billings Carr showed me his nephew's photograph."

Forgetting herself for the moment Louisa became suddenly shrewd.

"That," said Miss Bruce, doesn't affect you. Let's have your story."

Louisa told it. The impossible suddenly became possible. She grew eloquent. Sentences became picturesque as she painted the picture of doleful days. She rent the veil which she had hitherto hung about the eyes of this brusque old woman.

"Umph!" said Miss Bruce. Her eyebrows puckered. "Umph!"

The advent of coffee and Carr came in the ensuing pause. Miss Bruce got to her feet abruptly. She beckoned to the astounded butler.

"A word with you," she commanded.

"Do stop tilting at windmills," Miss Bruce said.

"Madam!" exclaimed Carr.

He felt that an ordinary butler would have remained impassive. "Windmills" —he stared at her.

"Stop being a bailiff and go home to your uncle. He's ripe for a reconciliation," Miss Bruce asserted. "He as good as told me so when I met him up north last week. Now don't stand there saying 'Madam' over and over."

Carr threw his head back and laughed. And to his surprise Miss Bruce joined in loudly, heartily.

"Oh, I can see a joke," she gasped. "Billings Carr's long lost nephew as bailiff-butler."

She grew grave again. "Of course this farce must end. As a butler I can tolerate you; as a bailiff—" She frowned alarmingly. "I shall finance this affair, so you can be off, can't you?"

"Well—" he hesitated. "There are certain formalities."

"Then for goodness sake stay as a visitor, not a mountebank." There was a twinkle in her eye that belied the curtness of her tone.

"How did you know who I was?" Carr asked.

"Your uncle showed me your photograph—Don Quixote's photograph, he called it. Oh, yes, he carries it about with him. Go and make friends with him. He's got a heart, though he pretends he hasn't. Now I must go and tell Louisa that I'll see them through their troubles."

Carr, left in the conservatory, was conscious of mixed feelings. As butler he had been a serviceable member of the household. Now he had lost that post the remaining hours of his stay might hold complications.

He moved to the far end of the conservatory and stared gloomily at the flowers. He had learned more of Louisa Senly in a few hours than the rest of his life had taught him of any other woman. The years of his life had so far left him flameless; now he blazed into a passionate moment.

Louisa's voice roused him.

"Please don't stay out here, Mr. Carr."

There was a hint of laughter in her voice. He looked at her and saw something in her eyes that was not laughter. He saw something which gave him courage to say:

"Will you think me presumptuous if I say that I am glad your troubles are over?"

"And will you think me officious if I suggest that you should listen to my aunt's account of Mr. Billings Carr and go and make it up with him. Do go?"

"I will tilt at windmills no longer," he assured her.

"Which means that you will go?"

He answered in the affirmative.

"And meantime," she said, "we want you to consider yourself a guest. We shall never forget the tactful way in which you fulfilled your mission."

She turned a little from him, fingering the leaves of a plant. Over her shoulder she said:

"I am glad you are going to your uncle and will cease windmill-tilting."

He was by her side instantly.

"Yes, I shall go," he told her. "And afterwards—if I may—I will come back and tell you how I've fared."

He looked for a quick gesture of negation. Not seeing it his pulses quickened. He felt the exultation of a man who grasps Hope by the hand. —(Copyright.)

AWFUL, DONCHERKNOW--AMERICANS PUTTING "PEP" INTO CRICKET

If there was one thing that seemed capable of resisting the reforming spirit of western America, it was the ancient game of cricket. But it hasn't. The San Franciscans have tackled cricket and what they have done to this stately pastime of a prehistoric age is enough to send the house of lords into mourning. It all happened at the meeting of the California Cricket association. Norman Logan, the head of a great transportation company, declared that if cricket is to live in this country it has got to get a move on. "Now, really, how could you alter dear old cricket?" exclaimed Bernard Hawks of Canada, who wore a monocle and was late of Marlborough college, one of Britain's most aristocratic schools. But the San Francisco business man went on:

"Yes, cricket has to be made more like baseball. We must cut the time it takes to play a game down about a cuple of hours. We will eliminate the crossing between the 'overs,' batters will be punished for not hitting quickly," and then he proposed a number of technical changes all revolutionary in character tending to liven the game. All his suggested modifications were adopted with enthusiasm, and in less than eighty minutes a greater transformation was wrought in the statutes that govern this sport than has been adopted during the previous 200 years. As a matter of fact it is more than likely that the new ideas introduced into the game by the Californians will be adopted throughout the British empire. In England, in Australia and Canada, even in the slumbering Orient where time is princes play the game, cricket has languished of recent years. It is not the financial success that football still is and cricket used to be. It is possible that a few live Americans have injected zip into an excellent game that was all it needed to save it from death. "But my word, it's a bit nervy, eh, what? What will these bloomin' Americans do next?"

Seven Years in Dark

PARIS, May 31.—Mlle. Clementine Lerat, who is aged sixty-two, has just been "evicted" from her flat at Versailles, where she had spent the last seven years in the dark.

Mlle. Lerat, who is said to possess a considerable fortune, formerly lived with her sister. When her sister died seven years ago Mlle. Lerat, deeply affected, resolved to cut herself off from the world. She drew down the Venetian blinds of the windows of her flat and darkened the rooms completely covering with black paper the spaces through which light passed. In addition she emptied her lamps of oil.

Letters addressed to her she refused to take in, and visitors to the flat were turned away. Only one person was allowed to enter the flat, and that was a woman who twice a month passed food to her through a hole. Every three months this woman received in the same way a check with which she paid the bills.

Why Single Out the Cause of Foreign Missions?

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

IT is a common thing for persons who conceive a sudden interest in some work which needs to be done in our country to say, "The money spent for Foreign Missions were better expended upon this urgent matter". It is equally common to find, upon investigation, that most of them who talk thus have not been very active in the work of religion in our own land.

For example, some see the need of evangelizing and enlightening the Negroes of the South, and they cry out vociferously "Help these heathen in our midst" Work on behalf of the Negroes of the South is very important. It can not be emphasized too strongly. But who has done most of all that has been done for these needy people? Has not the work for them been done, in the main, by the Christian Churches and Christian people who have been most active in the work of Foreign Missions? It is not true that the Negroes of the South are heathen. On the contrary, their conversion to Christianity is one of the greatest pieces of missionary work which has been achieved during the last three centuries. They need much help yet; but it is unjust to them to call them heathen. Moreover, the work now being done for other races in foreign lands does not diminish, by so much as one penny, what is being done for the Negroes.

Again, hysterical reformers frequently cry out, "Why not evangelize the slums of our own cities before carrying the gospel to the Chinese in Shanghai and Pekin?" Well, mission work in our cities is important. But let it be asked, again, who is doing anything in the work of City Missions except the Christian Churches and the Christian people who are exerting themselves also on behalf of Foreign Missions? How much attention do critics of Foreign Missions doing for the salvation of the neglected people in our own cities or for the evangelization of any other part of our country.

There are, however, some things that cost a great deal of money which might be stopped, and the funds which are expended for them devoted to all these good causes, if our people had the mind to do so. Why do not these objectors to Foreign Missions have something to say about these things? Why do they single out Foreign Missions for criticism; but never say a word about the extravagant and hurtful expenditures of our people on needless luxuries and injurious indulgences? For example, it is estimated that the people of the United States expend annually for intoxicating liquors $2,500,000,000. Why not turn some of this worse than wasted money into the uplifting of the Negro population and the evangelization of the slums? Again, the money dedicating liquors has much to do with the degradation of the Negroes and the creation of the slums. Why not antagonize this great evil, instead of proposing a less expediture for Foreign Missions?

Again, it is estimated that the American people expend annually $900,000,000 for chewing gum. Jewelry. Would not a few millions of this outlay be better bestowed, if given to the enlightenment of the heathen and the purification of the slums?

As a matter of fact, our people spend more money for chewing gum than they do for Foreign Missions. It certainly would not be a great hardship to do without chewing gum for one year; but if this indulgence were cut off, there would be a saving of thirteen millions of dollars. And if we added the cost of confectionery, we should save an additional sum of two hundred millions.

Why should Foreign Missions be singled out for condemnation while we expend on these things such stupendous sums? It does seem that it would be better to condemn this needless extravagance rather than to propose that our people should do less Christian work on behalf of heathen nations.

On one occasion, John Wesley was required to give in his taxes, and he enumerated, as the sum total of his income, the amount he spended. He added to his return, "I shall add nothing more to my stock of plate while many want bread." One can understand a declaration of this kind; but Mr. Wesley's Christianity would have been inexplicable if he had continued to buy silver and had confined the use of his money to feed the hungry without diminishing his gifts to the cause of missions.

It is quite possible that the people who decry Foreign Missions, while professing to be zealous for more urgent causes in the home field, are moved less by concern for the welfare of the people in our own land than they are impelled by a secret antagonism to the spirit of the Church in the hands. At any rate, one could give more confidence to their sincerity, if they were accustomed to practice and plead for plain living, and did not so constantly single out for their criticism the cause of Foreign Missions.

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

The truth is, the work of evangelizing the heathen has been neglected too long; and Christendom is menaced today by a heathen world more than it is threatened by any other peril. The nations of the earth have been brought very close together by the modern inventions of transportation and communication; and being brought thus close together, the time is at hand when the world must be all paganized or all Christianized. One type of moral life must prevail around the whole earth. The Christian nations must carry Christianity to the heathen world, or the heathen world will bring its moral standards into Christendom.

What means this agitation in California, and in the other States upon the Pacific coast? It is no idle fear which disturbs the Californians, however mistaken their methods may be accounted. And the Japanese are but the first of the Oriental nations to be feared. The population of Japan is only about fifty millions. The nation is poor, and it could not prosecute another great war successfully at this time. But then on the other side of Japan is the vast Chinese nation. In China is found one-fourth of the population of the world. That nation has startled mankind by throwing off the Manchu yoke and setting up a republican form of government. Some uninformed people imagine the Chinese republic is but a transient thing. There never was a greater mistake. The Chinese people, for centuries, have been accustomed to self-government; and no people, not Christian, are better prepared for republican institutions.

It is a most striking thing that the leaders of China asked the prayers of the Christian world on behalf of their new government only a few weeks ago. What can measure the significance of such a request? What shall be the response of the Christian world to such a cry? This request implies confidence in the christian's God and an appreciation of the power of prayer upon the part of men whom some account as heathen. Their cry for our intercession ought to meet with the most fervent and benevolent response.

It is worse than folly to answer this request of the Chinese with the puerile statement that the needs of our Negroes and our neglected classes are so great that we are unable to do as much for them as we have been doing. Intelligent Chinese men know too much about our wealth, extravagance in luxury and vice to respect for one moment such a pretense.

Our people might as well understand that we are in the midst of world-changing events. The great history of the next few years will be made in the Far East; and whether that history shall be good or bad will be determined by the amount of Christianity among the Chinese people. If that nation acquires the arts and sciences of Christendom without the religion of Christ, the most ruinous consequences will follow both to them and to all other peoples in the world. The Chinese are the most migratory people now on the globe. They are found everywhere. A man making the circuit of the earth will find Chinese tradesmen and laborers in every port he enters and in every great city he visits. Moreover, the Oriental peoples do not ex-patriate themselves when they leave their native land. There is little use of laws prohibiting them from becoming American citizens; they do not wish to be naturalized here. Most of them provide that on death their bodies shall be carried back to the land from which they came. The migratory Chinese, therefore, are living bonds of connection between their own nation and the peoples among whom they take up temporary residence. What is involved in all these facts must be obvious to any thoughtful mind. The Christian world must proceed with all speed to evangelize China in every part. There is no more urgent work in our own land, even if we consult motives of selfishness only.

Let us, therefore, have done with this singling out the cause of Foreign Missions for depreciation and criticism. There are other expenditures we can deprecate as much as we will without saying too much on the subject. We can well afford to chew less gum, eat less candy, wear less jewelry, and drink less liquor; but we can not afford to do less Foreign Mission work. On the contrary we must do a great deal more, and do it very quickly.

Suppose those writers and speakers among us, who decry Foreign Mission under the pretense of helping cause in our own land, begin at once to contribute to these needs of the home-field at least the value of one good cigar daily. If they will do that much for the causes for which they profess so much zeal, all their talk is worth less than the ashes of a cigar.

THE STAG CLUB ABROAD
DANTE OUT-DANTED

PARIS AT NIGHT

By Smith Clayton

THAT fantastic Italian Dante, showed his friend Virgil, in imagination, the nine cycles of hell.

And his book is alleged to be a classic and by reason of that fact it adorns the shelves of the cream de la cream of culture, of society and of religion!

BUT—IF—

But if a man should show a friend through the ninety and nine cycles of heaven as seen in reality in Paris, at night—if he should show this in print—he would not only be in danger of detention, but of a dungeon.

And yet people could learn more of the thousand phases of vice in an hour from the pictures of Paris than they could learn in a lifetime from the inane imaginings, not to say ravings of the super-extravagant and fantastic Italian. Vivid imagery has Dante, but not one scintilla of truth!

DEAMER DANTE

He merely imagines a hell, and arbitrarily pictures the penalties there inflicted. It is simply an insubstantial dream of a hell, perhaps a hell of a dream—but there is nothing true about it.

But the cycles of the Paris heaven are stern, not to say happy realities! They inave the form and life and motions, and are certainly great object lessons to the thinking, philosophic mind.

I say Paris heaven because the actors in their night scenes are the gayest and most joyous people, as a rule, to be found and the word heaven is supposed to express the highest happiness.

THEY ENJOY LIFE!

Individuals are different, you know. Nations are widely dissimilar. Methods of enjoyment vary. You never saw happier-looking, happier-acting people anywhere than in the nether world of Paris.

"Actions speak louder than words."

If they are not happy they ought to take in their sign. They have no conceiving life to the fullest. They eat, drink, laugh, play, sing, dance flight after night the year 'round. Of course, some shadows streak the nocturnal sunshine, but you find shadows darkening the lives of earth's wisest, most virtuous, best. You find the shadows athwart the churches and there are somber notes even in the hallelujah, you find shadows, nay, spots, even on the sun!

YOU CAN BET.

Yes, sir, there is a cancer for every rose, constructed with the same exquisite precision.

They laugh, they sing, they drink, they dance, the long nights through at Paris, and sometimes they get sick and die, or get killed.

Well, don't the good and great do the same thing?

The night houses of Paris have no monopoly of disease and death. They handle the pizen with the same impious, and even suicide which Ingersoll said was sometimes a good thing, strikes down the fairest and best as well as the foulest and worst.

THE SO-CALLED.

I leave it to the so-called wiseacres to decide as to whether Dante's Hell is a better thing than the night houses of Paris.

As for me, give me the laughers, the singers, the dancers every time with their enjoyment while it lasts in preference to the gnnn-clenched, hair-wasted, nadoing misery through life with an icy maw Hell of torture to get me after death.

The mere fact that a crazy poet wrote the "Inferno," or divine comedy, as it is misnamed, is proof that no such place could have existed outside the imaginations of men at any time.

FREE COUNTRY.

If that be unorthodoxy make the most of it. A Paris Heaven, though bad in the Pharisaic view, is better than a hell anywhere. Paris is a free country. Pharisee ought to be willing to admit that.

Life is a two-sided affair at best with a rose on one side and a cancer on the other.

The Parisians of the night houses have their way of getting away as far as possible from the cancer and forgetting the rose. Their idea is to stick to the flower as long as a leaf, nay, a petal, or even a hint of perfume seen left, and, then, well: When all possible pleasure has been squeezed out of the rose of life, then they have their eye on the cancer form of death for anybody who has outlived the ability to enjoy!

GETS ALL!

Then, too, Death is impartial. It neglects neither the wise nor otherwise—but at last, gets all!

There is not an American book which can give you an idea of the underworld of Paris. There is not a guide-book in English which dares to handle it—and no newspaper writer would think for a minute of telling this story. And yet it is time to be seen and heard when it forms the greatest human-interest attraction that can possibly be seen!

THE VERY BEST.

So, you see, the very best story that could be written about Paris is not permissible in English print. It is prohibited. But like all forbiden fruit, it tastes the sweetest, and, oh! if I could only write it as I have seen it wouldn't it be rolled as a sweet, scandalous morsel under a thousand tongues of people who had rather be found dead than reading it, and yet would long to go over and take in the scene!

No—it cannot be told but if ever sixteen feet shown, and is shown every night in the year by the most competent guides in the world. Churches, monuments. fountains, statuary, paintings, art galleries—collections, parks, places—these are wonderful—But the most powerful magnet that ever drew people to Paris are the human interest sights of the under world. Of course, I do not mean all people—but I do mean the majority of them—especially the males. How many?

How many men would go to Paris if there were nothing but the Louvre, the Luxembourg, the Tomb or Napoleon —to see? Not many.

No, sir, there are the risque curtains with serious linings as some author has happily put it, there is the Cabaret of the Dead, Rat, there is not the old Red Mill, but the new Moulin Rouge; there is the Moulin de la Galette with its grand ball, there is Montmontre ablaze after midnight and the dazzling cafes along the Boulevard de Clichy; there is the Lady from the Rue Blanche, the Gutters of Grenelle, the dens under ground about the Halle Centralles and the Tabarin, the The Pigalle, not to forget the Ball Bullier and the Can Can Dancers or High Life! and scores of places excellent in variety and the last ditch—places with a Bohemian night charm to which garish day is a stranger, places costuming as aesthetic as ever graced the Olymphia, women as handsome as ever posed for Cleopatra, singing as sweet as ever thrilled Italy, and positively the finest, daintiest, wickedest dancing in all the world.

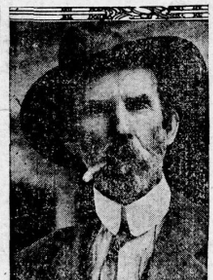
Oh, yes, Paris, has a magnetic!

BECAUSE.

Why is it that beautiful women from the four quarters of the globe flock to Paris like many plumaged birds to South American forests? I will tell you Paris puts a higher premium upon beauty than any city in the world. The Hogarth line of beauty runs through everything from the tent of a rag-picker, the hovel of a grisette to the spires of Notre Dame, the arch of the Star. It runs from every alley way through every street to every boulevard, lives in the lineaments of the Louvre on the site. Now dead Cabaret of the assassins. Beauty! Beauty! Everywhere. Where? WHO CARE IS.

Art is nothing but the expression of the beautiful. To express, is to press out. Beauty is the soul of the possessor, or it could not be pressed out to adorn everything in the most beautiful city in the world.

There is an epidemic of beauty in Paris. it is on the people, all the people, from the pie-woman of the Batignolles, the Lorette of San Lazare to my lady in her boudoir—the queen of the foot-lights. That's Paris!



SMITH CLAYTON.

Beautiful women flock there because beauty is superlatively and superbly appreciated there, and Paris, the city in the form of a heart is attuned to love!

ALL ABOARD FOR PARIS.

There is nothing like taking time by the forelock. I say only one way.

Now, listen: Atlanta and the south are going to shake hands with Paris this summer at the Paris Tourist club makes good. My information is that that club is now ready for business. If there are among the tens of thousands of readers of The Journal in the south fifteen people who want to go to Paris from Atlanta and return at the lowest rate yet offered, why, get busy at once.

A MARINE WONDER.

The world's largest ship will sail from Hamburg, Germany, for New York on June 11, this summer. She is the Imperator, and this will be her maiden voyage. This monster of the deep is 919 feet long; tons, 50,000; capacity, 5,000 passengers. A double steel hull runs her entire length, the inner hull rising to a point sixteen feet above water, making her "a ship within a ship." She is fitted with great tanks of rolling tanks to counteract the motion of violent seas, and is the steadiest great ship ever built. Among the brandnew features are a Roman bath, gymnasium, sun parlor, squash court and veranda cafe. They will be building 'em soon with opera houses, baseball parks and race courses.

The Imperator makes the Great Eastern look like a pleasure launch. The Great Eastern, the biggest vessel of her day, was completed in 1859. She was 680 feet long, 83 feet beam, only 12,000 tons! It took her seven days to cross the Atlantic. The Imperator will cross it in six days.

Now, then, keep listening: If the Paris Tourist club gets fifteen tourists big by July 1, it will go over to Paris in this, the largest ship in the world. Of course, as many more can join the club as want to, but there must be fifteen to get the rate, to-wit: $326 Three hundred and twenty dollars, return ticket, from Atlanta to Paris, including two weeks' stay in Paris and hotel expenses for that time.

If anybody wants to stay longer and spend a million dollars, all right. The return ticket is good for one year.

All the Paris Tourist club, if it materializes, will have to do is to go! The tickets will be bought for the members who have engaged for the trip, and intelligent guides furnished to show them something of the finest of everything in Paris—and everything that does not include little incidental expenses en route, but the pocket change of tourists can be converted into French money for them before they sail.

THE CHANCE OF A LIFETIME.

This will be the chance of a chance of a lifetime for people of small means, a most golden opportunity for southern preachers, teachers, students, art lovers, and the rich. There is only one way to travel—and Paris is the educational center of the old world.

Now, then, now, now, will be devoted to booking, if there is any booking to be done. In order to secure reservations one-fourth of the passage money must be paid when a tourist is booked. The balance must be paid at least three weeks before sailing.

The Imperator will sail on Saturday, July 19, at 10 a. m. from New York for Cherbourg; then the six-hour run to Paris, stopping at the railway station, Wert, the San Lazare. The club will proceed, at once, to the hotel quarters provided in advance.

If the club grows big enough to go this writer will be a member and write the story of the tour, exclusively for The Journal.

The headquarters of the club in Paris will be the New York Herald office, 49 Avenue de l'Opera.

From there it will swoop down daily upon the grand sights of Paris. The Paris New York Herald is one of the greatest. It is in English.

It will not be a personally conducted party rushed through the gay city. Each tourist can take his time, tell where he wants to go, what he wants to see and he will be shown. If one man wishes to see the Tomb of Napoleon and another the Palace of the Luxembourg and another the Bon Marche, each will get the proper tip as to what to do. If all three desire to see the three features mentioned so much the better.

Lists of attractions for fifteen days and fifteen nights will be at hand and if the club is not seeing something new every hour it will be this club's fault.

NOW THEN—

This writer, who has spent ten weeks of his life in Paris, will go if the club goes, and give all the information that he has about Paris, and agrees to get for the club all the information it may need from sources of which I have no knowledge, and is equipped with a world of intelligence that he lacks. It is impossible to know everything about Paris.

But the writer knows a few things from sad experience. A man is at a gigantic disadvantage in a city or country of this character which he is ig..orant. If a man goes to Paris or anywhere else abroad on his first trip alone he is the smartest man that ever flutter d, they will skin him alive. I thought I was smart enough to do that very thing in 1889, my first trip, and they skinned me from crown to t s.

But the next time I went, it was in 1900, I skinned them from hair to heel, and threw away the hairs to the ravening wolves are mild compared to heels.

FOREIGN ROBBERS.

My son, hear me: There is nothing in this world like "knowing the ropes."

Depend upon it, it will save you three or five shining shmeleons! Of course, this sage advice is not vouchsafed to those disgusting smart alecks who have never been out of the mail sack, but to you all about Paris, London, Vienna, Berlin, Kissimme, Frogtown and Bugville.

Shakespeare says of "Home-keeping youths have ever homely wits."

I never knew how very little I knew about the ocean and Paris, until bored to a lingering death by several of these unutterable ignoramuses in this country who, not only had never navigated a mudscow, but, actually, had never seen a seacoast town and wouldn't recognize Paris if they met it in the road! Selah!

DON'T WRITE, PLEASE.

Now then don't write unless you mean business because you'll interfere with those who do. I have given all the news of the Paris Tourist club that you need to know. Don't write, please, unless you mean business! Life's too short to do anything short of booking people from the south who really intend to go. Remember, all you have to do is to plank down one-fourth of $326 and you'll be booked, and, at least three weeks before July 19, the day of sailing, plank down the balance. You'll get a receipt and get the trip. If fifteen gents don't plank down before the 1st of July the club won't go.

TWO MORE!

There are just two more things I want to mention: Subscribe for The Journal or buy it, and read all about Paris. You can't know too much about it, and the best way to learn is to read after somebody who's been there.

Hot air articles, even books, by people who have never seen Paris, simply give you foolish mistakes.

Seeing is knowing.

Another thing—I lugged a forty-pound valise all over Europe, and had no use for more than one-fifth of the things in it.

But for the sulphurous profanity superinduced by lugging that absurdly surplusage of baggage, I would have stood some chance of becoming a Christian. But that heavy valise fixed the habit of volcanic cussin' upon me!

Don't, don't, don't carry anything but a light valise or suitcase. It's easy! As the great engineer, said all he needed to go around the world was a handbag and a change of underwear.

I was right.

If a man should happen to need anything in the wearing line over there he could buy it for five times cheaper than over here, thanks to our tariffs.

Excess baggage costs like smoke on ocean steamships. So say nothing of the world of trouble it gives at custom houses.

TAKE IT STRAIGHT.

The Paris Tourist club don't have to go! I would just like to see the people of small means in the south have a chance to go somewhere across the pond.

That's my interest in it. I don't care specially, to go. I've been.

But, believe me, boy, this is a great chance for you. Paris can show you sights that make New York, London, Chicago, Berlin, Vienna, and even Philadelphia, all combined look like a dried-up pumpkind. I've seen 'em. However, if you don't like it, why, "just pour it back in the jug," as the old Indian remarked to a man who wanted a drink.

THE HAY CROP

BY DR. ANDREW M. SOULE

AN adequate supply of roughness is essential on every farm. And you, Mr. Farmer, making any effort to provide the same? If not, you are making a great mistake and one that will prove extremely costly. No farmer can be prosperous so long as he depends on some one else to grow his hay for him, and especially is this true when he buys a type of hay which is not as nutritious or as easily digestible as crops he may grow on his own farm and which will otherwise quite likely remain idle. Horses and mules have the most sensitive digestion of any class of live stock with which the farmer has to deal. Their respiratory organs are impaired very frequently when fed on dusty or improperly cured hay. Owing to the rather limited digestive capacity of the horse and mule, it is essential that the roughness shall be relatively high in digestible constituents. Such being the case, it would appear that certain forms of roughness are much more desirable than others.

The standard form of roughness so extensively used in the nutrition of horses and mules is timothy hay. This does not class, however, as a high grade food stuff according to its analysis and coefficient of digestibility. The farmer who grows timothy hay and takes pains to properly cure and shred his stover has a very good substitute for timothy hay. Throughout the south other crops may be used to even better advantage as a source of roughness for horses than corn stalks. Take, for instance, Sorghum. This crop will not only grow on a variety of soils and under conditions to which corn is not so well adapted, but it can be cured quite successfully and without serious difficulty and makes a clean, bright, wholesome and nutritious hay.

The legumes can be grown to good advantage for hay. Among those of especial importance are the cowpea and the soy bean. These may be grown either by themselves or in combination with millet. Of course, there is some difficulty in getting them to mature together, and the millet on that account should be sown later than the peas and beans. This is quite practicable if the legumes mentioned are seeded in drills say three feet apart, and then a row or two of millet sown later on. It is quite important in utilizing millet for hay that it be cut early, in other words, when the seed is just in the dough stage. When allowed to become hard and dry they exercise at times an overstimulating enect on the kidneys which is very undesirable.

Now is the time to get ready for the hay crop. Every farmer who is a fore-handed will profit by the opportunity nature has afforded him. It takes a considerable area of land to produce a sufficient amount of hay for work stock. On a farm where ten mules are maintained, fifteen acres per head per day is all that will be needed to supply them with an abundance of desirable roughness. In other words, about twenty-eight tons of hay will be required to feed them for a year, even when they are required to do unusually hard work. It should be said in this connection that hay on an acre of land, especially where the crops mentioned above are employed. This would be a splendid crop for seeding and harvesting the crop produced in about fourteen acres of average land. Certainly this is not a very great undertaking. Work of this kind can be done at seasons when corn and cotton require little attention. The work stock in the corn harvester, bound in sheaves and cured in shocks. Later the stalks may be run through a cutting box, moistened with water to which a little salt has been added, and left in a pile *to soften overnight. This makes an ex*cellent feed and also obviates the injury which might result from feeding these crops in a dry condition on account of the dust. Where corn stalks are cut for hay, it is well to do the work relatively early in the season. In other words, cut when the lower leaves begin to fire so as to save as many of them as possible. Sorghum, on the other hand, should be allowed to practically mature. These two forms of roughness may be fed to good advantage with hay made from pea vines, soy beans or a combination of these two crops with millet. It will be better to have some corn stalks or sorghum to feed along with leguminous hays, because the latter are rather concentrated and sometimes may produce indigestion because of surfeiting the system with protein. Several forms of hay give the farmer an advantage in more directions than one. First, it gives variety and adds palatability to the ration. Second, one crop may be injured by the other while another will do well. Third, a supply of roughage from different sources will enable him to supplement deficiencies in one form of roughness with another.

On the average farm where fifteen to twenty acres are devoted to hay crops, it is desirable to have some permanent pasture, and for this purpose, timothy, rep top, tall oat grass and Bermuda should be chiefly relied upon. Some of this pasture may be mixed with these crops whenever they are sown for hay purposes. For spring feeding the farmer should sow oats and vetch. This combination makes an excellent hay crop, if well. The land may also be employed to advantage in the production of millet and cowpea hay the same season. Where cowpeas and soy beans are used for hay, the crop should not be cut until the pods begin to ripen at the lower end. Soy beans should be cut earlier, relatively speaking, than cowpeas because of the tendency of the pods to open and shatter out the grain. This crop can very often be handled to the very best advantage with the corn harvester, especially if the larger varieties are grown. However, the larger varieties are not quite so satisfactory for hay as the smaller varieties. Where the pea can be cured successfully, it affords one of the best all the legumes to employ for hay making purposes in the south.

On every farm some provision should be made for curing hay, and to this end hay caps should be used. It frequently happens, for instance, that at the time of hay harvest, there is a superabundance of rain. If hay caps are available this does not make much difference, for if the green mass of vines be thrown up on stakes which will allow air to circulate freely through them and the top is properly protected from rain with a hay cap the curing though it may take an unusually long time can be accomplished quite successfully. Hay caps are not expensive and they can be used for a long time if properly cared for. They are best made of a heavy type canvas similar to that used in the manufacture of tents. They should be hemmed to prevent fraying and there should be large eyelets in each corner. Strings should be attached to these eyelets and to large sticks which are stuck in the vines, thus preventing the caps from blowing off in a gust of wind. The investment on caps will probably not exceed the cost of purchasing one ton of mixed hay, and the farmer who says he can not afford to take the trouble involved has not properly calculated the advantages to be derived from making and curing his own hay.

Southern farmers have paid tribute to the north and west in the matter of purchasing hay entirely too long, and it is sincerely to be hoped that the greatest effort in the history of the south will be made this year to produce the abundance of roughness for all classes of live stock. The saving of the large amount of money sent out for the purchase of hay would in a few years make the southern farmer wealthy and independent. Just so long as he continues to buy this necessary and essential food product from sections of the country through the production of cotton alone, he can not hope to become permanently prosperous and successful.

SUCKERING CORN

H. E. W., Dacula, Ga., writes: I wish to know whether to give the suckers the best of my corn or not. The land was broken in the fall and bedded this spring, with four feet between rows. I will use 400 pounds of 10-2-2 fertilizer on when I planted, and am going to use 400 pounds of 10-2-2 on as a top dressing.

No doubt you planted a prolific type of corn and if that is the case you have expect it to sucker much more freely than the ordinary sorts. Prolific corn should be planted closer than the large stalked varieties. This tends to check the sucker growth. Open furrows to a good depth two to two and a half feet apart and drop the seed regularly by hand so as to have about 12 to 18 inches apart in the drill. Before planting the potatoes we would advise the use of 1,000 pounds of fertilizer per acre of about a 9-4-6. The fertilizer should be well mixed with the soil in the bottom of the drill. Do not put the fertilizer right next to the seed. The planting should be done when the soil is in good condition as to moisture. The seed should be covered to a considerable depth, and it is best not to cut them when planting at this season. The seed used is one that can be obtained from the first or early crop potatoes. Various varieties may be selected as the Bliss, Lookout Mountain or second crop Cobbler. Some difficulty is frequently experienced in getting a stand of Irish potatoes at the season of the year indicated. Sometimes the potatoes rot if the weather is very wet and extremely warm. Every effort should be made to so conserve the moisture of the soil as to induce rapid germination of the seed.

FEEDING VALUE OF OATS IN SHEATH.

S. L. H., Haddock, Ga., writes: Please advise me what oats in the sheath are worth per ton that will make from 25 to 50 bushels per acre?

Oats, when in good condition to cut for hay, will probably run a little higher in digestive nutrients than hay derived from the same kind of cereals. They will closely approximate in composition Kentucky blue grass when cut at similar stages, and will be richer than timothy, orchard grass or red top. While they probably will have a little higher per cent of digestible nutrients per ton than some other foodstuffs with which they might come in competition, we are inclined to think that they would have to be sold on the basis of what they will bring for hay. Where timothy is selling at $20 to $22 a ton, a good quality of oat hay containing the amount of grain you have indicated would be superior to timothy. Of course, the value of oat hay depends somewhat on the stage in which it has been cut and the method of curing pursued. The foregoing statement is based on the fact that the crop was cut about the middle of the dough stage and cured without rain, and is fine, bright, palatable and nutritious hay dust, being well tinged with green.

New French Journal

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 31.—The new journal, "LLHonne Libre," has been launched by M. Clemenceau, who renounced journalism for politics in 1906.

The ex-premier finds faults in the third French republic, but he points out in his leading article that on the one hand the Republican party could not be blamed for everything that could be found wrong, because "our alleged Conservatives have no policy except to restore monarchy," and on the other hand the Republican party's policy is paralyzed by the necessity of being constantly on the defense on both sides, against the Monarchists and against the Socialists, who put themselves outside the republic.

At the end of his article M. Clemenceau once more lays it down that the return to the three years' service is an imperative necessity.

"One must first of all live." In another column, M. Clemenceau's paper takes a definite stand against proportional representation.

AT THE THEATRES

Lillian Shaw Is Headliner of Keith Vaudeville Bill at the Forsyth This Week—Six Other Good Numbers Include "Poems in Marble" and Jack Hazzard, Comedian

Lillian Shaw is to be the headliner at the Forsyth this week and the management has selected six other acts of high quality Keith vaudeville. In the bill there will be variety of the kind that has become popular with local theatergoers. The program is a combination of features that would be a credit in any vaudeville theater.

The class of vaudeville that is being served to local theatergoers at the Forsyth is precisely the sort that is seen in the Keith theaters in New York and other exclusive vaudeville theaters in the United States and in Canada, and it is a frequent event that some big foreign feature comes to the busy theater.

Lillian Shaw made her first appearance here four years ago and scored a hit that has not been eclipsed. She is one of the recognized stars of modern vaudeville, and her annual visit here has been an event that has crowded the theater. This season she has been more successful than previously in her career, and though she had determined to rest her season she was induced to make the trip to Atlanta; and the theatergoers are going to be ready with a welcome.

Paul Seldom's "Poems in Marble" will be another of the features on this bill. The act was produced at the Forsyth during its first year and scored just the sort of hit that it has registered everywhere. The management has received many requests for its return, and through the influence of the Keith officers it has been brought back. A beautiful woman, a modern Venus, is the star of the act, and it is one of the most artistic novelty presentations in the profession.

Jack Hazard, the clever young comedian who rarely leaves New York, will be an added attraction on this bill, and it is predicted that he will become a favorite. He has a different style of entertainment from any one in the profession, and the fact that he is a writer of more than ordinary ability means that the local audiences will get some original comedy that will bear repeating for a long time to come.

"Pop" Ward is a comedian of the old school, and his partner, Frank Curran, is a singer of genuine ability. The idea of the sketch is founded on things that happen "back stage" and that the public knows little about. In the hands of these capable entertainers, such material should be worked into a fine lot of laughs. Wright and Dietrich, one of the cleverest duos in vaudeville, will be a valuable part of the show. These young people have met with genuine success all over the circuit and in Europe. They are the sort of vaudeville stars who never fail; and they will be welcomed on the Forsyth stage is going to be thoroughly demonstrated.

The Three Alexs, a trio of gymnasts, and the Caites Brothers, who are clever dancers, make up the rest of the bill.

The Forsyth is more popular today than ever before in its career, and it is a regular occurrence that the entire seating capacity of the theater on all floors is occupied.

There are daily matinee performances, for which 25 cents buys the best seat, and at night the regular prices are in effect. Thousands of people have the Forsyth habit, and hundreds are joining every day.

Third Week of Tabloid Musical Comedy at Bijou Will Have "The College Girls," an Attractive Piece, on the Boards, Play Is by Ed P. Moran, Music by Seymour Firth

The third week of the Bijou's new policy—tabloid musical comedy—with vaudeville, starts with Monday matinee and will continue all during the week, with two matinees on Monday and Saturday, single matinees on other days, and two performances each night at 7:30 and 9:00.

The third bill will be "The College Girls," a splendid tabloid, organized with a group of real vaudeville artists, who will assist wonderfully the comedians and chorus girls of the show in trying hard to win the attendance record of the house. "The College Girls" is by no means a new show in the tabloid circuit. It is a title that has for several seasons proved its magnetism, but each year the story, music and comedy has been right up to date. The cast is the same that has been identified with the show since its original success, and the chorus girls have been improved upon, until it is now conceded that there is no other combination in the vaudeville circuit quite so clever.

The story that is used by this company is written by Ed P. Morgan, who wrote the lyrics also, and the music is by Seymour Furth.

The leading comedy roles are in the hands of Abe Reynolds and Ed Rogers, who have attracted unusual attention from audiences and from the critics since their successful western tour. They are typical character comedians, one portraying an Irishman, the other a German. In their efforts, following the plot of the show, to rid themselves of a fortune, there result roars of laughter that last all through the performance.

Miss Lillian Cameron, a pretty comedienne, plays the leading role of the opposite sex. Around these three people the whole story revolves faster than the spinning of a mechanical top, and the management promises that there will be no wasted time, and no old, threadbare, worn-out ideas in an effort to kill time at the expense of people who pay to be entertained.

The musical program has a big value, and there will be attractive scenery and pretty costumes to make the show just exactly what the Bijou patrons will demand.

The Bijou prices remain at 10 cents admission, with 10 cents extra for reserved seats.

TRANSGRESSING WITH THE TONGUE

A little sermon for you and me.

By Rev. Loy Warwick

If any offend not in word the same is perfect. James, 3-2.

THE tongue is a test. You can tell an educated man or an illiterate man by the tongue. "Thy speech betrayeth thee," said the maiden to Peter in the high priest's house. Men put bits and bridles on horses. The sailor turns the great ship about with a very small helm. Men tame lions and elephants and tigers. They control the fire that threatens to extinguish the town. You have done some great things yourself. You are looked upon as a man or woman of parts. You have learned many things. Have you attained to the kingship of self-control? You can "hold" an unruly horse. You can "hold" a reception. You can "hold" a prayer meeting. You can hold an audience "spellbound." But can you "hold" your tongue?

SOME DO NOT TALK ENOUGH.

There may be some people who do not talk enough. They offered by silence when speech would be golden. Or they damn with faint praise. They are parsimonious of compliments and commendation. They say, "Let us not praise that young man, for we might turn his head and make him vain." What vast vanity in them to think that words of theirs could be so potent!

There are times when not to speak the word of encouragement is cruel.

There are also times to use the tongue for rebuke, for reproof, for correction and censure. We must learn how to do this in the spirit of the Master. "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault ye which are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.

Your words may not be appreciated at the time you speak them. But some day they will bear their fruit and you will receive your reward.

BUT MOST TALK TOO MUCH.

But most of the offenders are those who talk too much. The preacher talks too much from the pulpit now and then. He expounds the announcements, using vain repetitions as the heathen do. His homeletic railway is lacking in terminal facilities. The audience sees so good places for him to stop, but he sees them not.

The prayer meeting is hurt by the good brother or sister who wishes to orate or sermonize in season, out of season.

I am going somewhere in a hurry. Did you see me suddenly turn at a corner and walk four blocks out of my way? Why did I do that? Because I saw Sister A., or Brother B., or Judge C. coming down the street. A head-on collision was inevitable unless I ran into a siding. Sister A., Brother B. and Judge C. have never studied punctuation—at least they never use the period in conversation. Give them an audience of one or more minutes and they talk till the cows come home.

People who talk a great deal are not apt to say much. Or if they say good things the good is lost in a wilderness of words and a tangle of talk.

If you can talk like Dr. Johnson, or like the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," people may forgive you for "cornering" the conversation. Occasionally you meet a man or woman whose ordinary conversation is brilliant. There are preachers and lecturers—a few of them—who make us forget the clock. These are privileged characters. They can talk as long as they please and we are glad to listen. But it is not clear that you or I belong in this class. So we had better cut it short, lest we wear out permit.

On general principles too much talk is not good. It is hard to keep up with all you say, and your enemies may remember it and use it against you. Walls have ears, and the man in the next room may have a dictograph.

Not all voluble people are liars, but liars are usually good talkers.

SOME OFFENSES OF THE TONGUE.

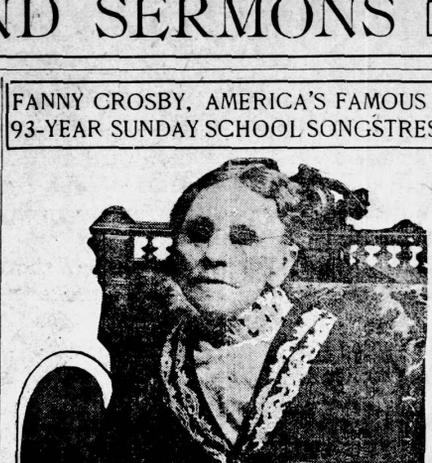
But we offend with the tongue in other and more harmful ways than letting it work overtime. We condemn on insufficient evidence. We criticise and question the motives of men before we know what we are talking about. We shoot off our mouths and hurt something or somebody, and then say, "I did not know it was loaded." But we should know. We hear an evil report of a man, and repeat it to the next person we meet.

We tell what we think," or "they said," or "some one told." We "if" and "but" about a man until we spoil his good name, which is worth more to him than great riches.

I have known, you have too, one small tongue to rob a man or woman, or a man and woman of a good reputation and cast a shadow on an innocent home. We have known it to disorganize the church in a community and start more of the fire of hell than all the preachers and good people could put out in a decade.

The thoughtless tongue, the biting tongue, the sharp tongue, the bitter tongue, the slanderous tongue! Who can weigh the evil that these do in *the world? He who sits on the jurg*ment seat can. And He does. For every vain and idle thought, and every word we say we must give an account. The dictograph report of what certain men said in Atlanta the other day will be false—in any case like that. But our words and our very thoughts are heard and recorded in heaven. And one day the record is to be read. How careful, then, ought I to live. With what religious care should I guard my speech. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A tree is known by its fruits. The sweet fountain sends forth sweet, pure water. If the love of God is in your heart the law of kindness will control your tongue.

FANNY CROSBY, AMERICA'S FAMOUS 93-YEAR SUNDAY SCHOOL SONGSTRESS



Safe in the Arms of Jesus.

Jesus, my heart's dear refuge,
Jesus has died for me
Firm on the Rock of Ages
Ever my trust shall be.
Here let me wait with patience,
Wait till the night is o'er;
Wait till I see the morning
Break on the golden shore.

Fanny J. Crosby.

FANNY CROSBY,
In her home, with her favorite hymn book in her hand, and her favorite hymn.

BY MARY BOYLE O'REILLY.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 24.—A golden sunset illumined the room in which Fanny Crosby, the blind author of famous hymns, sat facing the glory she could not see.

Diminutive as a child of twelve, tremulous under the weight of her great age, tender, selfless, utterly content—that is Fanny Crosby at ninety-three.

Her frail body in its graceful gray gown seemed almost ethereal; but the blind little woman whose enduring hymns have comforted thousands is still at work.

"Only yesterday a publisher telegraphed me for a poem, and though I have worked for hours some of the lines simply will not come," she said.

"I think," with a smile, "that I must be getting old? Only, my dear, I beg that you do not write of me as 'aged and infirm.'"

Her sweet, high laugh pealed merrily, then the tender face grew grave.

"All my life I have had so much! After four score years and ten I know wretchedness only by hearsay; but, oh, I hope I have comforted some who were heavily burdened.

"That hope spurred me to the writing of the hymns. But I have written so very many, probably 8,000 in all, that it is impossible to remember most of them. For that reason I have often made laughable mistakes.

"One morning at Northfield, the audience sang, 'Hide Me, O My Savior, Hide,' and I was so much pleased with it that, turning to Mr. Sankey, I asked, 'Where did you get that song?'

"'Really,' he replied, 'you ought to know, for you are the guilty author.'

"Generally when the melody is given I choose my own subject for a hymn-poem.

"My dear mother's death in 1890 suggested:

"'Over the River they call me,
Friends that are dear to my heart
Soon I shall meet them in glory,
Never, no never, to part.'

"Again, the story of a Boston harbor pilot's dying word proved an inspiration. 'I see the light,' he said to those who watched beside him, and, hearing that last word, I wrote:

"'I see the Light; 'tis coming;
It breaks upon my soul;
It streams above the tempest
And ocean waves that roll.'

"That many of my hymns have been dictated by the Holy Spirit I have no doubt. Sometimes it seemed that there was a deep, clear well of inspiration from which I was free to draw. At other times the burden of inspiration was almost too heavy.

"Most of my verses are written in the night. Sometimes a hymn comes to me by stanzas, and needs only to be written down, but I never have any part of a poem committed to paper until the whole is composed.

"The hymn, 'O Child of God, Wait Patiently,' came into being at Northfield. Mr. Sankey played a pretty air and asked me to write a poem, but my mind seemed a blank. Next morning, just when we were all going for a drive, I asked to be excused, and in a few moments the words of the hymn came in regular order just as they now stand:

"'O child of God, wait patiently
When dark thy path may be,
And let thy faith lean trustingly
On Him who cares for thee.'

"The best of my poems, the ones that are my favorites, came as a complete whole, needing no revision.

"Just forty-five years ago, in April, 1868, an old and dear friend, when bidding me good-bye, said: 'I have just forty minutes before my train leaves for Cincinnati. Here is a melody. Can you write words for it?' For twenty minutes I was wholly unconscious of all else except the work I was doing. At the end of that time I recited the words to 'Safe In the Arms of Jesus.'"

SUNDAY SCHOOL TOPICS

JUNE 1 1913.

(Copyright, 1912, Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.)

Joseph "ests His Brethren. Gen. xliv.

Golden Text—Confess therefore your sins one to another and pray one for another that ye may be healed. Jas. v:16.

(1.) Verses 1-11—What was the motive of Joseph in acting in this apparently cruel and deceptive way?

(2.) Is it ever right and why, sometimes necessary for a kind heart to act the part of apparent cruelty to accomplish good ends?

(3.) Why does God frequently allow or cause things of a very severe nature to happen to the best of people?

(4.) Joseph acted in a way to deceive and instructed his steward to falsely accuse his brethren. Would you or not, and why, say that he did perfectly right? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club).

(5.) If we do a cruel or wicked thing, such as these men did in selling their brother Joseph into Egypt, what reason is there to believe that we are sure to meet with more than an equivalent in suffering in after life?

(6.) Suppose for a moment that this story is only a parable showing the cause and effect of sin, then how can you show that it is true to actual life?

(7.) How can you demonstrate it to be a fact that circumstances conspire to haunt with trouble a man with a guilty conscience?

(8.) Verses 12-17—Benjamin had no part in selling Joseph. How do you account for the fact that God often permits the innocent to suffer as well as the guilty?

(9.) When we are accused of a thing of which we are innocent, with no way to prove it, and circumstances are against us, what is the best way for us to act?

(10.) What was Joseph's dream as a boy and how were these events fulfilling that dream?

(11.) Verses 18-26—What excellent qualities do you find in this speech of Judah, that are worthy of the imitation of public speakers?

(12.) Which affects a man most when we want to appease his anger, or ask a favor, an appeal to his feelings or emotions, or an appeal to his reason?

(13.) Which can excite a person's sympathy, how much more likely are you to persuade him to grant you a favor to do you justice?

(14.) In how many ways did Joseph's method test his brethren?

(15.) Judah was the one who proposed the selling of Joseph into Egypt. In view of that fact, and the noble part he is now taking in trying to free Benjamin, what do you think of Judah?

(16.) If a man through jealousy or other wrong feeling does a bad thing, and years afterward repents of it and does all he can to make reparation, would you be inclined to have as much confidence in him as if he never done the bad deed? Give your reasons.

(17.) Verses 27-34—Who was the mother of Joseph and Benjamin and what peculiar circumstances in their lives before or at their birth which would tend to make their father love them very tenderly?

Lesson for Sunday, June 8, 1913, Joseph Forgives His Brethren. Gen. xlv:1-xlvi:7.

THE ROVER

A MATTER OF FRANCHISE

SECOND OF A NEW SERIES
By George Randolph Chester

CHAPTER I.

"WELL, anyhow, he's got a fine telephone disposition," insisted the switchboard girl, glancing across the lobby to where tall, black-haired and black-eyed John Ames stood, the picture of discontent.

"I'd rather have a grouch that pays his bills," responded the clerk, who had grown gray-haired on suspicion. "His name was up yesterday morning."

They both looked speculatively across to Ames, who was, at that moment, audibly engaged in hating the hotel, the town, and the train which brought him to it. The girl finished her inspection satisfied with the pro- ... the corner of the desk.

"Bet you the two bits he pays his bill right," she offered.

The clerk, studying John Ames in an entirely new light, pushed back the coin. As if in answer to their thought, the ... pound man suddenly turned and strode across to the desk. The telephone girl, who was a plain blonde, watched him furtively out of the corner of her eyes. He was one of the sort for whom she had a mighty respect: a handsome young fellow who could be agreeable without being fresh.

"What time can I get a train for Cannville?" asked Ames in a habitually pleasant voice.

The clerk was instantly attentive, and the lines which ran from the corners of his mouth and pouched his cheeks, lost some of their grimness. His confidence was restored, and he was quite prepared to like John Ames.

"There isn't a good one until four-fifteen a. m.," he replied, glancing at the clock. "The six-thirty is just about leaving the depot, unless it's late," and he touched the head porter's bell.

The ... who had the breadth of ... ward, moved like a fat section ... ry.

"What do you know about Number Twelve, Joe?" asked the clerk.

"On time, sir," reported Joe in a brogue of many dimensions, and he smiled quite confidently and frankly up at John Ames. He had no worry whatever about Mr. Ames. That gentleman had given him a dollar for hauling up his luggage and would give him another for hauling it down.

Ames gave the lobby one more chance and frowned. There was not an interesting face in sight. Three iron-counenanced ladies came in and crossed the parlor. They flashed with diamonds and rustled with silk, and left an aggravating stream of heavy perfume in their wake.

"What time can I get a train for Lynchtown?" Ames inquired, and catching the eye of the telephone girl, gave her a friendly nod.

Once more the clerk looked puzzled. Ames had been with them over a week, and no one knew why. He had asked many questions, but none of them hung together. Lynchtown was in exactly the opposite direction from Cannville.

"Nine-fifteen, sir," offered Joe. "Shall I bring down your luggage?"

"I think so," replied Ames with indifference. "Get me a ticket and a lower berth," and he loafed over to the cashier's window. "The bill for six-twenty-four," he requested.

The cashier cast on him one inquiring glance and silently went about making up the bill. The telephone girl leaned over to the grim-checked clerk.

"Piker, you wouldn't bet," she chided him.

"Oh, I knew he was all right," declared the clerk.

A gentleman and two ladies stepped up to the desk. The man, who was in evening dress, was a decidedly prosperous looking chap, young and vigorous in spite of his iron-gray hair, wore a plump mustache and was quite brusque of manner.

"I ordered a box for the Grand to be delivered here," he announced to the clerk.

"I don't think they've come yet, Mr. Dennison," returned the clerk, with a bow to the ladies. "Are you going to dine with us?"

"Yes," said Dennison, not gruffly, but in the manner of a man who is used to three-minute appointments.

"I'll look up the tickets for you, and send them in to you as soon as they come," offered the clerk.

"Thanks," accepted Dennison, and relieved the ladies.

These latter were quite evidently mother and daughter. The mother was still a very handsome woman, but the daughter was startling in her beauty. She had glanced at Ames, for an appreciative fraction of a second, out of particularly sparkling blue eyes. Her hair was of shining golden-bronze, and, with her perfect piquant features, she was a bit of warmly-tinted Dresden.

Ames went over to the clerk as soon as the group had left the desk.

"I haven't seen those people before," he observed, his eyes straying again to the retreating figure of the girl. "Do they live here?"

"That's Tom Dennison, of the Midstate Interurban lines."

"And family, I suppose," guessed Ames.

"Wife and daughter," the clerk informed him. "They're just back from Chicago."

"The Midstate Interurban lines," speculated Ames. "They've been trying to get an entrance in Plainsberg, haven't they?"

"Dennison's been trying it here for two years," smiled the clerk. "The local traction company, however, have the town tied up. They're building some interurban lines of their own. The Dennison company is virtually owned and controlled by our busiest little politician."

"I see," responded Ames, and was thoughtful for a moments, then he turned over to the cashier's window. "I'll take my bill to yesterday then," he directed. "Will you please tell the head porter not to get that transportation." He went back to the clerk and he had lost all his careless indifference. "Will you kindly see if you can secure me a good ticket for the Grand tonight?" he requested.

CHAPTER II.

TOM DENNISON'S door slammed like the bursting of an auto tire, and there came out a man so tall that he seemed almost to be stoop-shouldered from passing through low doorways. His hands hung nearly to his knees, and one shoulder was higher than the other. One side of his face, too, was squinted, as if the jaw had been violently poked upward and had never straightened down again. His widest eye glanced ferociously on John Ames as he passed, but that was only normal with Bill Cracken. The boy to whom Ames had given his card, took it in to the President's office of the Midstate Interurban, and came out again in a hurry.

"He can't see you today," reported the boy, who was breathing hard.

Ames smiled, and, taking another card, wrote beneath his name, the single word "franchise."

The boy looked at he card dubiously. "I don't think I had better bother Mr. Dennison any more just now," he speculated, with an apprehensive glance at the door.

"You'll be perfectly safe," Ames reassured him. "Here's fifty cents. If you get kicked out I'll give you a dollar."

The boy slipped the half dollar into his pocket and grinned. He was a thin-faced boy with a bright eye, and a certain amount of sporting blood in him.

"Get ready to hand that dollar to me as I pass," he requested, and carefully placing his hat on the chair nearest the door, he went in to see Tom Dennison.

"He came out again, similing, and hung up his hat.

"He'll give you three minutes," said the boy, and Ames went in.

He found Dennison standing at the window savagely puffing at a cigar, and the full-blooded Dennisons face and temples and neck were red also his hand was trembling slightly. He looked at his watch significantly as he came over to the desk and sat down.

"I understand you want an interurban entrance and terminal station in Plainsberg," he began.

Dennison almost barked.

"Yes."

"I had intended to leave the city last night, but I took a notion to stay over and help you get your franchise," resumed Ames pleasantly.

Dennison took his cigar out of his mouth, and regarded Ames fixedly for a moment.

"How?"

"I don't know yet," returned Ames "I haven't given that detail any thought."

Dennison laughed, entirely without mirth, and, rising nervously, stalked back to the window.

"That'll be about all," he snapped. "I've kept an office in town for two years, trying to get that franchise."

"I don't mind your being aggravated," remarked Ames, unruffled. "You've been trying two years to secure this franchise and a stranger speaks of it with utter nonchalance, as if it were a trivial matter, which after all, it probably is. These things are usually quite simple."

Again Dennison laughed that mirthless laugh.

"You walk in here tomorrow with a feasible plan for me to bring my interurban lines into this city, and I'll give you $10,000," he offered.

Ames reflected a moment.

"Make it forty-eight hours and I'll take you up," he bargained.

"All right, forty-eight then," agreed Dennison.

John Ames put his watch in his pocket.

"Now tell me the exact status of affairs," he requested.

Dennison returned to his desk slowly, studied Ames a moment in silence, and sat down.

"Did you see the man who went out just now?" he demanded, and again his temple reddened.

Ames nodded his head and smiled.

"Well, that was Bill Cracken," went on Dennison, involuntarily knotting the muscles of his hand. "He's the president of the local traction company, the political boss of the town, and a damn scuffler! He also came in to tell me how to get a franchise."

"I can probably guess it," observed Ames. "He wanted a big block of stock, control of the Midstate, and your chair's block."

"Just about," agreed Dennison, somewhat mollified with this ready comprehension. "That's what he wants if we come in. If we don't, he threatens to extend his own lines to parallel ours and since he can get into the cit yand we can't it doesn't look good for the Midstate."

Ames rose.

"I don't know whether forty-eight hours is enough, but I'll try it," he said. "So far, I'm only proceeding on the assumption that there's always a way. You haven't had a city hall fire in recent years, have you?"

"No," returned Dennison, looking at him curiously.

"Thanks," said Ames. "By the way, if I should show you that feasible plan for entering the city, I'm going to ask you a couple of months' employment in addition to that bonus you were kind enough to offer."

"Young man," declared Dennison, leaning over impressively: "if you succeed in this fool proposition, you may write your own ticket."

CHAPTER III.

THE following night at 10 o'clock, Tom Dennison's butler came into the library with the information that John Ames was on the 'phone. Dennison repeated the name twice before he could connect it with the good-looking young man who had offered to solve his insolvable problem. He smiled as he went to the 'phone. He had spent a day and a half on the puzzle of whether Ames was a crank or a man with an idea.

"Yes."

"I've found Jerry Slummer."

"Who's Jerry Slummer?" asked Dennison.

"He's a man you want to see immediately," was the guarded answer. "Drive down at once to 'The Fashion' saloon, or the corner of Fourth street and Smith's alley. Bring your checkbook with you."

Tom Dennison hesitated. Fourth street and Smith's alley was a most unsavory neighborhood, but, on the other hand, Dennison was a man who had confidence in his shoulders.

"Is it about that franchise?" he guessed, surmising that Ames was talking from a place where he might easily be overheard.

"Yes; hurry!"

Again there was a moment of hesitation.

"I'll be right down," promised Dennison, and, opening the drawer of his library table, he slipped a checkbook in his pocket.

CHAPTER IV.

THE FASHION" saloon was a tumble-down grog shop, with a row of barrels stacked against one wall, and a row of loafers leaning against the barrels. Tang bark had been spread on the floor, but there were so many other things mixed with it that Dennison like lifting his trousers as he walked in.

A puffy man with a neck which started to expand at his ears, was behind the bar, and he was so fat about the middle that his accumulation of grossness seemed to have pushed his eyebrows up, so that he had the effect of perpetually staring, though his eyes were half closed. Both the bartender and his customers seemed a shade resentful at the intrusion of this accomplished stranger of the evening, but they forgave him, more or less, when he went back to the corner table and sat down with old Jerry Slummer and the young swell who had inquired for a stage coach driver.

"This is the man I telephoned you about," announced Ames, with a pleasant smile at the purple-faced old reprobate with whom he sat. "This is Jerry Slummer, and I am told he is the best stage coach driver in this part of the state."

"Is that so?" observed Dennison, blowing his time, and trying not to look his wonder.

"I guess I'm about the only one that's left," mouthed old Jerry, whose swollen face was marked with a thousand little criss-crossed veins, and whose heavily bulbous nose told of endless sodden years.

The bartender came across inquiringly, and cast down at old Jerry a particularly cold stare.

"A little of the same, I think," ordered Ames, by whose side sat a small bottle of beer. "Same for you, Mr. Slummer."

"I recommend this bottle beer, Tom," suggested Ames. "I'd also recommend that you drink it out of the bottle."

"Yes, sir," approved Dennison with a laugh, as he caught sight of the glassware behind the sticky bar.

"Mr. Slummer has had years of experience," went on Ames, looking specifically into Dennison's eyes. "He ulatively into Dennison's eyes. was the last driver on the old Rousto pike. He's cracked his whip over a four-horsed team thousands of times, from Monument square out Peachtree avenue, up Irving road past the cemetery, and on out the pike to Houston. He was worth money in those days."

"I bet I was," asserted Jerry, a watery look coming into his bleary old eyes. He had been sitting huddled in his chair, a victim to the deathlike listlessness which sat on all in that place, but now he straightened up and expanded his chest, and his voice took on a better ring. They had listened to the tales of his one-time prominence in the fashion saloon, until they would listen no more, but here were gentlemen who appreciated a smart man. He owned the stage company at the last. I saved my money and bought stock, and then, two years after the horse cars come in they offered it to me cheap, and I bought up the whole company."

A hoarse chuckle sounded just over them. It was the fat bartender, with the drinks.

"They sure stung Jerry," exulted the bartender. "The stage didn't run two years longer, and that year there was only one stage, and Jerry drove that."

"Well, I owned the company, insisted Jerry, reaching greedily for his scorpion-like liquor.

"Mr. Slummer had quite a lot of political influence in those days," supplemented Ames, again looking speculatively into the eyes of Dennison. "He had a right of way over his route, and he could do almost anything he liked."

"I bet he could," boasted Jerry, again expanding his chest, which had gradually caved back. "I had it in my right of way that I could run any kind of carriage I wanted to, stage, wagon, buggy, anything, or I could tear up the street and fix it to suit myself. All the city officials had free rides."

"Graft was then in its infancy," laughed Ames. "Mr. Slummer still owns all the stock in that company."

Jerry's chest sank in.

"Much good it does me," he regretted. "Old Tub Warren has it in his safe over there. He loaned me $3 worth of drinks on it once, and I never paid him back. He's a fish-blooded man."

There was a moment of silence, in which Jerry Slummer mused on the fish-bloodedness of "Tub" Warren, and he began figuring on the back of an old envelope.

"That old franchise has expired?" questioned Dennison.

"It has thirty days yet to run." Ames told him. "Its last term was for twenty-five years, and it is renewable for a like period, on the payment of $5,000 to the city, if the line is in operation and carrying pasengers on the day of expiration."

Dennison sternly resisted an impulse to whoop, but he did not even shake hands with John Ames.

"How did you ever dig it up?" he wonderingly asked.

"Mere logic," answered Ames with a smile. "I think I could find a perpetual privilege to commit murder, if I looked back through the old archives of any city. Above all things, however, there are forgotten franchises of every sort."

Jerry Slummer moved uneasily. Jerry Slummer was ... ng a long time at the bar.

"I like ... ar way of doing business," he complimented Ames. "If you'd let this chap go 'til tomorrow, after having broached the subject to him at all he would have done nothing but talk, and Bill Cracken would have had him before daylight. I wonder what that bartender's up to."

Ames looked over a minute and then he laughed.

"He's trying to figure a way to get all of that ten dollars," he surmised. "I'm not worried about the bartender, but I am worried about how we're going to give Jerry money enough for this stock to show adequa e compensation in the courts, if it should come to that."

"An offer of a thousand dollars would make him suspicious," mused Dennison.

Ames suddenly chuckled.

"Leave it to me," he advised, and lounged over to where Jerry stood against the bar.

"There's four years' interest on this," announced the bartender, looking up, with knots like walnuts in his forehead. "How do you figure compound interest?"

The simples way I know is to give everybody a drink and keep the ten dollars," laughed Ames.

A general surge of the entire line of loafers against the barrels indicated that, while they might have dull wits they had sharp ears.

"That's what I call a good sport," grinned Tub Warren, displaying a fringed cavity which made his friendliness more horrible to contemplate than his unfriendliness, and he snapped the bill in his money drawer. "What'll you have, gents?"

"First of all, Mr. Slummer will take his stock," suggested Ames, and the bartender made a clumsy salute which was sufficiently in the nature of an apology.

He went to the rusty little safe at the end of the bar, and stooping over, with much grunting and hard breathing, began to twist at the knob. Jerry Slummer also moved up to that end of the bar and Ames followed him.

"You're a poor man now, I believe," said Ames.

"Rotten," agreed Jerry, preparing to be lachrymose about it.

"Then I'll do you a favor," offered Ames confidentially. "This man is very rich, and rich men pay big prices for rare old papers like this to put in their collections. If he takes a fancy to these, charge him a good price for them."

Old Jerry's eyes contracted with avarice.

"How much do you say?" he hoarsely whispered. "Fifty dollars?"

"Nothing so cheap as that, or he won't want them," warned Ames "Charge him five hundred. Charge him a thousand!"

"Good God!" gasped old Jerry, and he held to the bar rail while he strove to comprehend those awe-inspiring figures.

"Here's your stock, Jerry," panted the bartender, rising from the safe, and he threw an age-blackened bundle of oily looking papers on the bar.

"Why, they're on sheepskin parchment," wondered Ames, but Jerry did not hear him.

Jerry was pondering deeply, lost in a trance-like stupor, as he walked back to the table and laid the documents in front of Tom Dennison; nor did old Jerry sit down. He stood, half leaning on the edge of the battered little round table, and half holding to it for support, open-mouthed, glazed-eyed, and breathing heavily.

"You'll notice, Tom, that they're on parchment," recommended Ames softly.

"How many shares were in the original company?" asked Dennison of Jerry; but Jerry was still in a trance.

"One hundred shares," Ames volunteered.

Dennison sighed with relief.

"They're all here," he counted up. "One certificate of sixty shares, one of twenty, three of five and five of one." He folded them in a neat little pile, and affectionately laid on top of them their grimy old string. "How much will you take ... Mr. Slummer?"

Jerry Slum... came out of his trance. His ... dropped so that he could hardly talk, and his eyes were staring as if they would pop out of his head. Three times he tried to talk before he finally made it.

"Two—two—two thousand dollars!" he gasped.

Three times he tried to talk before he made it. "Two—two—two thousan ..." he gasped.

Tom Dennison cast one twinkling glance at Ames, and quietly produced his check book and a fountain pen. Then, and not until then old Jerry Slummer sat down in a squirmy huddled heap, and his face went pale. John Ames hurried to the bar and brought him back a drink of whisky, but old Jerry waived it feebly away, while his eyes watched, in fascination, the magic words and figures forming themselves on that heavenly slip of paper.

With a trembling hand, old Jerry assigned his stock, and buttoned the check in the pocket of his tattered coat.

"Now, if you don't mind, we'll hunt up my lawyer and get a proper witness to this transaction," suggested Dennison, looking at his watch.

"Certainly," assented Jerry Slummer, rising, with five years of youth in his veins. "I want to get out of this dump anyhow," and he looked with disdain on his long-time home.

CHAPTER V.

There was a sudden tremendous activity on Baltimore avenue up Irving road past the cemetery, an activity which began at Monument square and ended out Houston pike at the city limit line. From every source at his command Tom Dennison brought iron rails and wooden ties and an army of men with picks and shovels. These things appeared as if by magic one morning along the entire route, for neither Dennison nor his alert lieutenant, John Ames, had permitted a sign of their intentions to be seen until they were ready to lay the entire track. By 10 o'clock they had torn into the roadway from one end of the route to the other, and the picks were licking into the asphalt like steam riveters, when Bill Cracken drove down from his late breakfast.

"Here, what's all this about?" demanded Bill, as he stopped at the crossing.

Not a workman wavered, as I Bill Cracken, who kept earnest tra k of every inch of paving or sewer contract, for well-founded commercial reasons of his own, jumped out of his car and brought a busy Italian up by the shoulder.

"I say, what is this job?" he rumbled. "Aska de boss!" shrilled the moist little Italian, and jerking away, he slammed his pick into the asphalt.

That seeming to be reasonable advice, Bill Cracken, deserting his car, in the act up the street until he found in the act of giving some directions to a foreman, a tall, black-haired young man in an enviably-fitting gray business suit.

"Are you the boss of the outfit?" Cracken unceremoniously demanded.

"Well, in a way," returned John Ames, pleasantly. "I'm representing the Midstate Interurban company. We're running a line in to Monument Square."

"The devil you are!" snapped big Bill, becoming doubly lop-sided. "Where's your permit?"

"We don't need any," Ames took the trouble to explain. "Mr. Dennison is working under the original franchise of the Houston Pike Stage Coach company."

Bill Cracken was a man who seldom made mistakes. He wasted no time in bluster, or, indeed, in conversation of any kind. He glared at the pleasant John Ames with his very worst eye, then he turned his back on that tall young man, and hit out for his office as fast as his chauffeur could take him there. He had the mayor, the city prosecutor and three lawyers in his office inside of fifteen minutes.

Two days later, there were signs all up and down Baltimore avenue and Irving road. These signs, painted on long wooden trussels, said, "Street closed," and wagons began to deliver sewer pipe along the route.

Most of the residents along those ill-favored highways stood the resultant battle for about a week, and then they took trips out of town or moved to hotels; for the two armies worked night and day, and the ambulance corps complained of overwork. Sometimes the traction gang succeeded in filling up the sewer trench, and sometimes the sewer diggers succeeded in tearing up the traction ties, but nobody seemed to care. Bill Cracken was thoroughly satisfied, as the last week wore on, for there was no miracle by which Tom Dennison could now finish his track in time to have an electric car, or even a horse car, running by the last day of the stage coach franchise. If Tom Dennison or his tall lieutenant worried they did not show it. They had beaten the injunction fight in the beginning. They had secured ground for a terminal station right on Monument Square, and were building it. They were constructing their entering line right down Houston Pike to the city limit, and betrayed a severe confidence, which Bill Cracken characterized as a huge bluff, although at the same time, he had his lawyers examine that old franchise for days on end, under the eyes of the court guardians, who Dennison had appointed on the evening of the day before he began work.

Two days after the expiration of his franchise, Tom Dennison suddenly called off all of his workmen, and even stopped the construction of his terminal building. Bill Cracken met Dennison in the Commercial club, at noon of that day.

"Well, I see you got enough of it," he taunted.

"What's the use?" returned Dennison, with a shrug of his shoulders. "I put up a game enough fight, but there was no possible chance to get those tracks down before day after tomorrow."

"I don't call it a game fight," chuckled Cracken, leering with his best eye. "I call it a fool fight. Nobody ever harpooned me! Now I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll make you that same old proposition, and we'll finish your line down Irving road and Baltimore avenue."

"Wait till next week," returned Dennison. "I'm all tired out, and my men are nearly dead. This has cost me a lot of money, Bill."

"The city's been digging the sewer," retorted Bill Cracken, with a diagonal smile.

CHAPTER VI.

BLAINSBERG blinked its eyes in annoyance. Into the peace and quiet which had prevailed on Irving road and Baltimore avenue for ... there suddenly obtruded the activities of scraping a... she...

This began at about 3 o'clock ... morning, and eleven of his trusty hen... men [illegible] with ... hah, ... the work began ... revenge for being disturbed at that unearthly hour, Bill Cracken turned out mayor, the chief of police, the city prosecutor and the three lawyers, but they did not see much to be done. The men were only shoveling dirt from the center of the street, and by the time a hasty injunction was secured, though no one knew why they were getting it, the men had quit.

Bill Cracken himself was downtown when the crew left the work, and, standing at the turning of Irving road into Baltimore avenue, he was pondering heavily on his new development, when a strange procession came down from Houston pike. It looked like an army at first, an army of half a thousand workmen, with their shovels over their shoulders, and, right in the midst of it, drove the strangest vehicle which Plainsberg had seen in many a year.

It was one of the old green coaches of the Houston pike stage line, rattling and creaking and groaning at every turn of its rheumatic progress, and high on the driver's seat, cracking his whip with all his feeble strength, sat purple-faced old Jerry Slummer!

One black up the street the procession stopped, and a passenger, who had been strangely watching Bill Cracken, stepped out of the shadow of a tree and mounted the coach. He climbed to one of the top seats, and quite ostentatiously handed Jerry Slummer a coin. The passenger was John Ames!

Old Jerry cracked his whip, and the procession moved on. Three blocks further down the coach stopped again, and another passenger mounted. That one was Tom Dennison!

"Now, what in Texas does that mean?" blurted the city prosecutor, who had been put on the ticket because he was already rather than because he was brilliant.

"It means that I'm going to get me some advisers with brains, you boneheads!" blazed Bill Cracken. "I remember myself that old franchise reads that, if the line is in operation and carrying passengers at the time of the expiration of their franchise, they have the right to a renewal!"

"Then you're to make a round trip to make it stick," suggested Cracken's most expensive lawyer.

"That's right," agreed Cracken. "Chief, can't we disperse that riot?"

"We couldn't mass enough men," growled the chief. "I've been asking five years for more men."

"Then telephone somebody in a hurry to pull a ten blow fire alarm down Baltimore avenue!"

The chief shook his head, but he walked over to the police telephone box on the corner, unlocked it, and telephoned.

Five minutes later there was a wild clanging of fire bells, and the mad gallop of fire horses down all the avenues leading to Baltimore avenue and Twelfth street.

Bill Cracken and his advisers jumped in Bill's machine and hurried to the scene of conflagration. But that was an abortive attempt. The fire engines had clustered a block each way on Twelfth street, on both sides of Baltimore avenue, and the confusion was a failure, so far as Jerry Slummer was concerned. Baltimore avenue was too much torn up to permit the passage of fire engines, and they left a clear lane for Jerry's rickety old stage. Jerry drove it unmolested down to Monument square, while Bill Cracken, setting his wits to work, devised heavy barricades against the return trip.

He was a genius, after all, was Bill Cracken, for he executed a brilliant maneuver on Baltimore avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. He remembered a water main valve which had been uncovered by the sewer excavations, and he emptied the city waterworks into that ditch until it had cut an utterly impassable moat across from curb to curb; then he sighed an oath of relief, and lit a cigar, and waited for the return of Jerry Slummer.

Jerry, however, did not return. Instead, he unhitched his horses in the very center of Monument square and turned them over to a workman to lead them away, and left his old coach standing there.

"If don't say nothing in that old franchise about a return trip," he explained to the admiring and sympathetic crowd. "It says 'operating and carrying passengers,' and I done it. Ain't that right, boss?" and he shook hands with Tom Dennison.

"That's right, Jerry," approved Tom Dennison, plodding him his wages. "John, come out to the house to dinner tonight and celebrate."

"Thanks," drawled John, as they edged out of the crowd. "I'm not sure that I can make it tonight, however." He had been out to the Dennison house to dinner twice in the past three weeks, and the amusement rather bored him.

"I'm sorry," regretted Dennison. "My daughter Miriam is coming home today, and I'd like to have you meet her."

"I think I can make it," John hastily remarked.

CHAPTER VII.

THE Dennison house was a beautiful place, and Mrs. Dennison was as charming a hostess as her husband was a hospitable host, and Mirriam Dennison was a dainty and vivacious girl. Indeed, Ames thought, as he sat across the table from her, he had never seen one more beautiful; and he had looked into the eyes of many beautiful women. He had remained a month in this town to gain the privilege of meeting Miriam Dennison on frank terms, to gain the privilege of looking frankly and freely into the depths of her eyes and possibly to read there the end of his roving search.

"You mustn't mind if mother and I stare at you," laughed Miriam. "Father has talked of you so much today that he is to blame if we should happen to seem rude."

"I don't blame you myself," declared Tom Dennison. "John's a marvel. I'm going to adopt him."

"That's very kind of you," returned John amiably. "You'd have a wayward son, though. You'll scarcely ever know where I am."

"Nonsense!" laughed Tom Dennison. "You're going to stay right here and take an important part in my traction business."

John Adams cast another glance at ... Miriam Dennison, but it ... only a fleeting one. He had had ... in her eyes!

Dennison, ... knew men, caught the ... e. "No, I must move!"

A Wild ...row

(Everybody's Magazine.)

Judge M. W. Pinckney at a recent banquet recalled an incident to show that there is some humor associated with such a serious thing as the law. In Dawson City a colored man, Sam Jones by name, was on trial for felony. The judge asked Sam if he desired the appointment of a lawyer to defend him.

"No, sah," said Sam. "I'se gwine to throw myself on the ignorance of the cote."

His Mind Works Like Magic; It Saves Him

His mind works just as quickly in an emergency as it does when he sits down to write a picture play.

Fielding is a wonderful horseman. A while ago when visiting a cowpuncher Fielding was invited to help rope a steer at a roundup. He agreed. There was too much slack on the rope he used and the steer got Fielding's horse into a corner. There seemed to be no escape, but the quick thinking box of the "movie" actor came to his rescue. He raised himself to a standing position on his horse and leaped off on the neck of the steer, grabbing its horns and throwing it as it came ... th horse.

ROMAINE FIELDING.

Shakespeare with as much ease, apparently, as he rides a bucking broncho.

Haven't you seen him riding as if life depended on it, in the "movies"?

What the Camera Saw

A PART OF the daily routine for little girls at Washington seminary is athletics. Dumb-bells are considered just as important, at times, as books. A class is shown going through the course of exercise, which leaves them refreshed and ready again for study. Athletics are also a part of the training in the public schools, and an effort is being made to render them still more important.

THE HORSE at the top of the page hasn't a pedigree or even a name. But he serves a very useful place in the scheme of things as one of the fire horses at Engine House No. 1. Maybe his calling, after all, is as important as that of the daintiest blue-ribbon winner.

The group of four men were enemies in '65, but they met together as friends at the recent convention of Presbyterians. Reading from left to right, they are: General R. N. Adams, of Sherman's army; S. B. Scott, Camp 159, C. S. A.; Rev. J. Wynne Jones, of Baltimore, former G. A. R. chaplain, and Captain George Hillyer, of the Army of Virginia, C. S. A.

DAN O'WOODLAWN, the collie owned by W. M. Stephenson, has won more prizes than he can remember. Ask him and see. He has been exhibited at practically every dog show held recently in the south, and he has seldom gone unrewarded by a string of ribbons. Blue is the color he prefers. Dan is only three years old, and he has just begun upon his prize-winning career. Mr. Stephenson has a hobby for raising prize collies, and Dan is only one of several that he owns. All in all, Atlanta kennels can boast not a few blue-ribbon winners. Among these are the little lap dogs that are not a handful in size, and yet demand an amazing price and as much care as twins.

THOMASTON

THOMASTON.—One of the most important and interesting social events of the early summer was the wedding of Miss Olive Matthews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Millwood Matthews, of this city, to Mr. Randolph Shaffer, of Albany, which took place Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The interior of the home was transformed into a bower with feathery ferns, palms and cut flowers.

Prior to the coming of the bridal party Mrs. I. C. McCrory, of College Park, beautifully sang "Still Is the Night," and as the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was played by Mrs. C. P. Stephens, the bridal party entered the aisle, which was formed by long ropes of white tulle held in place by two young men friends of the bride, Mr. R. E. Hightower, Jr., and Mr. Will Woodall. The young couple were attended by Mrs. H. F. Hay, of Albany, as matron of honor; Miss Agnes Jones, of Albany, as maid of honor, Mr. Young Matthews, as best man, and Mr. Thomas Millwood Matthews, father of the bride, who gave the bride away. The bridal party stood before a background of palms on either side of which were tall pedestals of white upholding crystal candelabras. Rev. J. M. Tumlin, pastor of the Methodist church here, officiating.

The bride's gown was of white crepe meteor with a train of brocaded satin, with a corsage of hand-traced pearls. The long white veil was caught from the face with a wreath of orange blossoms, and the bride's bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

The matron of honor wore a dress of white crepe embroidered pink roses and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses.

The maid of honor wore an imported dress of white voile with pink rosebuds and a bouquet of the same colored roses.

Mrs. Shaffer, of Albany, mother of the groom, was handsome in black brocaded satin and Mrs. Matthews, the bride's mother wore a dress of lavender, with trimmings of black chiffon and brilliants.

After the ceremony a reception followed and later on in the evening the bride and groom left for a trip east and on their return will make their home in Albany. Mr. Shaffer, who is prominent in both the social and business world of that city, will introduce his bride to a charming circle of friends. Thomaston's loss is Albany's gain in the acquisition of this lovely and beautiful young woman who will not be a stranger in her new home, as she has often been the popular and admired guest of Miss Agnes Jones.

The out of town guests at the wedding were Mrs. S. D. Jones, Mrs. Elijah Shaffer, Mrs. D. Jones, all of Albany; Mrs. Fitzgerald Cook, of LaGrange; Misses Louise and Bessie Young, of LaGrange; Messrs. R. M. and W. L. Young, of LaGrange, and Mr. J. W. Young, of Montgomery, Ala.; Miss Agnes Jones, of Albany; Mrs. I. C. McCrory and Miss Frankie McCrory, of College Park.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

MISS COURTENAY HARRISON will be the first of the lovely brides whose marriages will take place this month, the month of months for the all important ceremony.

Wedding bells have become a mere matter of speech except in the little English villages where the weddings are in the forenoon and the church bells form the only music for the wedding party, but June roses still bloom and each June sees a long procession of white veiled maidens and attendant grooms.

Miss Harrison's marriage to Mr. Loring Raoul will take place Monday in the late afternoon and will be witnessed by only the family and relatives. Miss Agnes Harrison and Mr. Norman Raoul will be the only attendants and the ceremony will take place on the porch, Mr. Hendree Harrison, a brother of the bride, officiating, assisted by Dr. C. B. Wilmer, rector of St. Luke's church.

Three out-of-town weddings in which social Atlanta feels a cordial interest are those of Miss Ada Turner to Mr. deBruyn Kops which will be an event of the 4th, taking place in Savannah at the home of the bride's sister and brother, Mr. and Mrs. James Earle, Jr.

The marriage of Miss Hope Peters, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Peters, will take place at their summer home, Felton Place, on the fifth. Miss Peters is marrying Mr. Ashby Henry, of Virginia, the wedding to be an afternoon affair.

Another wedding which will take place in Savannah is that of Miss Laura Boyd to Dr. William Shnatlenberger on Saturday, which will bring a delightful new member to Atlanta's account married set. Miss Boyd has visited here a number of times and will be cordially welcomed.

Other weddings of the week are those of Miss Irene Hartzog to Dr. Edsel Colquitt Wright, which will take place Thursday, and Miss Marie McIntyre to Mr. John Scott, which will be solemnized at high noon Wednesday.

* * * *

An event to which society is looking forward is the presentation Monday of "The Importance of Being Earnest" by a splendid cast from the Players' club.

The feminine roles, in Oscar Wilde's clever play, will be taken by Miss John Marshall Slaton, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. H. H. Stanford and Miss Hildreth Burton Sage.

The other players are Mr. Taylor, Mr. Lamar Hill, Mr. Marsh Adair and Mr. Hamilton Douglas, Jr.

The sale of seats presages a brilliant audience.

After the play the club will entertain at supper at the Piedmont club, supper to be served on the terrace, and a number of other parties have been planned for the same evening.

DIAMONDS

Economically Handled

During the many years of our successfully handling diamonds, we have sought to acquaint ourselves with every detail connected therewith, from the time they are mined until they go into possession of the individual. The information gained from taking the matter up so thoroughly has been a source of our lopping many of the expenses connected therewith until today we do not believe there is a retailer that can offer you greater values for the money.

We are exercising the same careful attention in the selection of our stock as we have in the past, and as is the case when any commodity is bought in exceptionally large quantities we are able to get them much below what they would cost us were we to buy in small lots.

We keep in touch with the mines, and when there is a raise to be made in their price, we are advised of such intention, as has been the case with us in the past, when an advance is contemplated we lay in a tremendous stock. There are many minor reasons that we could mention, all of which point to this as an ideal establishment, from which you can safely make your purchases.

Write or call for our our partial payment plan in detail. Selection packages sent anywhere on request.

It is a face powder and greaseless cream combined. Covers all discolorations, yet is invisible, showing all the interests of the skin perfectly.

It is not an enamel, nor is it a make-up; but is a medicated cream which, after 12 hours' wear is absorbed with beneficial effects on the skin.

It is impervious to perspiration, but does not clog the pores, prevent perspiration or in any way interfere with the natural functions of the body. It will not rub off by contact.

It is popular with the men, for it does not give an effeminate appearance, but does give a perspiration proof, dull finish so essential to well-bred and well-groomed appearance.

It is popular with the ladies, both young and old, for it gives the skin that soft, smooth finish so much desired by every woman.

73 Suits Respond to This Last Call at $16.85

June--the Month
—Of Happy Brides
—Of Sweet Graduates
—Of Gay Travel

WE'VE been busy thinking and planning to get the BEST merchandise suited for each of these classes, as well as for the most of us plain stay-at-home folks.

June practically starts the summer season—there will be many things needed. Ready—whenever you are.

For Wedding Gifts We Recommend

Sterling Silver Card Cases—Satin or polished finish, hand engraved and engine turned. $8.50 to $25.

Combination Vanities—vanity and card case combinations. Made of German silver or the new "Goldin" metal, (tri-plated) that looks like gold. Thin models, hand engraved, long link soldered chain. $2.98.

54 in. Opera or Coat chains—gun metal or German silver, platinum finish. $1 to $6.

Pearl Necklaces 98c to $20.

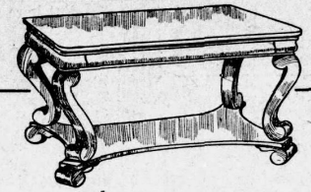
(Main Floor, Center.)



Solid Mahogany Table $35

This massive library table is firmly built throughout of solid mahogany. The workmanship and finish are superb. Size 28x45 inches.

The table is typical of the values in solid mahogany. At $45 is a solid mahogany table 30x48 inches. Other prices range from $20 to $85—the cheapest ones not being solid mahogany.

P. S.—Customers not wishing to pay cash can arrange satisfactory credit terms through our office.

(Furniture, Fourth Floor.)

Former Prices Were up to $39.50

The final call for 73 suits. They will surely march away at this little price. For more than fifty were formerly priced at $35 to $39.50. Of the rest not one was less than $29.75. Every "good" style and material of this season is represented. Choose from:

Bedford Cords, Ratines, Serges, Poplins, Shepherd Checks, Novelties.

$16.85
Values to $39.50

Bulgarian Blouse, Russian Blouse, Cutaway and Straight Coats, Novelties, Plain or draped Skirts, black and colors.

Sale of Royal Society Art Goods

Variously in finished pillow tops, centerpieces, table and library pieces, baby pillows, etc.

$7.50 to $10 Pieces at $2.98

$12 to $17 Pieces at $5.98

Wonderful Dresses at $5.85

Which is not so wonderful when one considers that they were made to retail for $8.50 to $12.50.

But the manufacturer, planning to go to Europe in search of ideas for fall, would not let this little lot of one hundred or so stand in his way.

Dresses are of ratines, linens, striped voiles, all-white lingeries and voiles, and flowered crepes. More different and prettier styles than you would think possible to choose at twice the price of $5.85.

(Ready-to-Wear, Second Floor.)

For Summer Wear: Choose A Madame Grace Corset

For Madame Grace corsets gently mould one's figure in the contour of the present mode.

Perfect lines are established with ease and comfort. In fact, after being fitted by one of our expert corsetieres, you would scarcely be conscious of wearing a corset.

The Wahlon boning in Madame Grace corsets makes them soft and flexible; the materials are fine batistes, coutils and brocades; the trimmings of the daintiest.

Madame Grace corsets fit, wear and satisfy; there's a model for every figure. $5 to $25.

(Corsets, Second Floor.)

Famous "Paristyle" Hair Goods

Paris style hair goods, at their respective prices, are the finest on the market. Thoroughly clean and sanitary, they carry not only the manufacturer's, but also our guarantee for quality and workmanship. Because of the superiority of "Paristyle" hair goods these special sale prices for Monday and Tuesday mean much.

MONROE.—Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Harrison O'Neal, of Winder, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Gussie, and Mr. Lewis Harvey Johnson. The marriage will take place Wednesday evening, June 4, at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. W. T. Hamby, of Amsgusta, will be the officiating minister. The only attendants will be little Miss Clemmie Downing, a ring-bearer and Master Clifford Doole as Cupid. Just before the ceremony Miss Sodier, of Agnes Scott college, will sing an exquisite solo. After the ceremony a reception will be given and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will leave on the midnight train for New York. On June 7 they will sail for Germany.

A number of parties are being arranged for Miss O'Neal, among them being a linen shower by Mrs. L. S. Radford and parties and receptions by Misses Ruby and Ruth Carithers, Mrs. W. H. Quartermain, Mrs. G. A. Johns and the Young Ladies' Sewing club. Quite a number from Monroe will attend the O'Neal-Johnson wedding.

What promise to be one of the most pleasant affairs of the season is the game of ball between the Banaca classe of the Baptist and Methodist Sunday schools of this city on their new grounds near the high school building.

The closing exercises of the Monroe public schools began last Thursday evening. Each number was well rendered. All the exercises would have done credit to any college in our state. Prof. Dendy delivered prizes to twenty-two pupils who had made a perfect attendance during the past year. There were two members of the eleventh grade this year, Misses Jessie Carlton and Lillian Cox. On Sunday morning the commencement sermon was preached at the First Methodist church by Rev. S. J. White.

Miss Florence Day is the guest of Mrs. W. A. Farr, in Athens.

Mrs. Emory Shannon and little son, of Texas, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Roberts.

Mrs. John Ilges and two young sons, of Columbus, are guests of Mrs. Erastus Roberts.

Miss Margaret Newton left Saturday for Social Circle, where she will spend several days before returning to her home in Washington, D. C.

Miss Evelyn Duffy will arrive this week for a visit to Miss Josephine Hammond.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Chapman, of Macon, and Mrs. D. P. Cowgle, of Oglethorpe, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Steve Hester last week.

Miss Ethel Latimer will leave Thursday for her home in Yorkville, S. C., to spend the summer months.

Miss Temperance Vaughn left Saturday for Augusta. Her friends regret that she will not return next year.

Miss Lillian Cox is attending commencement of the L. N. A. this week. Her brother, Mr. George Cox, is a student of that institution.

Misses Carl and John Adcock complimented a number of friends last week with a delightful fish fry and moonlight picnic on Jack's creek. The young people drove out about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and were chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Adcock.

Cartersville Social News

CARTERSVILLE.—The announcement of the engagement of Miss Lillie Harris and Mr. James Moore Reeves, of Atlanta, is one of more than usual interest to a large circle of friends and relatives throughout the south. The wedding will be a brilliant church ceremonial of June 19, and will bring together a number of visitors from Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Among those who will entertain for Miss Harris, prior to her marriage are Miss Rebecca Knight, Miss Nannie Irick, Mrs. R. H. Renfroe, Mrs. W. J. Ham, Miss Emily Daves and others.

Mrs. Charles Milam entertained informally at bridge Thursday. The club prize was won by Mrs. G. W. Young, and the guests' prize by Miss Ella Neel. Mrs. Milam's guests included Mrs. G. W. Young, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Mrs. Harris Cope, Mrs. Ed Strickland, Jr., Mrs. Luther Tripp, Mrs. E. D. Cole, Mrs. Fetus Jones, Misses Ella Neel, Bernice Tumlin and Estelle Strickland.

The week past has been given over almost entirely to functions in honor of the graduating class of the Cartersville High school. Tuesday the class, chaperoned by Mrs. A. G. White and Miss Irick, held their annual picnic at Salt Peter cave. Wednesday morning Mrs. M. Steinberg entertained at a theatorium party in honor of her two daughters, Misses Miriam and Pearl Steinberg, who are members of the class. In compliment to Miss Lila Gilbert, the salutorian of the class, Mrs. Robert Renfroe entertained at heart dice Friday afternoon. Mis Gilbert also was entertained at a theatorium party.

Tuesday evening the third grade complimented the graduates with a reception at the home of Mrs. W. W. Young. The class colors, pink and green, were carried out in detail in the decorations and refreshments. Mrs. Young and her daughters, Misses Caroline and Mary Lou, assisted in doing the honors. Wednesday evening at the Grand opera house the graduating exercises will be held.

Mrs. A. O. Granger entertained for Mr. Graham Granger Monday evening, at her beautiful home, Overlook. Mr. Granger is the valedictorian of his class.

Miss Jessie Cobb, sponsor for P. M. B. Young and Mrs. West McLeod, her chaperon, received many social attentions while in Chattanooga.

Mrs. Colyers Fite and young son arrived this week from Washington City to remain some time with Judge and Mrs. H. W. Fite.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Smith, of Mexico City, are guests of Mr. Smith's sisters, Mrs. Will Young and Mrs. George Autrey.

Miss Lizzie Ford, who has been the guest of her brother, Mr. Hugh Ford, in Pavo, has returned to the city.

PERSONAL MENTION

—Miss Isabel Robinson left Thursday for Annapolis, where she was one of the visiting belles at the hop Saturday evening. Miss Robinson will remain through the week which will close on the 6th with the June ball. The pretty young Atlantian is the guest of Professor and Mrs. Harry E. Smith. Mr. Smith is head of the department of mathematics of the Naval academy and Mrs. Smith was formerly Miss Frances Hayes, daughter of the late Rutherford B. Hayes, former president of the United States. Aside from the official affairs at which Miss Johnson will be an attractive guest, she will be entertained at a series of parties which have been planned in honor by friends made by her father, Mr. Roby Robinson, in his student days at Annapolis. Mr. Robinson is in Washington, where he went to attend a class reunion and dinner.

—Miss Mildred Bobb, of New Orleans, who is visiting Miss Ruth Reid at her home in College Park, was the guest of honor at a pretty luncheon given Saturday by the Misses Ashe at the East Lake Country club, and after luncheon a matinee party was given at the Forsyth, the party including Miss Bobb, Miss Eula Johnson, Miss Ruth Reid, Miss Winifred Ashe, Miss Freida Ashe, Mrs. H. M. Ashe and Mrs. W. W. Reid.

—Miss Mamie L. Pitts will sail on the Hamburg-American line June 14 for Europe, accompanied by a number of young women. The party will drive 400 miles through the mountains of inland Norway and take the North Cape cruise from Trondhjem. The remainder of the summer will be spent in Sweden, Denmark and Germany.

—Mrs. W. S. Gaar, who has been in Detroit, Mich., for the past two weeks attending the O. R. C. convention is now in Chicago, Ill., for a visit to friends. Before returning to Atlanta, she will visit friends and relatives in Danville, Kentucky and Tennessee and Alabama, arriving home in the early fall.

—The illness of Mrs. Harvey North in Newnan and Mrs. Leigh Palmer in Washington, D. C., is cause for regret to their Atlanta friends. Both sisters have undergone operations for appendicitis within the past week. The operations were successful and their early recovery is being anticipated.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Wheatley, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Nunnally since their return from Syracuse, where they went immediately after their marriage, have taken possession of their apartments at the Sumner, on Juniper street.

—Miss Ethel Louise Green and Miss Leila Green left Wednesday morning to spend the day in Chattanooga. They will then go to their summer home, "Mount View," for the summer. They have as their guest Miss Anna Kate Green, of Kirkwood, Ga.

—Dr. H. C. White, Miss Coates Benedict and Miss Harriet Benedict motored over from Athens for the week-end. Dr. White and Miss Coates Benedict are the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Jr., and Miss Harriet Benedict is with Miss Louise Broyles.

—Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Pease, of Dallas, Tex., are spending several days in the city visiting relatives, and are at present the guests of Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Griffin. Mr. Pease formerly lived in Atlanta but has been in Texas for the past eight years.

—Dr. and Mrs. J. Russell Mitchell have returned from their wedding journey to Washington, D. C., where they have been attending the world's general conference of Seventh Day Adventists, will be at home at 567 Woodward avenue.

—Mrs. David Roland Bootes will leave Sunday for a two months' visit in Indianapolis, Chicago and Danville, Ill.

—Mrs. R. B. Barnett was hostess at luncheon Thursday in compliment to her sister, Miss Dora Wilhite.

Attractive Cedartown Girl

MISS NELL FIELDER.
Miss Fielder is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kendall Fielder, of Cedartown. She was maid of honor for the Polk division at the U. C. V. reunion.

—Mr. Fred Stewart has returned from a ten days' visit to New York, Boston and Philadelphia. Mr. Stewart made the trip going north by steamer from Jacksonville and returning by rail via Washington, D. C.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Dunlap are spending some time with their daughter, Mrs. Frank E. Markel, on Boulevard. Next week Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap will be with Mr. and Mrs. Luther Jernigan in Decatur.

—Mr. and Mrs. George C. Speir left last night for Atlantic Beach and on their return on June 10, will entertain at a musical and dancing party in honor of several out-of-town guests who are visiting in Atlanta.

—Miss Annie Rose McCleod, of Hattiesburg, Miss., who was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Robert H. MacDougald, and Miss Kate Calhoun, has returned home after being delightfully entertained in Atlanta.

—Mrs. R. H. Baker, of Dahlonega, is convalescent from her recent illness at the Wesley Memorial hospital, and is the guest of relatives on Houston street for several days before returning home.

—Miss Netta Jones, of Montgomery, is spending the week-end with Mrs. Virginius Hitt at her home on West Fifth street, en route from Chattanooga, where she was a sponsor at the reunion.

—Mrs. Thomas E. Green is visiting her mother, Mrs. John N. Booth, in Athens, Ga., for a few weeks. When she returns from there she will go to her summer home, "Hazlehurst," in north Georgia.

—Mrs. Lyman Hall has issued invitations to the wedding of her daughter, Muriel Russell, and Mr. Curtis Lewis Turner, on the evening of Tuesday, the 17th of June, at 9 o'clock, at St. Luke's church.

—Miss Elizabeth Boyd, who has been delightfully entertained as the guest of Miss Carolyn King, will return home Wednesday.

Silver Tea Sets

Grace is wonderfully wrought with endurance in the designing of the Silver Tea Sets we are showing.

They exemplify at its height of refinement the quaintness or the finely drawn aloofness which should be, one or the other, typical of the tea set, and they have the underlying essentials of the best construction and finish.

They are ideal wedding gifts.

THIS IS SURE TO MAKE THE HAIR GROW

It is a real pity to see women and men letting themselves get bald, letting their hair get dry, dead and faded, when it is so easy and so cheap to have luxuriant hair. A course of the scalp treatments given by the experts of the Randolph Co. Hair Dressing Parlors, 58 1-2 Whitehall street, will give most surprising results. The course is very cheap and does not require much time. Dandruff stopped in one or two treatments. Women can get rid of all wrinkles and look years younger if they will consult Mrs. Schirmer and use the formulas she prescribes. Her method of Bust development is perfectly safe and splendidly effective. Pupils trained in Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair Dressing, Marcel Waving and Hair Work, so that they can soon earn an independent living. Always something new. Just received new Hair Goods, new Toilet Articles, new Shampoo Chairs, new Towel Sterilizing Cabinets, new Perfumes, Toilet Waters and Creams.—(Advt.)

Ohio Electric---

The Suburban Electric Car

The Car With Many Exclusive Features

The Car That Will Go and Come Over Country Roads

Features of The Electric Beautiful

THERE is an old saying that "When the desire to do is accompanied by the power to accomplish, things happen!" No better example of the truth of this statement could be given than that which is found in the new Ohio Electric cars.

It was the desire to make the very finest electric cars that could be built, and the power to accomplish that end, that resulted in the exceptionally beautiful and luxurious models shown this year.

The high efficiency shaft drive without universal joints (patented), one of the original and distinctive features of the Ohio, is of course still retained. The motor is connected directly to the shaft. There are no concealed chains or gear reductions. Quiet, easy running is assured under all conditions.

It is this elimination of power losses, in conjunction with unusual battery capacity, that enables every Ohio Electric owner to obtain mileage per charge that has heretofore only been dreamed of.

Strongest, most reliable and most easily operated brakes on any electric car. Magnetic brake (Patented), conveniently located on the control. Simply press the button to stop the car.

Automatic cut-out on emergency brake pedal (Patented). Turns off the power when brake is applied. Yale lock on controller and door. One key for both.

Body—Ohio bodies this year embrace very attractive and distinctive new Colonial and Continental types, affording to the most discriminating buyer a wide range of choice. Particular attention has been given to body lines, so as to obtain the most pleasing proportions without sacrificing the comfort and stability for which Ohio Electric cars are renowned.

LOVELY MEMBER OF UNMARRIED SET

MISS ALICE MAY FREEMAN. —Photograph by Hearn.

Miss Freeman is the elder daughter of Mrs. Lelia Lowry Freeman, and is one of the prettiest and most popular members of the unmarried set.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

THE week has been filled with a round of informal entertaining at which brides-elect, visiting girls and recent brides have been the honor guests. The affairs were characterized by the simplicity of summer galeties, and the first of the really summer gowns made their appearance.

Miss Elizabeth Boyd, who is visiting Miss Carolyn King; Miss Mildred Bobb, of New Orleans, who has been with Miss Ruth Reid, and Miss Edith Bryson, of Savannah, the guest of Miss Eula Jackson, were a trio of charming girls who were the central figures in groups entertained at tea at the Driving club Thursday afternoon.

Miss Boyd's visit has been filled with delightful entertaining at which her Atlanta friends have welcomed her return to her former home.

Miss Bryson is a school friend of Miss Jackson's, both young women arriving Thursday from New York, where they have been studying at "The Castle."

In a gown of old gold charmeuse worn with a plaited tunic of French blue and a picture hat of black, Miss Bryson was very attractive. Miss Jackson's gown of blue crepe de chine being very becoming to its blue-eyed wearer.

Miss Bobb is a younger sister of Miss Marjorie Bobb, who was a lovely visitor of last summer, and is as charming and attractive as her popular sister.

AMONG the prospective brides who have been entertained during the week were Miss Courtenay Harrison, Miss Muriel Hall, Miss Minne Van Epps, three members of a study class which is one of the most interesting and enthusiastic organizations among the younger women.

Friday afternoon the brides-elect were the honor guests entertained by another club member, Miss Marion Woodward, who gave a delightful tea, the other guests including the club and a number of outside friends.

Miss Charles Owens is another lovely bride-elect who has been entertained during the week, Miss Owens sharing honors with Miss Harrison at the luncheon which Miss Connally gave Saturday.

MRS. CHARLES HOPKINS, JR., who was Miss Helen Payne, was the honor guest at two of the lovely affairs of the week, luncheons at which Mrs. James L. Dickey, Jr., entertained at Arden, and that at which Miss Nancy Hill Hopkins was hostess.

Among the affairs which will add to the pleasure of society this week, a number will be in honor of the popular young bride.

CLUBS are having their final meetings of the year, the Atlanta Woman's club meeting for the last time before fall Monday, when an interesting program marked the close and the election of officers was held. Short talks were made on the club's work by Mrs. H. H. Tucker, Mrs. William Hurd Hillyer, Mrs. Lott Warren, Mrs. H. B. Scott, Mrs. P. H. McGovern, Mrs. Stockbridge, Mrs. Boling Jones, Mrs. Lindsay Johnson, of Rome; Mrs. H. H. Merry, Pelham; Mrs. James Jackson and Miss Alice Baxter.

The officers elected are Mrs. A. P. Coles, president; Miss Alice Baxter, first vice president; Mrs. Linton Hopkins, second vice president; Mrs. Lott Warren, recording secretary; Mrs. Albert Akers, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. M. M. Davies, treasurer; Mrs. Arthur Powell, auditor and Mrs. Victor Kriegshaber, corresponding secretary.

THE re-election of Mrs. Samuel M. Inman as president of the Atlanta Art association is one that assures the continued effort and success of that organization.

The choice of the other officers, some of whom have previously served, is equally happy, Mrs. Clarence Blosser as recording secretary and Mrs. E. W. More treasurer.

The vice presidents named are first, Mr. C. B. Bidwell; second, Mr. W. L. Cosgrove; third, Mrs. Richard Johnston. Mrs. H. B. Scott was named corresponding secretary.

AN event of Monday afternoon was the tea at which Mrs. Bun Wylie entertained a number of friends in compliment to Mrs. Paul Seydel, of New York, Mrs. John Addy, of Boston, and Mrs. Barrett, of Kentucky.

The living room where the guests were received was adorned with quantities of pink roses, clusters of Dorothy Perkins roses filled jardinieres and vases and the mantels were wreathed with rose vines.

In the dining room a brown wicker basket holding clusters of the delicate pink roses formed the centre of the tea table, and the ices and bon bons continued the suggestion of pink and white.

Punch was served by Miss Elizabeth Loving and Miss Linda Miller.

Mrs. Wylie wore a lovely gown of pale blue charmeuse, the corsage effectively appliqued with gold.

Mrs. Seydel's gown of white lace was draped over white duchesse satin and she wore a corsage of bouquet of pale pink Killarney roses. Mrs. Barrett's was a gown of white chiffon made over pink, and —rs. Addy was costumed in cream lace draped over satin.

MR. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooney's dinner for the members of the Players' club for the new play was a delightful event of Friday evening at the Piedmont Driving club.

Arranged on the terrace, the table being beautifully decorated in pink and white. A heavy silver vase in the centre of the table, filled with pink roses, a plateau of sweet peas at the base giving added fragrance and beauty to the centerpiece. The ladies received clusters of sweet peas for bouquets after the dinner and the appropriate favors were little players' masks.

The guests included Miss Hildreth Burton Smith, Miss Helen Dargan, Miss Margaret Rawkins, Miss Ellen Meeks, Mrs. Maddeus Wilkins, Mrs. Ida Howell Cramer, Dr. and Mrs. William Owens, Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. Haddeus Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Felder, Mr. Warren Rogers, Mr. Lamar Hill, Mr. Marsh Adair, Mr. Hamilton Douglas, Mr. Frank Taylor and Mr. Thomas Donaldson.

Governor's Horse Guard To Give Ball

The Governor's Horse Guard will give a dance in Taft hall on Thursday evening, June 12, 1913, this being the last one given before the troop leaves for St. Simons Island to attend their annual encampment.

One thousand cards have been issued to the friends and acquaintances of the troop, and the Jefferson Davis club and Entre Nous have also joined with the troop in giving the dance.

All arrangements are in the hands of a committee of three, composed of R. Marshall Todd, chairman; S. LaPrade Sloan and E. Horine Andrews.

Miss Burkhardt Entertains

The Dixie Entertainers' club held its first meeting at the home of the secretary, Miss Lillian Burkhardt, Thursday evening.

Games, music, singing and refreshments were enjoyed by those present.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Lottie Parschal, corner Gray street and Western avenue.

A LOVELY TEXAS VISITOR

MRS. CARNEY WILSON MIMMS, OF SAN ANTONIO.

Mrs. Mimms has been the admired guest of Senator and Mrs. Carney, who are living at the Governor Bloxham home in Tallahassee during the session of the Florida legislature. Mrs. Mimms before her marriage was Miss Adella McCluer, a great niece of James K. Polk.

HAPPENINGS IN LONDONTOWN

LONDON, May 31.—The king and queen dined with Lord Roseberry the other day. The famous ex-premier must be fascinating company indeed to have the honor of dining their majesties twice in one season. It is noticeable, by the way, that the new German ambassador has taken the place of Mr. Whitelaw Reid in being included in the "king's set" for private dinner functions. Prince and Princess Lichnowsky are in for a good time.

The king motored down to Newmarket for the Two Thousand Guineas, arriving in time for lunch with a few friends in his private room in the Jockey Club stand. The usual people were present in the paddock, and after the racing the king kept up a custom which has almost become a tradition of dining with one of the influential racing Jews. This time it was not Sir Ernest Cassel, but Mr. Leopold de Rothschild, at Palace house. While his majesty was enjoying himself at Newmarket, his box at the opera was occupied by Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck and Prince Alexander of Battenberg, the performance being "Das Rheingold."

The queen's interest in English china was so fired by her recent visit to the potteries that she paid a private visit to Harrod's stores and took Princess Harrod's stores and took Princess Mary with her, so that the princess might see some of the beautiful manufactures which had been displayed to her parents the previous week. Her majesty took special pleasure in pointing out to her daughter those articles which she had seen in the actual process of making, and in inspecting the pecial case which contains the pieces invented to the king and his consort s souvenirs on their tour. Princess Mary was greatly interested in Boulle-ware's beautiful plaque of King Edward, and also in the breakfast set made for Queen Alexandra, of which each piece bears the reproduction of a telegraph taken by herself. The historic services are also noteworthy, including those manufactured for three successive durbars.

The very generous way in which her majesties have been encouraging state charities since their reign began has had one inconvenient result. In the old Victorian days the sovereign was supposed to limit her benefactions to certain classes of public work, and it was tacitly left to the then prince of Wales to dispense royal patronage to other departments. Under the Edwardian regime both these channels of generosity flowed into one broad stream, and Queen Alexandra made it her private concern to supplement these official gifts by an amount of personal benefit, the whose extent is even now hardly realized. But nowadays the outlets for charity have become so wide and varied that King George and Queen Mary have added to their alms list scores of enterprises which were undreamed of in the childhood of some of us. Girls' clubs and play centers, boy scouts and public school missions, and a host of other projects find a willing ear in the royal family to their appeals.

But there is reason to know that in certain quarters the general public are disposed to trade upon royal generosity by soliciting their majesties' patronage for hosts of things which have a purely local interest. The keeper of the privy purse has, therefore, found it necessary to lay down a wholesome rule in these matters, in order to relieve the king, who cannot possibly do for one what cannot be done for all. Some time ago Queen Mary caused it to be known that her public duties could not be discharged properly if she had to devote precious time to such things as church bazaars. One would not be surprised if another friendly hint of the sort is sent out one of these day with regard to some other classes of appeals of the same nature. Some correspondence about these things which has come to light shows that there is a keen desire in the highest quarters to sympathize with all good works; but the public at large has not yet learned where to draw the line.

The king of Spain will probably visit Princess Henry of Battenberg at Barton Manor, Isle of Wight, this summer. The property includes very beautiful gardens, and among the many Edens on the island these may take first place. Barton Manor belongs to the king; but Queen Mary finds that the climate does not suit her, and so his majesty is only too ready to place it at his aunt's disposal. The exchange of visits between relatives who are known to have been at loggerheads shows that their differences have had a happy issue. Queen Victoria has suffered most, but her wonderful tact which has been referred to as "royal cement," has been used most successfully, though her position has been an exceedingly trying one.

An amusing story is being told of a suffragette who was caught desecrating the greens of a suburban golf course. The infuriated members spanked her soundly in the most unexpected places, which so enraged the lady that she went to the nearest police station for redress. The superintendent having listened to her story, asked her if she could identify her assailants. "No," replied the militant one, "it was all done in the dark." "Well," replied the officer, "you had better step into my office, ma'am, while we take the impressions of the finger prints." Who after all will say that some policemen are not humorists.

Mrs. Charles Lawrence has returned from the Riviera to 22 Eaton square, where she and her husband, a young brother of Lord Lawrence, give the most delightful of dinner parties, at which are always very interesting people. Mrs. Lawrence, an attractive and very well educated American, has, however, other interests besides society, spending much time in charitable undertakings, in particular the Royal Hospital for Insurables, at Putney. Mr. Charles Lawrence elected for a commercial career after leaving Marlborough, and, being a man of unbounded energy, has done well, and is today an authority on railway matters.

When Lord Kitchener returns to London he will, it is believed, be the recipient of a much coveted honor.

A well known Tory member of Parliament for a constituency in the Midlands has placed his resignation in the hands of the Tory whips, and it rests with them as to when the vacancy shall be declared.

The ubiquitous snap shotter has upset the plans of Mr. Henley, the well known cloak room superintendent at the house of commons, who is retiring after so many years' service. Mr. Henley has a horror of publicity, and has refused, not only to be interviewed, but to be photographed. But the best laid schemes of mice and men aft gang agley, and Mr. Henley, to his horror, was snap shotted by a photographer in ambush as he was leaving the house.

A prominent sporting man who attended the horrible spectacle of a man and rat fight the other day at Biarritz will doubtless be surprised to learn that he was recognized, despite his attempt to disguise himself.

The sacred cause of charity is being affected in some degree by the suffragette militant campaign. At several of the historic institutions now closed for fear of outrage to the public a small charge is made for admission, the proceeds going to the local hospitals. This money in consequence is now lost to the hospitals, which can ill spare it.

There is at possibility of the appointment of a new government official in the role of director of the flying service. The need for such an official is strongly felt in service aviation circles.

The engagement of Madame Steinheil to a well known peer is expected to be announced shortly.

Mr. Stewart to Give Dance

Mr. John T. Stewart will entertain at a large dancing party on Wednesday evening at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Stewart, on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Miss Dorothy Smith and Miss Josephine Peabody will serve punch.

One hundred and fifty guests will attend.

The New Shirtwaists

By Anne Rittenhouse

THERE is a feeling on the part of many women that they must get away from that shirtwaist which is universal, made of muslin with a rolling Robespierre collar and wide, graded pleated frills running from collar to bust.

You see it wherever civilized women wear shirtwaists. If the man who invented it drew royalties on its sale he might not have to invent anything else in his life. It is comfortable, it is often becoming, it is easy to make and easier to buy, and for all these reasons there is a reaction against it by those women who wish to be a bit different from their neighbors.

Therefore, the wash silk shirt grows in popularity. It is copied after the polo shirt worn by men and is exceedingly cool and comfortable. It has no frills or furbelows, no fancy neckwear, no ornamental cuffs. It is definitely mannish.

Heavy white silk is the usual weave chosen, which is expensive, but durable. It sells for about $1 a yard and takes a trifle over three yards to make a shirt, and this is possibly why the shops get $7 apiece for them.

The Austrian and English tub silks are a bit more expensive because of their excellent make and the cost of importing, and women like them for their stripes and their quaint and artistic colorings. No matter what the choice of fabric the make of the shirt is the same. Those women who attempt to put hand embroidery or a bit of lace on any part of the surface do not show a proper knowledge of clothes.

The shirt may be cut with or without a yoke, although popular fashion calls for the former; one sees it on the shirts of men as well as of women, and it is claimed that one gets more freedom of movement in the shoulders by it than by shoulder seams cut in the ordinary way. The kimono sleeve is taboo, for it would defeat the object of being comfortable and handicap the arm movement in a disagreeable way.

If the lowered armhole is used it must not be exaggerated and the under arm part of the shirt must be long enough not to catch the arm when it is lifted on a level with the shoulder.

Negligee Waists of Striped Silk.

THE tub silk is a comfortable material to use for blouse or frock because it does not require starch and does not retain moisture. The striped silks give a chance for color scheme and are therefore very much liked by women who do not care for dead white. It is true they cannot be worn with separate white skirts unless one wishes to take a departure from accepted fashions. There is no reason against it especially as women are wearing brilliant waists in silk and satin that present striking contrast to their suits.

Once there was a fashion for wearing house frocks of striped silk. This was in the days when skirts were draped and bodices and collars had cuffs of embroidered batiste or net. This day has returned and brought its fashions with it, for it is one of the quaint truths of the season that the Oriental and the mid-Victorian are linked.

If the strictly severe polo shirtwaist is not becoming in the striped silks because a woman's figure is too thin or too full, then one can depart from the model by making a deep shoulder yoke and gathering to it the silk. Gathers are better than pleats, for they do not behave in an ill way under a hot iron.

Instead of seam beading one or two rows of machine stitching are used on seams that are turned under and pressed down flat. In this work is shown the difference between an amateur and an expert. For the former does not get the seams absolutely flat and regular, and the consequence is that they pucker under the machine stitching and become worse when they are ironed.

Of course there are other ways of making these negligee shirts in colored silk, and ways that are more essentially feminine. A bit of fine embroidered batiste takes away from the severity and adds incidentally not only to the original cost but to the laundry bills.

The newest kind of collar, which is not the popular kind, is a round bib hung to the collar band at the back of the neck and sloping to rounded points in front. If one wishes to add such a collar to a striped silk waist, then it would be well to make a pair of cuffs to match and put them on the tight cuffs of the sleeves.

Polo Skirt of White Silk.

THE average woman, when making negligee shirts of this heavy Chinese silk, follows the conventional pattern and does not indulge in frills. She spends her time in making sure that the shoulders are broad enough, that the under arm line is long enough, and that there is a tape belt put at the right spot which keeps the shirt from pulling up when one lifts the arms.

All the seams are lapped and stitched, the sleeves have no fulness whatever, the fastening in front is through a box plait stitched at each edge and the collar band is finished with a button at back and one in front. The collar is separate and is bought at the haberdasher's. It is a high, straight, turnover cut to points in front and held up by a soft four-in-hand tie.

The sleeves reach to the wrist and are finished with two-inch turnover cuffs held through by link buttons. Such a blouse as this is an admirable one to wear with all kinds of summer coat suits.

The Extensive Skirt.

WHEN the fashion first came in of extending the top edge of the skirt beyond the normal waist line women found it difficult to do; they did not know how to hang it from this artificial waist line and the result was a great number of ill fitting skirts.

Then the manufacturers invented inside belting and the problem was instantly solved. This method holds good today in white wash skirts, whether they are of crash, linen or duck. Unless one is an extremist and is going in for that high, square waist line which curves slightly outward in front the extension to the skirt will be only slightly above the normal waist line. If there is any fulness it is pushed to the back or taken up in slight darts at the side of the front. The inside belt should also be darted, so that it will lift the waist line and not allow the skirt to slip up and down.

The top of the skirt is kept steady by a row of stitching put exactly along the juncture of the belt and the fabric. There is no buckle, no bow and no sign of the belt fastening, as it must be done with small hooks and eyes that do not bulge through the soft fabric of the skirt.

Linen Shower at Wesley Hospital

The annual linen shower at Wesley Memorial hospital will be given at that institution, on Auburn avenue, on June 28.

The Woman's Auxiliary to the hospital has requested that the pastors throughout the state preach on the beautiful life of John Wesley before that date, urging their respective congregations to send generous donations of both cash and linen to aid the hospital work.

The charity wards, especially the little children, need beds. Little beds can be purchased complete for $15. If there is some one who wishes to make such a donation, cash may be sent to the financial secretary, Mrs. J. H. Bradfield, 501 South Pryor street, Atlanta, and donations may be forwarded direct to Wesley Memorial hospital, Auburn avenue.

Classic Play Given By Hanna School

The commencement of the Hanna school, held at the Grand on the night of May 28, was one of the most brilliant entertainments of the past week.

A large and representative audience witnessed the exercises. Where all were so good, it is hard to discriminate, yet special mention seems due to the dancing of Miss Dorothy Watson and Miss Theodora Warfield.

Miss Mary Griffth filled the role of Endymion in an admirable manner, and the beautiful voice of Miss Mamie Clyburn added largely to the success of the occasion.

The chorus work and spectacular features were fine, as was the play itself, a beautiful adaptation from Keat's "Endymion."

FORSYTH

FORSYTH.—Miss Clara Fletcher, who will be the first of Forsyth's June brides, was the honor guest at the meeting of the Game club Tuesday afternoon, with Miss Louise Wallace. HERE! MEN OF Moderate Hair READ THIS!

You will often see a man who fulfills your ideal of a man in almost every particular. He may have a good head, fine physique, perfect manners, an interesting personality and bear himself with the distinguished air of a gentleman. His linen is immaculate and his clothes faultless as to cut and material. But all the pleasant first impressions are ruined when you discover the collar and shoulders of his coat covered with loose hair and flakes of dandruff.

This is an indication of personal carelessness, not to say uncleanliness. You feel like telling him to get a bottle of Newbro's Herpicide, and if you are a real friend to him you WILL tell him. This remarkable remedy would in a short time remove every trace of dandruff from his head, stop his hair from falling and prevent him from becoming bald. Bald-headed men always look old whether they are or not.

Dandruff is due to a germ which causes the scale-like accumulation. Newbro's Herpicide, used intelligently, checks this accumulation, prevents the hair from falling out and stops that frightful itching of the scalp almost instantly. It has a most delightful odor.

Herpicide is the Original Remedy, that destroys dandruff. There is nothing in the world just like it, nothing that is just as good.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes, is sold by all druggists who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications obtained at the good barber shops.

Keeping on Being Successful

Would So and So keep on advertising his hats, or Such and Such his shoes, if what they have to sell wasn't backed by the right kind of quality?

Merchants and manufacturers who come out and tell you all about their product wouldn't keep on being successful unless they supported their advertising with their reputation.

This is why you are safe in patronizing a business that advertises. Now and then some voracious individual or firm tries to "put one over" on the public, but the success of such a house usually is shortlived.

If you see a manufacturer or a retailer advertising steadily and constantly in THE ATLANTA JOURNAL you may be sure his business is successful. If his business is successful his product must be good. Therefore watch the advertisements in THE JOURNAL and buy accordingly.

FITZGERALD

FITZGERALD.—Mrs. James Elbert Turner entertained the Matrons' club and a few other guests most charmingly Friday afternoon in honor of Miss May Wilcox, a bride-elect. Yellow daisies and nasturtiums were used in decoration, and the color note of yellow was seen in the score cards and dainty refreshments. The club prize was won by Mrs. Thomas J. Dickey, and the guest prize by Mrs. C. E. Baker, both being dainty fans. The guests were Miss May Wilcox, Miss Mae Lillie Dorsey, Mrs. Thomas M. Grin, Mrs. Thomas J. Dickey, Mrs. Ansel Cook, Mrs. George Ricker, Mrs. C. A. Holtzendorf, Mrs. R. E. Elgin, Mrs. James Lawrence McCarty, Mrs. Lon Dickey, Mrs. H. B. Ritchie and Mrs. C. E. Baker and her guest, Mrs. Brighton, of Savannah. Miss Martha Turner entertained the guests with several songs during the afternoon.

Mrs. Thomas J. Dickey entertained at a delightful 5 o'clock tea Wednesday at Schaeffer's pharmacy in honor of Miss Kathleen Braswell, whose marriage will be an event of the coming week. The place cards bore the lovely picture of a bride, and the guests number nine. Miss Florence Roberts, of Ocilla, was a special guest, also Mrs. Fred Schaeffer, who recently moved to Fitzgerald from West Point, having visited her a number of times as Miss Marie Johnson, of Talbotton.

Prof. F. H. McMurray and daughter, Miss Margaret, of Columbia university, are spending some time here, being interested financially in this county.

Mrs. Belle Lynn, who formerly lived here, is visiting the family of Prof. R. J. Prentiss, being now from Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. J. C. Ligeour and daughter, Miss Ethel, are at Tarpon Spring, Fla., to spend some time.

Miss May Wilcox, whose marriage to Mr. Henry Haywood Turney, of Atlanta, is announced for June 25, is being delightfully entertained in a social way.

Mrs. Alvin H. Turmond's announcement luncheon at noon was a beautiful affair given in her honor. The luncheon table was covered with a cloth, and in the center was a crystal bowl filled with pink and white sweet peas, surrounded by small bowls holding the same flowers mingled with southern smilax. The place cards were handpainted in sunbirds, holding the wedding ring, and the favors were pink wedding slippers, holding pink and white mints, the same pretty color note being seen in the ices and cakes. Little Misses Dorothy and Margaret Pope Thurmond delivered telegrams to each guest, announcing the engagement. Covers were laid for twelve, and Mrs. Thurmond's guests included Miss Wilcox, Miss Maude Glover, Miss Verna McLauchlin, Miss Hattie Taylor, Miss Fannie Bond, Miss Kathleen Braswell, Miss Mildred Wootten, Miss Mildred Hanger, Miss Eula Garbutt, Miss Elizabeth Pryor, Miss Adelle Majors.

Mrs. George Ernest Ricker entertained at a dainty Wednesday afternoon, in compliance with the request of Miss Mae Wilcox, calling a meeting of the executive board, of which Miss Wilcox is president. Instead of discussing the regular business of the club, the question of love dissected. Mrs. Harold Lamb presiding. The honor guest was presented with a beautiful silver cut-glass tray, a gift from the executive board, which is composed of Mrs. Edward Russell, Mrs. Joseph B. Wall, Mrs. Harold Small, Mrs. George E. Ricker, Mrs. Thomas J. Dickey, Mrs. Almonte Jones, Miss Isidor Geldres, Mrs. Cornelia Hoover, Mrs. E. N. Davis, Mrs. John B. Seanor. After the meeting refreshments consisting of "Cupid's Delight" and angel food cake were served, the club colors, green and white being used.

Another pretty event in honor of Miss Wilcox was Miss Maude Glover's luncheon, Pink and white sweet peas were used to decorate the luncheon table, and the same colors were continued in the iced cakes. Miss Glover's guests included besides the honor guest, Miss Kathleen Braswell, a bride of next month, Miss Robert Pate, Miss Eula P. Garbutt, Miss Verna McLauchlin.

Miss Kathleen Braswell, whose marriage to Mr. Fletcher Stewart, of Atlanta, is to be an event of June 5 is being delightfully entertained. Miss Lillie Dorsey "rose bud" luncheon Tuesday being the first of a series of parties in her honor. The guests were seated at tables that were decorated with bowls of pink roses, and the place cards were hand-painted in pink rosebuds, assisting the hostess were her mother, Mrs. T. L. Griner, Miss Edith Gartner and Miss Paula Patrick, and invited for the affair were twenty-four guests.

One of the most delightful affairs of the week was Mrs. James Lawrence McCarty's miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon, in compliment to Miss Kathleen Braswell, a bride-elect. The guests were received in the living room, where vases of sweet peas were used for decoration, and in the dining room roses were used to decorate the table effectively and charmingly. Receiving with the hostess and honor guests were Mrs. Fred Schaefer, who arrived last week from West Point to make this her home, and Mrs. George Kilcrease. Assisting were Misses Lottie Ginger, Mrs. Thomas J. Dickey, Mrs. Lottie Wise and little Misses Elizabeth McCarty, Margaret Wise, Kathleen Dickey and Dorothy Thurmond.

Mrs. Horace B. Ritchie entertained delightfully Tuesday afternoon, inviting the members of the Tuesday Afternoon club and a number of other friends. A Splendid Exhibition of English Minton China

You Are Invited to Come

The American representative of the famous Minton factory will bring his new samples—direct from England—on display in our China room next Tuesday and Wednesday, June 3rd and 4th.

This is the first time the public has had an opportunity to see a display of the full line of this celebrated china.

Service Plates costing from $50.00 to $500 a dozen will be shown. In addition to cups and saucers and other table pieces in the finest qualities ever brought to America, you will see many new and handsome patterns at prices attractive to all.

We are the exclusive agents here for Minton. This kind of china is almost as elastic as metal—it doesn't easily break, chip or crack. In the long run it is the most economical quality to buy.

This exhibition is well worth a special visit to the store for anyone interested in choice china.

Make a special effort to call Tuesday.

Guaranteed Pure, Long Staple Cotton Felt

The Only Bonded Mattress Dealers Offer

The Gholstin Sanitary Felt Mattress

Is guaranteed to be the best mattress possible to produce at any price. It is made of purest long staple cotton woven into layers of indestructible, sanitized felt. Each layer is placed with exactness one upon the other so that perfect uniformity is secured. This felt is encased in the best ticking—plain stripe or fancy.

We agree to forfeit $100 to any purchaser who can find other than staple cotton felt in The Gholstin Sanitary Felt Mattress.

Ours is the oldest, largest and best equipped mattress factory in the south. We permit none but skilled employees to make The Gholstin, because it is built by hand and requires expert knowledge.

We do not renovate or make over mattresses. We have no way of knowing to what contagious disease an old mattress may have been exposed. We advise you to be sure that the factory which makes your mattress is sanitary. In addition to supplying our customers the best mattress possible to make we safeguard their health.

The Gholstin will never lump, pack down or become hard. Given an occasional sun bath it will last a generation.

Ask your dealer. He should be able to supply you. If not write us.

Closing Exercises of School

The North avenue Presbyterian school held Friday morning an interesting closing exercise. The individuality of the children was shown in the program which they had arranged with very little help. The character of the work of the school was shown by the exhibits of handwork from the various departments. The younger children displayed some excellent drawings. From the higher grades there were note books showing some of the splendid Bible work that has been done by every class in the school. The history classes exhibited the scrap books which have helped to vitalize their interest in the great deeds of the past. The girls of the home economics department contributed creditable specimens of their work in sewing and cooking; and the boysn demonstrated by an array of woodwork what the manual training class has done.

Announcement was made of the winner of the U. D. C. medal which Mrs. McCabe had offered to the school. The subject this year was John B. Gordon. The medal was won by Helen McCarty and honorable mention was awarded to Frances Knight, Marjorie Waldon and Dorothy Arkwright.

The program was really representative of the regular work of the school. The songs were some of the ones learned during the year; the little play given by the fourth grade was done in the same way in which the reading lessons are dramatized, and the living pictures presented by the High school were selected from their history and literature. Besides the ones on the program especial praise is due to the pupils who so ably managed the presentation and the light effects. They were Isabel Guinn, Frances Knight, Lin Adams, Thomas Hull, Emery Flinn. The program was as follows:

Play, "What the Good Man Does is Right." Fourth grade. Cast: Lionel Latour, Emily Davis, Jennie Robinson, Ernest Moorfield, Elizabeth Whetman, Richard McMillan, Wilma Elsman, Epps Brown and Isabel Howard.

Group of nature songs—Primary grade.

Violin solo—Morris Brandon.

Living pictures—High school and others.

Readers—Florence Stow, Eloise Robinson, Mary Wills, Frances Knight.

1. Baby Stuart—Henry Morgan.
2. Children of Charles I—Pierpont Spiker, Frances Brown, Mary Virginia Wooley.
3. Cornelia, mother of the Gracchi, and her sons—Margorie Weldon, Clara Belle King, Ernest Moorfield.
4. Portia (from "The Merchant of Venice"—Dorothy Paine.
5. Ellen (from "The Lady of the Lake"—Anne Carpenter.

7. Joan of Arc—Margaret McCarty.
8. Madame Roland—Helen McCarty.
9. Charlotte Corday—Marion Searns.
10. Queen Louise of Prussia—Louise Broyles.

"Marseillaise" (sung in French)—High school.

Mrs, Rauschenberg To Entertain

Mrs. C. A. Rauschenberg will entertain at a reception on Thursday, June 5, in compliment to Miss Lina Andrews, whose marriage to Mr. C. A. Rauschenberg, Jr., will be an event of interest in June; to Mrs. Oscar Rauschenberg and to Mrs. R. G. Jackson, of Brunswick, Ga.

Mrs. W. A. Candler, Mrs. S. C. Dobbs, Mrs. William Phitts, Mrs. Frederick J. White will assist the hostess in receiving.

Miss Julia Ford, Miss Estella Tomlinson will serve punch.

Miss Bates Al-Fresco Party

Miss Annie Winship Bates was hostess at an al fresco party Friday evening at her home on West Peachtree street. The veranda was hung with Japanese lanterns, and strings of the gaily colored lanterns extended from the rose covered pergola to the edge of the lawn.

Punch was served during the evening from flower wreathed bowls by Miss Maud Barker Cobb, Miss Irene Tift King, Miss Naomi Jennison, and Miss Sarah Eubanks.

An informal dance was a feature of the evening, and the rooms were decorated with quantities of sweet peas combining French colors of lavender and pink. Miss Bates wore a lovely gown of shadow lace over white silk, the wide sash of pink satin giving a pretty finish to the costume.

Mrs. Elizabeth Winship Bates, who assisted in the entertaiment of the young people wore blue chiffon draped over satin of a deeper hue. Two hundred and fifty girls and boys were guests of the occasion.

Miller-Massey

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Pinckney Miller have issued invitations to the marriage of their sister, Miss Dorothy Modd Miller, and Mr. Arthur Ballard Massey, on Thursday evening, June 12, at 6 o'clock, at St. Paul's church, Pendleton, S. C.

Miss Taylor to Entertain

Miss Annie Taylor will entertain at her home, 306 Capitol avenue, on the afternoon of Saturday, June 7, in honor of Miss Daisy Patterson, a bride-elect of this month.

To Miss Fewell

Miss Nan Tuker and Miss Florence Tucker entertained very pleasantly Saturday afternoon at a towel shower in compliment to Miss Olivia Fewell, a charming bride-elect.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with field daisies.

When the guests assembled, each bearing a pretty towel as a gift, they were invited to be seated; and the hostesses brought out dainty little work baskets, well provided with thimbles, needles and thread. To each guest was given a cup towel to hem for the bride, and when they tried on the thimbles they found a bit of tissue paper on which was written a good wish for the bride. These were read aloud.

During the sewing, wedding music was played, and Miss Louise Barfil sang some sweet old love songs.

Twenty guests were invited.

Cooking School

A cooking school is being conducted by Mrs. Dull at the Pryor Street Presbyterian church, and lessons are given at 3 p. m. daily. The school will last one more week, and the price for the remaining lessons is 50c.

All the proceeds go to the Ladies' Aid society of the Associate Reformed and Pryor Street Presbyterian churches.

Umps and Wind Big Features In a Defeat

Pat Wright Draws Pension at Expense of Loyal Fans, Wind Stopped Game With Montgomery in Lead 6 to 4

A windstorm, followed by rain, was the winner in the scheduled double-header between the Atlanta and Montgomery clubs on Saturday. As it was, the Billikens got away with a six-inning affair 6 to 4 just before the wind hit the park and destroyed sign boards and came near blowing away spectators and players.

The first real gust of wind hit the ball park in the sixth, just as Chapman was going to bat for Joe Dunn. For the next two hours there was nothing to it but the rain and wind. Five thousand fans were packed up in the rear of the stands, the electric current was cut off and there was nothing to do but sit around and while away your time for an hour or more. For a time it looked as if the stands would blow away, and many of the frightened fans beat it from the stands.

The only feature of the game that any way approached the wierd work of the wind was the umpiring, or lack of umpiring, shown by one Pat Wright, whom it is reported draws real pay from the coffers of a perfectly good ball league. The fans have to pay this money which he drags down for work the class of which was shown on Saturday, and it is high time that they quit patronizing the game when such worn-out players are shoved in to try and umpire, for which they draw a pension.

But to get back to the game. Gilbert Price started out to hurl for the Crackers, but after he had been overshadowed by Wright's work he resigned his box duty and Bill Chappelle was sent in to try and put them all right over the middle, in the hope that Wright would at least call one-third of those which split the plate. He met with little success, however, the ex-player who was back of the plate continuing to miss them for him just as he did for Bagby and Price.

Atlanta got away to a one-run lead in the first as the result of hits by Long and Welchonce and an out by Alperman. In the second Wright walked two batters who had been fanned, and Donahue came through with a bingle, and the result was two runs. In the same round Atlanta tied it up on an error and Price's long triple.

An error at the plate by Agler in the third let in two other Billiken runs, and in the fourth two more came home on three hits. Atlanta got two out of a batting rally in the fifth, in which a single by Long, a triple by Welchonce and an out figured. A double play and a sensational catch in the sixth prevented the Crackers from getting any runs, and in the seventh the rain and wind hurtled in before the Crackers had their half of the round.

In Polo Game

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 31.—The visiting Australian cricket team again took the Pacific Coast eleven into camp yesterday, by an innings and 169 runs. 10 runs more than in Thursday's match. The Australian scored 312 for the loss of seven wickets.

THE OUTFIELDER WHO ALWAYS HITS OVER .300 MARK

Sure Atlanta Will Win Out

Battle With Birmingham for Biggest Attendance During This Month

Birmingham has about as much chance of taking the attendance triumph away from Atlanta on June 9 as the proverbial snowball has of existing in those regions which smell of pitch and brimstone. In other words, there is nothing doing. The Barons haven't got a look-in, despite the press reports that they will turn out more ple on the 9th of June to their flag raising than Atlanta will turn out on the 19th to the presentation of the attendance cup.

Of course, the Barons have the drop on the local team, but the Crackers get fat on handicaps, and they will demonstrate to the satisfaction of all concerned that Birmingham nor any other team can rub anything in on the local fans. The question is that Birmingham is to have a flag raising on the 9th of June and Atlanta is to be presented with the attendance cup on the 19th of June. Now, to the amusement of all that know the facts in tae case, Birmingham has come to the front and avers that there will be more people on the 9th of June to their flag there will be to see the presentation.

Backward, time, in thy flight, and recall the day when J. Pluvius and Old Sol had a fight and Pluv won the decision by a knockout. The waters were among us, and yet there were 8,836 fans out to see Billy Smith and his warriors do battle on a field ankle deep in water. In Birmingham on the opening day the skies were clear and everything was ideal for a 10,000 crowd, but there came no 10,000 crowd, and Atlanta won the cup. President Kavanaugh will be here on the job to give the cup to the local authorities, and reports say that he has been practicing on a little speech for the past month. Picture Pres. Kavanaugh making a stereotyped speech.

But, anyway, there is to be something doing out at Ponce de Leon on the 19th of June, and the presence of every fan is required to hold up the pace that Birmingham is sure to set. Miss a game between now and then, save of those grandmother stalls until that day, and then, with all the pathos that you possess, break the news to the boss that she has departed this world of troubles, and then sneak; take one of those four-bit places out of the old black wallet, and show your true Atlanta spirit. As Shakespeare said, with a real feeling of feeling, when he was asking the boss for a day off, "There is a tide in the affairs of the team which, taken on the flood, leads on to the attendance trophy, but if omitted, all the season is bound in defeats and mishaps." Get together, fans, and be there; show the people from the Smoky City that Atlanta is there in the beginning, in the end, and in the middle.

Quakers Win Track Events

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 31.—Twelve sturdy Quaker legs, with which six wearers of the Red and Blue gathered in twenty-four points, won for the University of Pennsylvania the thirty-eighth annual field and track meeting of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America in the Harvard stadium today. The score was the smallest made by a winner in the history of the association.

John Paul Jones, Cornell's captain, finished his college cinder track career by running the fastest mile ever credited to an amateur. His new world's record time was 4 minutes, 14 2-5 seconds, one second lower than the previous record, he made on the same track two years ago. In the half-mile event, Jones finished second.

The association records in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and the 220-yard hurdles were equalled respectively by J. E. Patterson and D. F. Lippitfcott, of Pennsylvania, and J. J. Wendell, of Wesleyan. The latter won both hurdle events and was the only double winner of the day.

Harvard lost when Jackson knocked down three hurdles in the 220-yard event and was disqualified. Had he won second place, Harvard would have won the meet.

A REAL OUTFIELDER

BY JULIAN MURPHEY.

In the truest sense of the word a firstclass outfielder is a player who can hit around the three hundred mark and run the bases in approved style. He does not necessarily have to be the most finished fielder in the world, his only necessity at the fielding end of the game being that he can throw after he lands the ball.

Harry Welchonce.

This name means to Southern league fans a real firstclass outfielder. It tells of one who is a bit better than what is required of a really good outer-gardener. Besides possessing the hitting and base running requirements that a player needs to pass off as a good outfielder, he is a classy fielder and has a grand arm. This makes him doubly valuable.

As a hitter Harry Welchonce is right there. He has been in baseball for five seasons and always his average has been better than the three hundred mark. And as that he has been in some mighty good circuits including a couple in the Southern. This season Harry again intends to batter the ball at a .300 clip. He has started like he intends to keep his word and as he appears to be improving with each game it is hardly probable that he will fall down in his prediction that he will be above the .300 mark when the last game is turned in.

BEGAN REAL FAST.

Welchonce began his baseball career back in 1909 with the Steubenville club of the O. and P. league. This year he played right field and hit .320. He was then picked up by the Philadelphia Nationals and turned over to South-Bend Central league team where in 1910 he hit .315. He then went back to the Phillies and remained half the 1911 season when he was taken on by Nashville. With the Vols he batted .306 and coming back in 1912 he hit .325 and topped the Southern swatsmith. Then it was that Billy Smith gobbled him up after the Washington club had taken him in. Nashville lost claim to the star outfielder by failing to put in a claim by the proper time.

GAINED EYE.

Harry Welchonce gained his accurate eye when in the winter months he sat hour after hour anxiously looking down a railroad track for an approaching train. Up in Greenville, Pa., said by Harry to be a big railroad center, Welchonce spends his winter months as a train dispatcher. He ranks just as high up that way in the railroad world as he does in this section as a hitter.

Every ball player has his pet ball game to relate and to Welchonce no game he ever played attracts him so much as a 21-inning 1 to 0 encounter between the Zanesville and South Bend Central league clubs back in 1910. Here is how Welchonce would tell the story:

"We had started to play a double-header and when John Henry Myers, of South Bend, and Jones, of Zanesville, began to pitching real baseball the game rocked along without a score for twenty long innings. Luckily we had an early start and the fast falling sun did not keep us from going until there was a decision at the end of the twenty-first round.

"In the twenty-first round I was first at bat and started with a single. I was sacrificed to second and the next batter walked. With two on base Jones walked the next hitter and filled the bags, this move being in the hope that a double play could save the day. However, the next man came through with a single and I scored the run that won the best game in which I ever worked."

Nashville Is Next on List

Sunday Game in Tennessee City—Club Returns Home on Thursday

With the conclusion of the Atlanta-Montgomery game on Saturday the Cracker squad moved on to Nashville for a three-game series with the Vols. The first will be staged on Sunday, this being the second Sunday game in Nashville this season, and the other two will be played Monday and Tuesday.

In case none of the games in Nashville are rained out, which will necessitate playing them the following day, Wednesday will be an off day for the Cracker clan. On Thursday a series with the Chattanooga club will be opened at Ponce de Leon and then the club moves over to Birmingham for a series of three big games after which Chattanooga is visited for three days.

The club this year has gone as well on the road as at home and it is not expected that any slump will be experienced while in Chattanooga or Birmingham, though it is quite evident that these two clubs right now are stronger than when last played.

'Nooga Golfers Leave for Meet

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 31.—Chattanooga's entrants in the southern golf tournament, which opens at Montgomery Tuesday, left Saturday night. The party includes Scott, Probasco, Ed McCallie, Arthur Watkins, R. B. Richards, D. S. Henderson, Tom Hagan, J. D. Marshall and Garnett Watkins. The Chattanooga team will be composed of Henderson, Probasco, Richards and G. Watkins. The locals are in excellent shape for the tourney.

SOUTH'S BEST GOLFERS ATTEND ANNUAL TOURNEY

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 30.—Final arrangements for the twelfth annual tournament of the Southern Golf association on the course of the Montgomery Country club have been made and by Saturday persons who will enter the contest will begin to arrive.

It is expected that between 200 and 300 golf players from Birmingham, Pensacola, Memphis, Nashville, New Orleans, Rome, Ga., Louisville, Ky., Washington, D. C., Chattanooga, Charlotte, N. C., and other towns and cities will be here. Decisions to send players to the tournament have been made by the following clubs:

Birmingham Country club, 75 members; Mecklenburg Country club, Charlotte, N. C., 10; Golf and Country club, of Chattanooga, 22; Audubon Country club, New Orleans, 6; Nashville Country club, 37; Little Rock Country club, 5; Louisville Country club, Pinehurst, N. C., Country club, Atlanta Athletic club, Cape Fear club, of Washington, Memphis Country club, Coosa Country club, of Rome, Ga.; Pensacola Country club and several others.

Qualifying round will be played Tuesday and it is expected that more than 200 will enter. The championship flight will be Thursday, semi-finals Friday and finals in all flights Saturday.

Trophies that will be given to winners are: Championship, championship cup; runner up, trophy; second flight, Alabama cup; runner up, trophy; third flight, Montgomery cup; runner up, trophy; fourth flight, Dexter cup; runner up, trophy; fifth flight, LaFayette cup; runner up, trophy; sixth flight, Yancey cup; runner up, trophy. A gold medal will be awarded to the one who makes the lowest qualifying score and a silver one to the one making the second lowest qualifying score. Trophies will be given to winners of all consolation events.

THROWS 87 BALLS IN GAME

One of the most pleasing features of the work of Elliot Dent, Atlanta's latest addition to the hurling staff, is his easy manner in locating the plate. The big boy rarely walks a batter unless ordered to do so in an effort to pull off a double play and prevent a run.

In Friday's game, which he handily won, Dent threew the ball but eighty-seven times. This counted all balls, strikes, fouls and balls that were hit and when it is considered it represented twenty-seven outs, two runs, four runners left on bases, one error and three bases on balls it shows mighty fine control.

Here is Dent's record for Friday's game:

First inning: one ball, three strikes.
Second inning: six strikes, ten balls.
Third inning: eight strikes, six balls.
Fourth inning: six strikes, five balls.
Fifth inning: ten strikes, three balls.
Sixth inning: ten strikes, three balls.
Sixth inning: seven strikes, one ball.
Seventh inning: six strikes, six balls.
Eighth inning: four strikes, one ball.
Ninth inning: four strikes.

Atlanta Led At Fielding And Hitting

Only an Even Break on Home Stay of Two Weeks, Which Isn't So Encouraging in View of the Tough Road Trips

The Cracker club managed to make a large number of hits and runs in the home stay which came to a close on Saturday, but with it all only an even break was secured in the dozen games that were fought out. Some how or other the hits did not come at times when they were worst needed, being gathered after game was packed away or when the club was so far behind they amounted to but little.

During the first week of the home stay the Memphic and Mobile clubs were played. Atlanta won two out of three from Memphis and then dropped two out of three to Movile. The past week two out of three were won from New Orleans and two out of three dropped to Montgomery.

A record of an even break on the home field is not the most encouraging thing in the world. A club is expected to play better than even ball at home and drop below this figure on the road. But at this the locals fell down. The ball played at home was an even half and half kind while on the road it was below the standard.

On the dozen games played at Ponce de Leon the past week the Atlanta club made 102 hits count for sixty-two runs against the ninety hits and 48 runs for the visiting teams. And yet with this advantage in hits and runs but half the games were copped.

At fielding the club again led the visiting delegations. More putouts were made by Atlanta, the locals run up the larger number of assists and made fewer errors. But, my, when the errors did come how they did hurt. And it does not pay overly well to pass up errors when the game is one sided and then pull them at critical moments during the afternoon.

At batting the Crackers hits for an average of .276 for the twelve games against .253 for the visiting teams. At fielding the Atlanta club had an average of .957 against .946 for the visitors. This shows a decided advantage in all departments save the winning column.

Here are the complete figures at batting:

	A.b.	R.	H.	Ba.
Atlanta	373	62	103	276
Opponents	356	48	90	219

The figures in fielding:

	Po.	A.	E.	Fa.
Atlanta	289	160	20	917
Opponents	279	143	24	946

Sewanee Has Good Outlook

Mountain Boys Expect to Have Strong Football Team During Coming Season

SEWANEE, Tenn., May 31.—Everything on the mountain is on the boom now, preparing for the annual spring examinations and for graduating exercises. This year an unusually large class will graduate and every preparation is being made to see them off in great style. There will be dances every day commencing within the next few days, when examinations are over, and then on until school is officially out on the 18th of June. Several good men in athletics will leave the mountain this year, but they will be replaced by good material coming in from the prep schools around middle Tennessee.

From the present outlook there will be one of the strongest teams in the history of the school on the field for the Mountain Tigers next fall. Seven of the old men will return and several good prep men have expressed their intention of selecting Sewanee as their college home. Last year in football the Tigers were not as good as they have been in the past, but this was due to the fact that they had so many new men on the team, who would invariably blow at the wrong time. That is, they were not as cool as old heads and therefore did not get the results that an old team could get.

NEW FLINGER COMING SOON

The deal for Pitcher Counzelman, of Pittsburg, has not yet been fully closed though the local moguls are working overtime with a view of winding it up and having the flinger here when the team gets back home the latter part of next week. There is right now some hitch in the agreement with Pittsburg.

While nothing official has been announced it is apparent that the directors and manager are on the lookout for other good flingers, this apparently being the main weakness with the club. The batters and fielders are going mighty fine and with a bit better flinging more games will be set up on the won side of the percentage column.

COBB'S WORK

Ty Cobb raised his average during Saturday's game by seven points, he getting two hits out of three times up. He was caught napping on first base once and was also caught stealing. However, he got the hits and that was what he went to the bat for.

At the present rate the Georgia Peach will be batting near the .500 mark within the next few days. He has held the pace against the best teams that the Tigers have to play and still he is there with the goods, so it looks like a big boost when the Detroit club goes up against the weaker teams in the league.

His figures for the year so far are:

	Games.	At bat.	Runs	Hits	Av.
Cobb	28	93	14	43	.462

Vols Easily Defeated By Mobile Club

Sea of Mud Made the Game Rather a Farce, Fielders Fielding With Great Inaccuracy—O'Dell and Sentell Stars

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 31.—Mobile outfitted Williams and McManus freely today winning the last game of the series 11 to 5. A hard rain and hailstorm shortly before the game made the field a sea of mud and both sides got hits on easy chances as a result of the inability of the fielders to keep their feet.

The batting of Sentell and Odell featured. Fifteen hits were made by the visitors for twenty-eight bases.

Southpaw Gilbert Price has proven Manager Smith's most consistent winner this season. Above is shown three good poses of the left hander coupled with the games he had hurled up to Saturday. It will be noticed that he has a remarkably large number of scoreless innings. The inning line shows how many innings he has pitched; the run line shows the scores by opponents and the hotted line is the runs as scored by Atlanta.

Foxen Pitched Jam-Up Ball All the Way—Just Two Hits Off His Delivery, Though One Was Home-Run

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 31.—Birmingham, by winning today, made it three out of four from New Orleans. Foxen yielded but two hits, though one was for a home run. McBride and Marcan also hit for home runs. McBride's hitting and Eilam's fielding were features of a spirited contest. Score:

ALL RECORDS BEING BROKEN

The spring of 1913 has been a record-breaker. Not any pun to this, but the real fact. There have been more records broken during this spring than ever before in the history of athletics.

The time on the mile, half-mile and two miles has been broken, together with the smashing of the shot-put mark and the high jump. Also the mile and a quarter was recently broken on the Louisville track. However, the record on the 500-mile Indianapolis road race was nearly eleven minutes behind the time made last year.

In nearly every branch of sport there has been a decided gain in the efficiency of its performance. Ty Cobb has never played as good ball as he has played this year. He has eclipsed all former batting records and bids fair to set a mark that will hold for some time. Then he is not the only person that is batting away above the average. Joe Jackson for Cleveland, Speaker for Boston, Zimmerman for Chicago and several others are hitting away above the average that is generally made by those topnotchers.

Together with these things come the records that are being made by the Big Inning pitchers. Johnson, Faulkenberg and Wood are all going away above the average and it seems that there is something in the year being in the thirteen column after all, of course, those who are inclined to always say a hard word for the simple number will point with pride to the Big Inning that has recently swept the Ohio valley. But the year has been pretty good so far this year, and if nothing happens the present streak of luck, the 1912 football season will see some of the freakest and most wonderful feats in the history of that famous game. It will be but a common occurrence to see the quarterback step back on the 65-yard line and with the biggest game of the year by a drop kick. Men will run 90 yards for a touchdown in truly 100-yard in flat time. The remainder of the year bids fair to see some interesting things happen in the way of sports. This year in all seriousness will go down in history as one of the most remarkable and progressive in the history of athletics. There has been more surprises, more improvements and a better relationship between all parties concerned than ever before

Baraca League To Have New Team

The Sunday school of the All Saints church has signified their intention of putting a team in the Baraca league, one of the city's fastest amateur organizations. It is not known whether there will be any room for this team, or whether some team in the league will be dropped.

The manager and other members of this team are invited to attend a meeting of this league next Tuesday evening at the Forster Printing company. The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock.

Patch Holes At the Start

Water Will Creep Into Tires and Nothing Ruins Them Quicker

If every man who owns a motor car could take a day off and go through a big, modern tire plant he would discover that while rubber itself is the most effective water-shedder known, it is absolutely imperative that all moisture be eliminated in pneumatic tire construction. Furthermore, these owners would realize the great importance of looking after small cuts in the tire tread and closing them when they develop.

When water works its way beneath the tread and breaker strip and into the carcass of a tire premature deterioration is certain to follow.

"In building up the carcass of a tire out of frictioned fabric, which means heavy cotton cloth impregnated with rubber, we are extremely careful to use only thoroughly dry material," says C. A. Whittelsey, superintendent of the United States Tire company's Hartford factory. "After crude rubber has been carefully washed and rolled into sheets of crepe it is hung in drying rooms where a high temperature is maintained and where every trace of moisture is removed. The fabric likewise is run over heated rollers to make certain that it is perfectly dry before being subjected to the frictioning process.

"When a tire is completed it is free from moisture on the inside and it remains so as long as the tread is in condition to perform its full duties. However, small cuts, caused by sharp objects in the roadway, are very apt to appear, even in a new tire, and through these openings water eventually finds its way to the tire carcass. In time this produces separation of the individual plies of fabric of which the carcass is made up, and the tire rapidly goes to pieces. Breaks in the tread also admit sand and dirt, which cause fabric separation.

"When a motorist discovers one or more small cuts in the tread of a tire he should close them at once. There are several special preparations for this purpose which can be easily applied after the cut has been thoroughly washed out. The expense amounts to practically nothing and the saving is bound to be great."

CHANCE WON'T USE BERMUDA

NEW YORK, May 31.—Statisticians won't train in Bermuda next spring. Manager Chance, according to President Farrell, who recently returned from a visit to the team in the west, has come to the conclusion that the damp atmosphere and the hot weather encountered in the little British island are responsible for the lame backs and arms the pitchers have suffered from since the American league season opened.

Chance blames the poor condition of his pitchers' staff on the change from the hot Bermuda climate to the cold weather in the north of this country, so he is now on the lookout for some other place in which to get his men into shape next year.

"Considering the bad form of his pitchers, and the big hole at shortstop, I think Chance has worked wonders with the team," declared Farrell. "We are on the lookout for new men, and I feel confident that as soon as we secure the necessary strength we'll have a great ball club."

Princeton Player Discovered Curve?

NEW YORK, May 31.—The Highlanders' athletics at Princeton university have entered a claim for J. H. Mann, '76, as the discoverer of the art of curve pitching. According to baseball lore available at Princeton, Mann was the star pitcher of the college team known as the Nassau nine at that time.

During the fall of 1876 Mann pitched several games in one week, and his peculiar delivery wore the skin from the tip of his fingers, so the final contest of the week he was obliged to play third base. Late in the game he was forced to relieve the pitcher in order to use the curve.

Owing to the tender condition of his fingers, Mann was obliged to throw the ball with little or no grip. He immediately noticed that his delivery was breaking in an odd manner which caused opposing batters to strike out. During the next few months he continued to experiment, and in the spring blossomed out as a pitcher with a real outcurve at his command.

Experiments With Kerosene

Among the many motor car manufacturers making experiments with kerosene as fuel is the National Motor Vehicle company, Indianapolis, Ind., maker of National cars. Chief Engineer William G. Wall has been supervising extensive tests for a number of months, and is quoted as saying that in his opinion it will be only a short time before a majority of automobiles will use kerosene instead of gasoline.

Although Mr. Wall holds that there is some question as to the feasibility of starting a cold engine direct and suggests that it may be necessary to use a little gasoline for this purpose, he believes that the automatic starter will aid greatly in solving the problem. He adds that the disadvantages of the heavier fuel in winter are not too serious to be overcome easily; in fact, he claims to have accomplished this result in his winter experimenting at the National factory.

Great Season Ended By Marist Specials

The Marist Specials have just completed a most successful season by defeating Formwalt for the second time, Score 5-6. The winning run came in the eighth on a beautiful squeeze play by Adair and Cheves.

Cheves for the Specials was the brilliant spot of the game. The big boy got three hits out of four trips up. Two of them being doubles and run getters. Gene Wrigley, who relieved Hanlon in the sixth, did splendid work in the box.

This last series returned the Specials victors in every series played this season.

Toccoa Club Wins

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TOCCOA, Ga., May 31.—Toccoa defeated the fast Cornelia team here 11 to 7. The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of the local team, which secured four three-base hits, and three two-base hits.

A WINNER IN THE HILL CLIMB

G. L. SINGLETON.

Aboard his "Pope," winner in amateur class last Saturday.

This machine was uncrated by L. S. Crane, manager of the local branch of the Pope factory, on the day before the hill climb that was held a week ago by the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory association. It made the hill, with Mr. Singleton in the seat, in the fasttime of 57 4-5 seconds, winning the amateur event.

MANY OF THE BEST SWIMMERS TAUGHT BY COACH BACHRACH

CHICAGO, May 31.—The remarkable success achieved this season in water sports by Perry McGillivray, Harry Hebner, A. C. Raithel, Monte McDermott and other representatives of the Illinois Athletic club has awakened great interest in the methods of William Bachrach, aquatic coach at the Windy City organization, for it is realized that an important factor is good handling in the development of any athlete.

Bachrach has learned one of the great truths of life—that no man knows everything on any subject; and therein lies the chief secret of his success.

"When I was instructor at the Chicago Y. M. C. A.," he said, "my horizon was limited, and I felt there was little I could be taught; but no sooner did I take hold of the Illinois boys than I found out how much I had to learn. Then I undertook to broaden myself. I looked into the system of every instructor whom I thought had ability; I sought the opinions of every swimmer I came in touch with; I investigated every theory of past and present, and I used ordinary common sense in deciding what was promising and what was not. I am more convinced today than ever that anything new is worth glancing into. No pupil comes to me with ideas of his own that, unless they are palpably wrong, I give him a chance to try them out. Practical tests often prove valuable to the seeker for knowledge. I am now experimenting with a dozen and one things, and results will dictate which to adopt and which to discard."

Presented Paige Car

Mike Murphy certainly is running in hard luck here. Three weeks ago the old guards of the Detroit Athletic club presented the veteran trainer with a Paige "36," but he has not had an opportunity to enjoy his car, having been laid up in bed. He says: "I don't mind taking a rest once in a while if the doctors prescribe it, but what is worrying me is when I am going to get a ride on my new Paige. I'll give those doctors two more days to get me well, and if I can't get out of bed, then they are just going to place that old cot of mine in the rear of that machine and then I will get a ride. I think a ride in my new car will make me feel better than all the medicine they have."

Identification Made And Fan Wins Pass

Another faithful fan has been caught by The Journal's camera and has been identified and will this afternoon be the guest of The Journal at the Montgomery-Atlanta game. E. T. Edwin, of Marietta, was the lucky fan that was snapped on Wednesday and whose picture appeared on The Journal's sport page on Thursday.

This picture scheme is creating a great deal of interest and real mystery, the thousands of Atlanta fans looking daily to see if their personality was strong enough to attract the eagle eye of the staff photographer. A picture is run every day, be on the lookout, you may be the next lucky one to receive a free ticket.

Henry Ford Drives

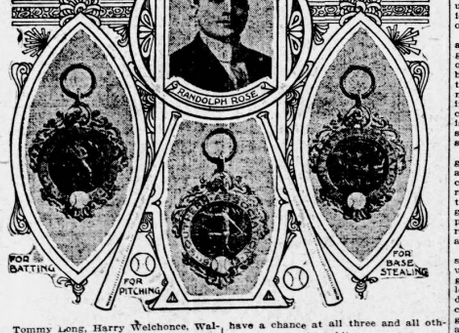
Henry Ford, head of the Ford Motor company, of Detroit, recently gave a demonstration to show that his knowledge of mechanics extends beyond the realm of the motor car. The Detroit Terminal railroad, which provides railroad facilities for the mammoth Ford plant, bought five big locomotives, three of which are being used to handle the 500 freight cars which pass through the Ford yards each day. The engines were formally christened into service at the Ford plant and Mr. Ford took the throttle of No. 1 and ran the engine about the yard while the engine crews and yard men formed an interested audience.

Mr. Ford had for a passenger Mr. James Couzens, secretary and treasurer of the Ford company and president of the Detroit board of commerce.

National Wins Economy Run

An error in copying the scores of Catskill economy tour held recently by the New York automobile fraternity is responsible for the delay in evolving the National car as winner. This car was driven by W. C. Poertner, New York dealer for National cars. Excellence in reliability, hill climbing and economy was responsible for the National's clean sweep to victory. There were eleven contestants, a Paige-Detroit coming in second and an Alco third and an American fourth. The distance was 262.8 miles.

Maybe Atlanta Players Will Win These Medals



Tommy Long, Harry Welchonce, Wallace Smith and Harry Bailey all now appear to stand a most excellent chance of taking the handsome $250 diamond trophy offered by Randolph Rose, now of Chattanooga, but formerly of Atlanta, for the leading batsman in the Southern league for the 913 season. It's a safe bet any way you take it that the race is not to be a runaway affair and the man who cops will have to go some to beat out the quartette with the Crackers.

Not only is a prize to be awarded the best batsman but the hurler who pitches in Walter Johnson style is to grab off a handsome diamond trophy, as is the best base stealer. You cannot now tell who will pick up any of the three trophies but the Cracker stars certainly have a chance at all three and all others must hustle a bit.

The three handsome trophies were offered to stimulate interest in the Southern league game and it is having the desired result. The offering of automobiles for the most valuable players in the American and National leagues has served to get up added interest in these two circuits, and the fight for the three diamond medals will have the same effect here in the Southern.

Randolph Rose, who is giving the medals, was born and raised in Atlanta, and it would be most appropriate for some Atlanta player to take away the honors. The three medals are of gold, hand chased with a diamond, and except for th bas-relief in the center, which pictures the three branches of sport for which they are offered, are identical.

Dodgers Cost Near $45,000

Dahlen and Ebbetts Have Been Building Up Team for Past Four Years

How a major league ball club that is a contender for the pennant was gathered together for an outlay of $45,000 is a story that C. H. Ebbetts, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, now second in the National league race, is relating these days.

Ebbetts shows figures to prove that the present members of the Brooklyn team were obtained either by draft or purchase at an outlay of more than $45,000. When Dahlen assumed the management in the spring of 1910 he began weeding out the old material, with the result that Rucker, Hummel, Knetzer and Wheat are the only players left of the former line-up. Hummel was purchased for $1,000 from Brockton, Mass., in 1905. Rucker was drafted from Augusta in 1907 for $500, while Knetzer and Wheat were purchased in 1909 for $2,500 and $1,500 respectively.

Dahlen has placed on first base in Dahlen's first season, after he had been drafted from Memphis for $1,500. In 1911 the Brooklyn club secured these men: Miller, Columbus, $750; Reagan, from Rochester, $4,000; Red Smith, from Nashville, $3,500, and Erwin, from Rochester, $3,500. In 1912 Ebbetts obtained Shortstop Fisher from Newark for $3,500, Kent from Birmingham for $1,000, Allen from Mobile, $5,200; Kirkpatrick from Dayton, $2,000; Stengel from Aurora, $750; Phelps from Toronto, $2,500; Yingling from Toledo, $1,500; Stack from Philadelphia Nationals, $1,500; Cutshaw from Oakland for $1,500.

The players purchased for this season are Callahan from Elmira, $2,500; Wagner from New Orleans, $1,500, and Meyer from Toronto, $3,500. Catcher Fisher came from Binghamton in a trade for Harry Lumley, who with Tim Jordan several years ago brought an offer of $50,000 from the Giants. Pitchell Hall was a free agent when he signed a contract. Reviewing this list Ebbetts pointed out that Dahlen has built up a comparatively young team of the players he has turned loose after trials only one, Bob Perdue, of the Boston Nationals, still draws salary in the big leagues.

Practical Purposes Back of Oakland's Beauty Features

"We have often boasted that our car is the most beautiful on the market," says J. H. Eccleston, general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, "and we believe that we have a right to make that claim. But the beauty and distinction of our car, its exclusive features, are not without their utilitarian value. The aesthetic and the practical have been happily united, for in nearly every instance the idea of beauty has its reason for being on the purely practical side.

"Take the aluminum steps, for example, a feature that is a part of the general distinction of the car. The use of these steps in place of a running board has its important advantage. In the step construction a number of thin metal parts subject to noise are eliminated, making the car a quiet one. Of course, all new cars run quietly, but it is seldom that quietness can be observed in a car that has been used for some time.

"Another feature of our design that gives the car distinction is the use of a double drop frame that makes the car low in appearance and somewhat rakish. The practical advantage in this is that it gives a low center of gravity, and it is therefore almost impossible to turn turtle. For the same reason the possibility of skidding is almost done away with.

"Some have thought that our V-shaped radiator was just a fad with us, but, like the other features that give character to the car, it has a legitimate use. This design allows additional radiation, and therefore our cars have more cooling surface. The genuine German silver covering enables the owner to have a monogram or other mark of identification engraved on the front of his car."

Studies Automobile

Carl ... Neracher, chief engineer of the Willys-Overland company, of Toledo, Ohio, has gone to Europe, where he will spend several weeks studying the automobile situation. John N. Willys, president of the organization, only recently returned from a trip abroad and so impressed was he with some features of European manufacture, that he decided to have his engineer investigate with a view of adopting certain principles in the future construction of Overlands. Mr. Neracher will spend all his time abroad at the leading motor car factories of England, France, Germany and Italy.

Car Buyers On Values

The topic of automobiles has a general interest, and through comparisons and experiences of friends a man intending to purchase a car has a better understanding of what he should look for than in previous years. The standardizing of equipment also makes it easier to select a car. An intending purchaser knows that certain makes of magnetos, carburetors, transmission, etc., are dependable and reliable, and with these points settled little remains but to seek comfort, easy riding qualities and stanch construction, at the right price.

Clear running board, insert dash lamps, tire-irons in the rear, clean-cut lines, low set body, all carry weight. For while a man may not be influenced to any great extent by these things in purchasing a used car, he expects and looks for them in buying a new one. He wants to be up to date. He wants a car he can be proud of.

These advantages are particularly noticeable in the 1913 Midland Six, a reasonable priced car with left-hand drive, center control, rakish and graceful lines, liberally designed tonneau, exceptionally roomy in both front and rear seats, wide fore doors, and equipped with latest makes of ignition, carburetion, etc.

Another advantage lies in the cleverness of the Midland Six design which permits a decrease in weight of several hundred pounds under ordinary sixes, yet retaining all the under road conditions.

Two cars of Midland Sixes that have arrived in Savannah during the past thirty days have been passed upon by critics as among the best values yet seen in this section. They are handled through their southern representative, F. W. Edwardy.

Grocers Form A New League

That the national game has proved itself popular goes without saying, but there are other games every day now in the city of Atlanta. A new league is to be added to the already big number of city and commercial organizations that represent the city in the world of sports.

This time it is to be the butchers, grocers and produce men of the town. A call has been sent out for all grocery or meat men in Atlanta and in the city to meet at 97 Peachtree street on the night of Wednesday, June 4. The object of the meeting is to organize into perfect a league that will play only the highest class of ball. L. W. Rogers company, Grant Park Grocery company and the Stanton-Stewart & Jones and H. L. Schlesinger company have all expressed their intention of entering the league.

This will be a good thing both for the companies and for the employes, and it is hoped that there will be a good crowd at the meeting. All of the games will be played on Wednesday afternoon, and therefore the stores that have teams in the league will all be closed on this day. This will give the employes a chance to get a much-needed rest and good afternoon of recreation and exercise besides. The league is planned to run through the months of June, July and August.

JORDAN'S HITS AIDED IN WIN

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 31.—Valdosta took the last game from Waycross 8 to 1, making two out of the series. Gentle, an Atlanta city leaguer, pitched his first game for the locals and did well. In addition he hit two singles and a triple. Jordan hit two triples. Valdosta stole nine bases, two of them for scores on double steals. Warwick, for Waycross, was hit freely and for long hits. Waycross played the first errorless game by visitors on the home grounds.

LETTERS TO EMORY BOYS

OXFORD, Ga., May 31.—Fourteen men who played in a majority of the games of the 1913 season of Emory's Interclass baseball race have been selected by the four coaches who are eligible to wear the baseball blanket E. These elects are:

Pitchers—E. K. Perryman, of Rockmart; Asa Porter, of El Paso, Tex., and Cliff Lester, of Cochran, Ga.

Catchers—H. G. Chisholm, of Colquitt, and John Harris, of Rockmart, Ga.

First Base—R. N. Stokes, of Moultrie, Ga.

Second Base—Benton Neal, of McDonough, Ga.

Third Base—J. H. Thomas, of Baxley, Ga.

Shortstop—John Outler, of Thomasville, Ga.

Outfielders—Louis Bondurant, of Valdosta; Rennie Blake, of Mansfield; H. R. Bowles, of Oakland, and Linton Munroe, of Quincey, Fla.

Motorcycle Stars Now With N. C. A.

NEW YORK, May 31.—"I can't race on the Federation of American Motorcyclists' membership card, with my machine," said Arthur Chapple, the New York speed marvel, when asked about his action in regard to the National Cyclists' association taking over the control of racing at Brighton Beach Stadium-Motordrome and the Point Breeze Motordrome in Philadelphia, instead of the F. A. M., "and I am stringing with the racetracks where I can make my living.

"Racing under sanctions is all right, but when it comes to quitting a game that I have made my life work, because the would-be governors of the sport are unable to get along with the tracks, why I am going with the tracks, for they can offer me a place to race. The N. C. A., is as competent to handle the game as the F. A. M., and I can't see anything but good in the change.

Thirty-four other riders at the Brighton course agreed with Chapple in the above statement and have made preparation to register with the N. C. A., which will control motor racing in the east from this time on.

NINETY MILES AN HOUR ON LOCAL MOTORDROME

Big Concert Will Be Given at Prince's Track on Sunday Afternoon—There Will Be No Racing, but the Fans Will Be Shown Every New Feature of the Big Quarter-Mile Saucer. Work Is Progressing Fast and Will Be Ready for Opening on Friday

Speed and danger—those are the attractions that will draw the crowds to the Jack Prince motordrome next Friday night.

Speed and danger—they are the two strongest attractions in the world!

To see men risk their necks and to see them ride fast—these head liners have drawn men to the arenas from the days of the chariot races down to the present time. The great spectacular sports of the world are based on these two things. And because Jack Prince will offer more speed, well spiced with danger to the riders, than was ever shown in Atlanta before, his success seems assured.

The fastest that the folks of Atlanta ever saw a human being travel was at the rate of 95.4 miles an hour.

That man was Lewis Strang.

The place was the Atlanta speedway. He was in a Flat car of 120-horsepower and he covered a mile in 37.7 seconds. The track was two miles in circumference, slightly banked in the stretches, considerably banked at the four turns.

OPENS FRIDAY NIGHT.

Next Friday night, if Jack Prince's predictions do not go astray, Strang's speed record for Atlanta will be knocked galley-west.

This will be done by a two-wheeled motor vehicle, of seven-horsepower, and it will be done on a quarter-mile track, banked 58 degrees—a track right in the heart of Atlanta.

Just what speed will be attained depends absolutely on the human factor of the equation. There is no limit to the speed of the track. By going to the top, where the banking is vertical, it is possible to go a million miles a minute and not run off.

The machines which will be used have speed possibilities that no man knows, for no man ever lived who could let them out to their limit.

Eddie Hasha is one man who tried to find out how fast a machine actually would go. He went over the top of the 58 inch motor and hands cracked. DeRosier was curious and got as near the answer as any man—but Jake is dead now—a victim of speed.

The only question to be settled is that of how much a man can stand. If a man with the strength and the head to resist a speed of 126 miles an hour is developed that mark will be set. It could be put up to 150 if a human being could ride that fast and live.

Knowing thes things, Jack Prince has picked his riders with care. He has the best in the world—Jack McNell, the greatest engine expert of them all; Harry Swartz, the genial Kansas Dutchman; Tex Alchard, the cowboy rider; Ed Harmour, Henry Lewis, the motorcycle cop; George Lockner, Billy Shields, Monty Graves, Georges Renel, the French champion, and Fred Luther. They are the picked men of all America. They are speed merchants from the word go. Ninety miles an hour to those lads is "just a pleasant afternoon stroll is to an average man.

A FEW RECORDS.

To get an idea of comparative speed, consider the hour records for various styles of locomotion:

Running—10.6 miles in an hour.

Bicycle Riding—25.4 miles an hour.

Motorcycle—83 miles an hour.

Automobile—106.2 miles an hour.

Aeroplane—108.7 miles an hour.

This makes motorcycling look slow—if you compare it with automobiling or flying.

Consider, though, that the automobile record was made on the powerful cement track at Brooklands, England—a track so big that could put the Atlanta motordrome in the center and it would look like a pin in a checkerboard.

The flying record was made up in the clouds, with nothing in the way, no centrifugal force to bother, no turns to make.

All in all, the motocycle record is the most remarkable.

If it be possible on the four-lap Atlanta track to touch the American record for motorcycles of a mile in 36 seconds it will be a performance the like of which the world never saw before.

And the thing might happen.

To make a mile in 36 seconds it would be necessary to circle the motordrome once every nine seconds. Now neither automobiles nor aeroplanes race in such small circles. But men on foot do. And if they go very fast they make the circuit in a shade under 50 seconds. The motocyclists must go more than five times that fast to touch the record. In fairness to the local track it should be mentioned that Lee Humiston's record of 36 seconds for a mile was made on a mile track. Naturally that meant less centrifugal force and less friction to contend with. A speed of a mile in 40 seconds on the local track will be quite as remarkable.

The strain of riding a motorcycle race reaches close to the limit of human endurance.

In the first place, there is the mental strain. Every time a man goes out on a board track he takes more chances than a soldier going into an ordinary battle. The tracks of the country have been stained with the blood of the riders. The local track is the newest and the safest in the world. But any man who races on it takes a chance.

There is the danger first of a blowout. The second a tire goes down there is a catastrophe. In a fish the rubber and fabric are whipped to tiny shreds and the motorcycle is down on the rim and bumping.

If the front tire goes down, the rider has no chance. The fabric of the tire ties up in the front fork, the machine doubles up and the rider is thrown as from a bucking broncho—a broncho traveling eighty-five or ninety-miles an hour. Not one time in a million when a front tire goes down in a race does the rider escape without a spill. And being thrown over the handle bars of a racing machine going faster than the fastest railroad train is a risky performance. This is especially true because the motorcycle and the rider are on a sharp incline, either 58 or 90 degrees, and they go bouncing and rolling together down to the bottom of the incline.

In fact, one of the chief worries of the racers is that they will be spilled by some fool driver coming in the face. With a track banked right up from horizontal to perpendicular and none too wide at any point, it is a tremendous task for the riders to pass one another. The slightest swerve means a crash—and a crash may mean a fatality.

The experienced riders learn at length not to swerve. But the green riders wabble viciously at anything like high speed. And they are the ones who cause the trouble. More than that, the racing game is getting chock full of greenhorns. The money is so big and the game so fascinating, that new recruits are turning up every day. Also there are constantly gaps to be filled, because of the deaths and the retirements of the old timers. Green riders, fast motors and banked tracks are enough to cause slight mental uneasiness to even the hardened drivers.

The mental strain is not the only one that riders suffer. The fact is, that few branches of sport cause greater physical strain than motorcycle racing on a board track.

The riders must go at speeds of 85 to 95 miles, on a track illuminated by electricity. Of course, it is as bright as day, but artificial light is always harder on the eyes than natural light, and this is especially true under the circumstances. Even the use of goggles affords only partial protection from the terrific wind pressure.

Then there is the constant hammering of the bodies as the result of the bumping at high speed. But worse than this even is the physical strain of holding the machine steady and keeping it on the track. Ninety miles an hour is accomplished with this, the riders must have muscles of steel.

The worst strain of all, however, is that which comes from the pressure of centrifugal force. It is this force that keeps the machine on the track when it is going at high speed and holds it tight against the sheer side of the wall. The same pressure that keeps the motorcycle from falling presses the motorcyclist against the top of his machine. To protect themselves most of the drivers have pads at this point on their frame, and in a fast race they are held against these as though they were in a vice.

Racing motorcycles on board tracks go some. About the fastest thing on wheels is the famous Twentieth Century limited. Yet it goes at a small pace compared with a racing motorcycle. This big train averages 45.6 miles an hour for its entire run of racing distance, and makes a hundred miles an hour. The following comparisons are illuminating:

Albany	3	142	1.4	100
Buffalo	8.9	411	4.3	400
Cleveland	12.6	578	5.7	500
Toledo	15.1	688	6.9	600
Chicago	20	912	9.1	800

In other words a motorcycle could go from New York to Chicago in less than half the time of the Twentieth Century Limited.

If a motorcycle and a train started side by side from New York and took the same route to Chicago, the Twentieth Century would be a few miles past Buffalo when the motorcycle pulled up at Chicago.

Long's Speed On His Hits Is Big Help

Robertson Led Through Games of May 27, but Right Now Tommy Long Is Ahead—Long Leads in Number of Hits

Through the games of May 27 D. Robertson, the sensational North Carolina youngster now with Mobile, is leading the Southern league batters, though Tommy Long, of Atlanta, is right now ahead of the Mobile star. Robertson's average through the game of May 27 is .350 with Tommy Long just ten points in the rear.

In total base hitting Robertson has hit for ninety bags while in hits Long tops the bunch with sixty-five bingles. In two sackers Ward of Memphis, leads with ten, with Sloan, of Montgomery, leading in three sackers with seven and Robertson leads in home runs with six circuit smashes.

At sacrifice hitting Bob Messenger, of Birmingham, is first with fourteen and D. Robertson and Stock, of Mobile, lead the base stealers with eighteen each.

Atlantan has six men who are hitting over .250, which isn't half bad as the other regulars on the squad are crowding this mark.

Here are the averages of all over .250:

THE MAN BEHIND THE MASK

Is the One Great Secret of the Washington Team's Defensive Power

ALVA WILLIAMS. EDDIE AINSMITH. JOHN HENRY.

Men who follow baseball closely realize the power that lies in a great catcher, like Bresnahan, Kling, Thomas and a few more of the top notchers.

In the club of youngsters he built up to startle the baseball world last fall, Clarke Griffith, manager of the Washington team, has a catching department that ranks with any in the land.

Griff's first string catcher is Ainsmith, the husky chap who handles the lightning delivery of the Idaho cyclone, Walter Johnson. Ainsmith is better than ever this year, and has been doing the bulk of the work to date for the Nationals.

Henry is about ready to get back into the game as a regular, and take some of the burden off Ainsmith's shoulders. His injured knee is well and he will soon be handling the slants of Bob Groom, Tom Hughes and Carl Cashion.

The third of the Washington backstops is Alva Williams, the big, good-natured pal of the young pitchers. He has been devoting much time getting the recruit pitchers in shape and now that the race is settling down will be taking his turn behind the bat more frequently.

Jackson Holds The Top Place In Many Ways

While Cobb Has the Best Average, Joe Jackson Leads in Most Every Other Department of Individual Play

Ty Cobb manages to hold his own as hitting king of the American league with Joe Jackson coming like a house afire. Eddie Collins has slumped the past week and is now in fourth place, Speaker being third. Cobb's average through the games of May 28 is .445 with Jackson hitting .438, Speaker .379 and Collins .375.

In total base clouts Jackson has the lead with 100 bags and this boy also leads in the number of hits with sixty. At two sackers Jackson again leads with thirteen and at three baggers he is again at the top with thirteen. In sacrifice hitting Chapman, of Cleveland, is the star with seventeen and Clyde Milan has now taken the leadership as the leading base stealer. Collins and Cobb rank second and third.

Here are the figures through the games of May 28 of all who are over .300:

Hill	070 953 03x—27 17

Summary: Three-base hits, Winburn. Cartrell; two-base hits, Cartrell, Winburn 2, Grist, J. Green, Carter and Winburn; struck out, by Green 10, by Carter 6, by Thorton 5; hit by pitched ball, Green 2.

Batteries: For Hill, J. Green, Carter and Winburn; for Capitol, Thorton and Carson. Umpire, Braswell.

Cravath Tops Star Hitters In Old League

Philadelphia Stars Are Going at Good Clip, This Showing Main Reason Why the Phillies Now Top the League

Outfielder Cravath, the slugging Philly outerworks man, is holding his own as batting leader of the National league and his average is daily receiving a boost. Right now he is hitting .400 with Huggins in second place with .355 and Hans Wagner third with .351. This is through the games of May 28.

At total base hitting Miller, of Pittsburg, has the palm with sixty-eight bags, which is far short of Jackson's work in the American. In toe number of hits Manager Tinker, of Cincinnati, leads with forty-five. At two base hitting Knabe, of Philadelphia, is first with twelve and at three base drives Konetchy, of St. Louis, and Miller, of Pittsburg, are tied for the lead with seven each. Sherwood Magee, of Philadelphia, leads in home runs with five. Myers, of Boston, Knabe, of Philadelphia, and S. Magee, of the same club, lead in sacrifice hits with ten each and Herzog leads the stolen base column with fourteen.

COVALESKIE TO BROWNS

Robert Lee Hodges, the economical president of the St. Louis Browns, yesterday offered $4,500 for Harry Coveleskie, provided the Pole could be sent north at once.

The offer was refused at once, and for two reasons.

To part with eother of the team's two star southpaws just at present would cripple it so severely as to put it out of the race.

Coveleskie doesn't want to go to the majors himself until the end of the season, but wants to stick it out with the Lookouts. He wants to hang up another banner year in Dixie and then go to the big belt and show them how its done.

The Chattanooga club is merely taking a chance on getting a smaller price for the big Pole. If he keeps on going like he is just now, he'll be worth easily the amount offered for him in the fall. The high price may be offered because of present stringency of pitchers, but the Pole's services are certainly worth more than the difference in fall value and mid-season value.

The Pole is perfectly satisfied to spend the remainder of the season in Chattanooga, and in fact, is anxious to do so. Few pitchers are anxious to go up to the Browns if they can land in another job, and others are likely to be after the southpaw if he keeps going strong.—Chattanoog Times.

...ich Trophies Hung Up for Marathon Race

South Georgia All Agog Over the Big Event Set for July Fourth—Already Runners Have Gone Into Training

ALBANY, May 31.—Prizes totalling $200 are offered by merchants of Albany and Sylvester, the Albany Herald and the Worth County Local, to the winners in the annual Fourth of July Marathon, to be run this year from Albany to Sylvester, a distance of 24 miles. The prizes will be: First prize, $100; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $20.

The first Marathon, which was run last Fourth of July from Sylvester to Albany, was such a success that it was decided to make it an annual event, under the auspices of the two newspapers.

The race will be open to all amateur runners in Worth and Dougherty counties who were bona fide residents of those counties on May 18.

All runners will be examined by a physician before entering. Dr. L. E. Welch, of this city, will be the official physician for the race. Last year one of the entrants in the race did not arrive at the starting point in time to undergo this examination, and as the result of heart trouble fell by the roadside exhausted and in a serious condition before the goal was reached. This year, no one will be permitted to enter the race unless passed by the official physician.

An entrance fee of $2 will be charged each contestant, which will be all the expense attached to the race as far as the contestants are concerned. Runners from Worth county will come to Albany the day before the race, undergo the examination and remain here over night, ready to make the start early next morning.

The race will begin at 5 a. m. from the Herald office. It will end at the office of the Worth County Local, in Sylvester.

At noon in the Worth county capital, a big barbecue will be served, at which the contestants in the big race and the officials will be the guests of honor. All of Worth county will be there to see the finish of the race and partake of the barbecue. *Many auto*mobile parties from Albany will go ahead of the runners to see the finish.

After the barbecue, a special train will leave Sylvester for Albany, bringing the crowd to see the ball game and the other Fourth of July festivities, including fireworks at night. Editor Grubbs, of the Worth County Local, says at least 2,000 Worth county people will come to Albany on this special train, and by automobiles to see the ball game between Columbus and Albany, of the South Atlantic league.

Because of the generous prizes offered, it is expected that the number of entrants will be large. There will be great rivalry between Dougherty and Worth counties as to which will capture first honors in the race.

AT SWIMMING MORE ENTER

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

NEW YORK, May 31.—It is the general opinion of followers of college swimming that the changes which will be proposed for the conduct of the meets at the next meeting of the Intercollegiate Swimming league, if adopted, will add interest to the sport. It is proposed to open the way for more colleges to compete than have ever been permitted to enter the meets before and to also make some chances in the rules of water polo. The changes will be recommended by the executive committee of the league and will likely be adopted.

Most important in the proposition to open the annual individual intercollegiate championship meet to all college swimmers, whether members of the league or not. In the past only Pennsylvania, Yale, Cornell, Princeton, Columbia and the College of the City of New York, the six members of the league, have been allowed to enter swimmers in the meet. But there have always been good swimmers at colleges like Amherst, Brown, Williams and Union, which do not have league teams, and it is expected that better races will result if these good swimmers are allowed to compete.

George Butler Back at Game

NEW YORK, May 31.—Horsemen throughout the country are no doubt gratified to note that James Butler will campaign a stable of trotting bred horses and in other ways is exhibiting a renewed interest in the sport. Mr. Butler is by nature a running horse man, and, as a matter of fact, owns the Juarez, Mexico, racing plant, and is one of the largest supporters of the racing of the blooded horse today. All will recall the time when his grand circuit stable was one of the strongest that marched through the big line each year—Direct, the unbeaten Directum Kelly, Hetty Green, the superb Consuela S, King Direct and a host of other high class trotters and pacers that will never be forgotten.

During the coming season Mr. Butler will race his stable over the nearby half-mile tracks. Many of the best were raised at his East View farm, and are the descendants of those who carried his colors to victory in the grand circuit battles of the past. In the chestnut pacing stallion, Directum I, 2:08 1-4, record made over a half-mile track, he has what is looked upon as one of the fastest pacers in the world. Directum I is possessed of better than two-minute speed, and has in the past raced like a thoroughly game horse. He is a son of Directum Kelly, 2:08 1-4, and his dam Izetta, 2:13 1-2 by Pactolus, which never lost a race.

In addition to the chestnut stallion, Johnny Ryan, Mr. Butler's trainer, is working seven head at the farm tracks at East View, N. Y., and all will be moved to the Empire City plant in a day or two. Further evidence of Mr. Butler's renewed interest in the trotting horse sport was his donation of a silver cup valued at $100 to be awarded the winner of the three-year-old trot at the Empire City meeting of the Metropolitan circuit.

OUTDOOR MEET CALLED OFF

NEW YORK, May 31.—The offer of the Deal Beach Swimming club to hold the outdoor intercollegiate aquatic championships in its open air pool at Deal has been turned down by the student authorities, Goulding K. Wight, of Princeton, the association president, said in explaining the matter.

"We are very grateful to the club officials for their courteous offer of support, but we do not think it wise to hold summer championships until we are assured of a representative list of entries. It is absurd to run an intercollegiate meet under existing conditions for many of the colleges would be missing. In fact, the last championships held at Sheepshead Bay were most unsatisfactory on this account, and such exhibitions are against the best interests of the sport. The subject was thoroughly thrashed out at a recent session of the league delegates, and it was then decided to drop it for this year at least, because it became apparent that it would be impossible for many of the leading candidates to attend.

Metropolitan Wins

NEW YORK, May 31.—The Metropolitan Rowing club carried off leading honors in the forty-seventh annual races of the Harlem Regatta association, held on the Harle mriver speedtion, held on the Harlem river speedof the other events also went to crews and scullers from New York and its neighborhood. The greatest surprise of the day was the masterful manner in which the New York Athletic club, with the same crew that won the junior and intermediate eights from Columbia university, Columbia using different crews for each event.

Mrs. Joe Jinnett, of Los Angeles, who has driven the pacer Zomwoolsey a mile in 2:14 in Los Angeles, together with her husband, will start east shortly, where she will take part in races opposing men drivers. In addition to Zomwoolsey, they have Robert Strathway and Rancho Del Paso, trotters, and Chimney Sweep and Sugar Maid, runners. The string will be raced in Iowa in June, in Missouri in July, in Illinois in August, and Pennsylvania in September and in the Carolina circuit in October.

Letters Are Awarded Emory Track Athletes

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

OXFORD, Ga., May 31.—Ten track athletes were presented Es this morning by Dr. James E. Dickey, president of Emory, in behalf of the athletic authorities of Emory.

These athletes were entitled to the track E because of scoring a point to *the meet with Mercer and Emory sev*eral weeks ago at Macon.

The stars of the cinder path who received the block E with an arrow through it are:

C. B. Parrillo, of West Point, in 120-yard low hurdle.

W. A. Carlton, of Arcadia, Fla., in running broad jump, 440 yards dash.

D. E. Lasseter, of Cordele, in half mile run.

T. J. Pearce, of Cartersville, and Gus Muse, of Albany, in pole vault.

Asa Porter, of El Paso, Tex., in 220-yard dash.

Sophomores Winners Of Emory Pennant

OXFORD, Ga., May 31.—The final standing of the contenders in Emory's interclass baseball race for 1913 is:

	P.	W.	L.	Pct.
Sophomores	8	8	0	.750
Freshmen	9	6	3	.666
Seniors	6	2	4	.333
Juniors	7	1	6	.142

The Sophomores are the pennant winners. The postponed game between the Sophs and Seniors was not played because of the absence of several players on the latter team. It is now too late for this game to be played, which makes the standing for the season put the Sophomores on top.

The rag winners have played steady consistent ball, but only struck their true stride toward the latter part of the season when they walloped the Freshmen and took the top place for themselves.

Coach Stipe is the lucky coach and has the proud record of coaching two pennant winning teams in as many years.

Montezuma Wins

MONTEZUMA, Ga., May 31.—Montezuma made it two straight games by winning the second game of a series from Macon. The Macon team was composed of a team picked from the Fort Hawkins Macon Athletics and Gresham. Score 12 to 9. The features of the game were the two home runs of Emmett McKenzie.

ANOTHER ALABAMIAN TO MONTGOMERY CLUB.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 31. The Montgomery management has signed McDowell, the outfielder who played star ball with the University of Alabama this year. He will report here for duty tomorrow and will likely play in tomorrow's game.

FEDERAL TIRES

The Federal Rugged Tread has always been a "higher quality" tire. Heavier, stronger and more durable than non-skid tires are usually built, it has cost more to produce, therefore sold at a higher price than most other good tires.

Now, the recent reduction in prices makes these "extra service" tires cost no more than ordinary non-skid tires.

Quality remains unchanged—features of safety, durability and economy unquestioned. Made in all types for standard rims by the Federal Rubber Manufacturing Co., Milwaukee.

New Fashions In Boat Craft For This Year

Londoners Are More Than Pleased at Changes and the Return of the Cruising Season on the Old Thames

LONDON, May 31.—One of the chief causes for joy in the Londoner's heart when he beholds the glorious spring is the fact that he can fall back on his beloved old Thames to give him pleasure and pastime for a few grand months. There is not much doubt that boating, with few exceptions, is the Londoner's chief attraction in his leisure time. Tennis and golf, for instance, some will say, are quite as popular in the fine months as boating. That may be, but boating is essentially a one-season recreation; golf and tennis are pastimes that can be had all the year round. The Londoner realizes this, too, and is always impatient for the up-river season to commence.

Last year many people complained, or rather suggested, that punts were too broad or heavy. This year the new punts have been reduced in width by nearly half a foot, and made much lighter. Punts have been constructed of all sizes, some with room for just two, some for three and four or even more. Even motor punts are to be had now, but this is a speculation, and this season will tell whether there is a demand for them or not. There is no doubt that the punt has come to stay, for its popularity has gained enormously during the past few years, and it is as much as the boat owners can do to cope with the demand for the punt in the reight of the season. Mr. Messum, the Richmond boat builder, of world-renowned fame, and who sends a boat to all parts of the world—for foreign potentates included—told me that only a few years ago he had two punts and could not let them out for hire. Now he has between 200 and 300, and could do with more.

A strange craft that has, and still is, springing up in popularity in the dinghy. To those who only know sufficient about boating to know that a dinghy is that small tub-shaped vessel that one sees clinging to a yacht wherever it goes it must seem rather funny to hear it described as a popular river craft. But it is now one of the most popular little vessels on the upper reaches of the Thames. Of course, this is a glorified dinghy, and made especially comfortable. It is light and easily manageable and an ideal boat for the young man and his lady love, who can quite comfortably take lunch or tea on board. Boat builders are making a specialty of the dinghy, for the demand for it is tremendous. One boat builder alone has no fewer than 200 of these bubby little vessels, and can quite easily let every one out for hire on a Saturday or Sunday.

Old Athletes To Come Back

There will be something doing at the Georgia Tech within the next few days if the words of the old grades county for anything. They say that they will be here to help celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the school and to incidentally celebrate just a little. You can imagine the amount of "Pie Outside" stuff that will be thrown when this bunch of artists get together. Old athletes who hit the line for the Gold and White back in the days far beyond recall will be here to tell and retell their famous experiences. Then there will be the man that has been out of college just long enough to realize that he is a college grad and an alumnus of the school and he will also have tales to tell of feats done since he has left the classic halls.

But the great talk of the celebration will be when the old football and baseball stars get together and talk over old times. Such men as Lob Brown, Patty Luck, General Wood, of the United States army; George Crawford, of the Alabama Coal and Iron company, and a thousand others whose names bring back vivid recollections of great athletic stunts done long ago. This is to be a great thing for the school and will mean a great deal for the future athlitic career of this institution that invariably breaks up all dope and turns the tables when least expected.

SEEK GAME WEDNESDAY

In view of the fact that the Cracker club will play a Sunday game in Nashville, Wednesday will be an off day for the team, and the local mogul is now working overtime to arrange some kind of battle for the local crew so as to give the fans all the baseball they wish. On Wednesday the local business houses begin the early closing move, and it is figured that with so many baseball fans off during the day it would be best to have a game at the local park.

The Crackers are back here on Thursday to open a series of three games, and it would be mighty easy to pull off a game the day before. It is now the intention of the local association to get the Nashville Vols here for the off-day game. Permission can easily be secured from the league head, and if Nashville is willing, which isn't at all unlikely, the game will be staged.

Tennis Stars Work For Champ Battles

NEW YORK, May 31.—The Australian lawn tennis players practiced on the courts of the West Side Tennis club, where the Davis cup matches will be decided next week, while the Americans went to the Westchester Country club.

M. E. McLoughlin, the Californian, lost two sets to C. E. Haggett, the English professional, as he played from back court in tuning up his ground strokes. Then McLoughlin went to the net and won by smashing.

Miss Brown Wins In Tennis Singles

PHILADELPHIA, May 31.—Miss Mary Brown, of Los Angeles, national woman's lawn tennis champion, defeated Mrs. Robert Williams, of Boston, metropolitan title holder, in the semi-final round of the woman's lawn tennis tournament for the championship of Pennsylvania and eastern states at Haverford. Miss Brown will meet Miss Edna Wildey, of Plainfield, N. J., in the final round tomorrow.

Charles B. Durborrow, the Philadelphia bank clerk who hopes to swim the English channel, is again covering long distances in the Delaware river in the vicinity of the Quaker City in preparation to undertaking more difficult swims before going abroad. He has swam about 1,102 miles during the last three years.

ARTHUR PELKY—L. M'CARTY

Despite the legal difficulties following the death of Luther McCarty in the ring at Calgary Saturday, Arthur Pelky, the man who beat him, will probably be sought by many boxing promoters for matches in the United States. Under the training of Tommy Burns, Pelky has, it is believed, developed into a good fighter. His last appearance in New York a few months ago showed him to be a fourth rater. But he made such a good showing against McCarty in the few second they boxed that Burns must have done wonders with him.

His next match will likely be with "Gunboat" Smith or Jesse Willard, though Burns, who was one of the most successful lemon pickers in the game, may keep him away from these good men till he has pocketed some easy money.

McCarty's death, the physicians say, is in no way to be blamed on Pelky. He died from a light blow on the jaw which dislocated a bone in his spinal column. That the blow was light is proved by the fact that it did not even daze McCarty. The victim probably had his head twisted at the wrong angle at the moment the blow was delivered.

CHANCE PICKS YOUNGSTER WHO BEAT OUT JIM THORPE

HOUSTON, Tex., May 31.—If Jimmy Thorpe, the well known aboriginee, remains upon Mr. McGraw's payroll until next September he may have the pleasure of meeting face to face again at least one athlete who made him eat at the second table.

The young man who forced Thorpe to content himself with second honors in a two-man race, is none other than Bill Reynolds, Houston catcher, who was bought by Arthur Irwin for the New York Americans. According to the terms of purchase Reynolds is to report at Frank Chance at the conclusion of the Texas league campaign. One thousand dollars of New York money is already in the strong box of the local club and should Reynolds stick it out with the Yanks until May 14, 1914, $2,000 more will be coming.

Reynolds and Thorpe had their little race while duelling at Anadarko, Okla., in the early summer of 1910 for the right field position. The club manager gave both a thorough trial and then took Reynolds, much to the extreme discomfiture of Thorpe, who was left stranded. After sticking around Anadarko for two weeks and eating at the expense of the sucessful candidates for the team, Thorpe faded away.

When the Giants dropped into Houston for three exhibition games this spring Thorpe and Reynolds met, but no effusive greetings followed. Reynolds had no objection to shaking hands with Jim and sympathizing with him for the loss of the Olympian medals, but Thorpe remained in the background. The two did not come face to face until Thorpe's first time at bat. Thorpe's only form of recognition was a stiff and formal bow.

In a game later, Scout Irwin saw Reynolds rip off a three-bagger and a single against Lou Bader, an ex-Giant. The two blows drove in four runs and confirmed Irwin's suspicions that Reynolds would be a mighty handy man for Chance to have sticking around.

Reynolds is perhaps the only man in baseball today who ever made a home run on a strike out. The freak play in which he was the beneficiary occurred at Corpus Christi in the spring of 1911, when Reynolds was playing independent ball. He missed his swing at the third strike, which was a drop ball, and the ball bounded over a low grandstand after striking the plate. The pitcher who was opposing Reynolds was Fagan Bureh, now a catcher for the Portland club of the Pacific Coast league.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Extra Mileage Without Extra Cost

A tire that can't rim-cut is worth to you more than a tire that does.

An oversize tire, with added air capacity, is worth more than a tire without it.

Lower Prices

No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than clinchers.

Yet they became, at an extra price, the most popular tires in the world.

Little by little, as our output increased, the price of these tires has been cut. Our last reduction was about 11 per cent.

Compare Them

The clincher tire will rim-cut when wholly or partly deflated. This is the costliest tire trouble one has to contend with.

No-Rim-Cut tires were never known to rim-cut.

And these tires, as compared with clinchers, have one-tenth greater air capacity. That extra capacity, under average conditions, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

Now at no extra price you get tires that can't rim-cut, tires with this overcapacity. You get the tires which, in the test of time, have come to outsell any other.

Is it not worth while to insist on them?

Mutuel Best For Everyone

All but the Plunger Have Come to Conclusion That It Is the Best

BALTIMORE, Md., May 31.—As the race meeting at Pimlico has concluded, it is in line to report on the mutuel system of speculation which has been in vogue at that track. That the system has come to stay, so far as Pimlico is concerned, is conceded on all sides. The management has been more than satisfied with the results. The profits have been well in advance of the amount paid for the betting privileges under the old system of odds laying. In fact, they have so far exceeded expectations of the management that it is more than probable that the rake-off of 6 per cent will be cut down to 4, and possibly 3, per cent next year.

During the recent meeting the average receipts were about $106,000 daily. This sum was increased considerably by the attendance of many of the heavier bettors of the old school like John O'Brien, Roy Offurt, "Tim" and "Joe" Murphy, as well as many large commissions that were sent to the track from outside sources, which would easily swell the receipts at the least $25,000 a day.

Thus it can be estimated that if the Pimlico meeting had to depend upon Baltimore and Washington alone for its speculative patronage it is doubtful if the business would amount to more than $80,000 a day.

On a basis of an $80,000 day the profits are something like $5,000, out of which the expenses have to be paid. The expenses amount to nearly $1,500 a day for salaries alone, leaving $3,500 to pay the running expenses of the track and the purses. This amount is just about enough to cover the list. This leaves the gate receipts as profit for the stockholders, who receive only 6 per cent of the surplus. These items are quoted to show that under the most adverse conditions, with conflict at other tracks and the absence of the more pronounced professional bettors, Pimlico track could get along nicely with the mutuel machines.

That the public at Baltimore likes the innovation has been proved by the attendance. Even in bad weather the grandstand and lawns were packed to the crowding limit. The gate receipts as a whole fell off on midweek days, which, it is said, was due to the absence of the odds layers, their employes and followers and not to the general sport lovers. Notwithstanding there has been a rake-off of about $6,000 daily, the business constantly increased or held its own excepting on Saturday when the transactions amounted to 30 per cent more than it showed on other days.

A separate entrance with an office building three stories high will be erected on the new baseball grounds of the New York American league team. It will be three stories high, 125 feet long by 65 feet deep. The new plant will be a steel and concrete structure, occupying the entire block bounded by Broadway, 225th and 226th and the New York Central railroad tracks. The covered stands will seat 26,000, while the open stands will accommodate about 5,000.

PERFECT SOME NEW BALL WHEN ARM WEARS COLD

One often hears an old-timer out at the ball park turn to his companion after the game and say, "That fellow's a wonder. He's got a $10,000 head on him and a 10-cent arm."

For brevity and bull's-eye criticism we would have to go far before reaching anything with which to sum up some pitchers now working in the major leagues.

How many pitchers are in the business who possess just two requisites, a $10,000 head and a 10-cent arm, and nothing more? A great many, when you consider the list.

As the years marking up the sum total of a player's service on the diamond approach that stage where his arm begins to lose its effectiveness and cunning, the twirler begins to see more and more he will have to depend on his baseball knowledge of his opponents' weakness to help him in the pinch. His head alone is left and he must use it to retain his job.

CAN GO ON HEAD.

If he has been a scientific pitcher and has studied the poses and weaknesses of the men batting against him, it is likely he can last for several seasons in the big show even after his arm is gone. Better yet, if he has acquired some new curve, as a spitter, for instance, he does not have to depend entirely on his gray matter or his speed. A spitter, once acquired, is so baffling that it fools the best batters, and is a worn-out flinger's chief asset.

The leagues are full of cases where slab men, their arms dead from continued use in the shade of the big top, have either utilized the knowledge attained by years of hard work on the diamond, and tucked it away beneath their caps for future reference, or have, on the other hand, acquired a new ball, such as the spitter, or a slow curve, with which they regained their old-time effectiveness.

Probably Jack Chesbro formerly with the Yankees, is a notable example. Jack was a goner, as far as pitching was concerned, in 1903. The fall of that year found him practicing his new ball, the famed spitter, and in 1904 he hung up a league record for victories won which was not passed till last year.

Another example was Dusty Rhodes, formerly one of the best Nap pitchers. Dusty had no speed, and just a few curves, but the weakness of every batter in the American league was tucked away behind his dark locks, and seldom was it that any of them were able to get a ball in just the right place for them to knock it out of the lot. Dusty's gray matter kept him in the league long after his arm had ceased to earn his salary.

They say Christy Mathewson is sliding so far as speed and curves are concerned. But Christy won't slide yet, if his brain doesn't slip a cog or two. The hero of last fall's world's series has a mighty field of baseball brains ensconced above his ears, and it is likely to be a long time before National league hitters will cease to regard him as dangerous.

Report has it that Bobby Groom, of Washington, would have been a dead one long ago were it not for the fact that he worked overtime a few years ago and added a spitball to his faded repertory which enabled him to stick in the big show after his arm was good only for the minors.

Last on the list is Leon Ames, now of the Cincinnati Reds. Leon knows that his whip is sliding—sliding fast. So what does he do? Works day after day in an endeavor to perfect a spitter to prolong his days in the big circle. Report has it that he is succeeding, too, which means that Ames won't be through with the majors for some time to come.

And there are many others in the list, who, but for their foresight in developing new deliveries have remained for a long time in the shade of the big top—remained there with increasing honor, too. The term "a $10,000 head and a 10-cent arm" is not one of opprobrium, but the proud possession of many a gray-haired hurler.

Builders Work For Best Boat For Americans

Probable That Three Will Be Built and Then the Best Selected to Try and Retain the Lipton Cup

NEW YORK, May 31.—A universal feeling of satisfaction was expressed among yachtsmen when they heard that the New York Yacht club had accepted the last challenge of Sir Thomas Lipton to race for the America's cup, sent through the Royal Ulster Yacht club.

It was particularly gratifying to some members of the New York Yacht club, who are glad that the club has consented to race under the present rule of measurement and time allowance, which produces a flimsy racing machine, pure and simple.

Many yachtsmen have maintained since the negotiations between the two clubs have been in progress that it would be best for both sides if good seaworthy yachts of the seventy-five-foot waterline length could be built under the present rule, and they are glad Sir Thomas has gained the point in this respect for which he so manfully strove.

"I am really glad to hear that the challenge has been accepted, and if the cup is to be defended by a seventy-five-foot boat it will be doubly good news," said John H. Hanan. He has been a member of the New York Yacht club for twenty-three years, and owns, besides the two hundred-foot steam yacht Surf, the large power boats Hurrier and Edithia. His sons, Addison G. Hanan and H. Wilmer Hanan, who own the forty-foot sloop Aspirant and the schooner Astrid, have long been recognized as among the cleverest amateur skippers in these waters. Addison is also a designer, having just completed a yacht for the "P" class, which will soon be launched. John H. Hanan has been mentioned as a possible builder of a cup defender which is to be managed and sailed by his sons.

"It goes without saying," said a well known racing man, "that the Herreshoffs will build one, or perhaps two, cup defenders, but there are other designers who will surely have a chance to show their skill, and one of these will be William Gardner, whose sloops Medora, Michicago and Gray Jacket won about everything in their respective classes last season, are all built under the rules which will now obtain for the America's cup, and so are six or seven other yachts of Gardner design that won prizes in the Baltic last summer."

This Utility Muchly Sought

With the Chicago White Sox is one player who isn't thought as much of by Jimmy Callahan as by the other seven managers in the American league. That player is Rollie Zeider, and he's wanted by every manager in the American league. There is not a club that has not made an offer for Zeider, but Callahan has always refused to part with Rollie. At the same time he has abandoned the idea, or seems to have done so, of making a regular of him. And Zeider is only utility man with the White Sox, and second utility man at that, Joe Berger getting the first call.

Zeider does not break into many games with the Sox these days, but there's many a manager who believes that if he got regular work he would develop into a real star.

Buford Club Winner Over Lawrenceville, 5-4

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., May 31.—A most interesting game of baseball was played at Lawrenceville Tuesday between the Lawrenceville and Buford teams, the latter winning by a 5 to 4 score. Quite a large crowd of local rooters were out and some of the Buford fans journeyed over to cheer their team on to victory. There was plenty of work for the rooters, though, for until the last ball was pitched it was anybody's game.

For Lawrenceville McConnell pitched the best game of his career. Jack Poe, the veteran catcher of Lawrenceville, "came back," and on account of his good work and coaching, McConnell was steady throughout the entire game and, though he was touched up for fourteen hits, they were well scattered and far apart when hits were really needed. McConnell is sure to develop into a world-beater if he is properly coached and taught the fine parts of twirling.

Sheets' Robinson covered himself with glory at second and squandered everything that came his way with as much ease and grace as Lajoie ever exhibited. "Cubb" Houston, in left field, made several shoestring catches and it was hard to believe that he had really latched on to two of them until he turned to throw. In all, the game was well played by both sides and though the Buford boys were victorious, and to them belongs all of the glory, still they have no edge on the Lawrenceville boys, and it would be hard to tell just what would be the result in a series.

For Buford K. Brogdon was easy the auto winner. He ran bases like a house afire and it was on account of his speed to a great extent that the game was won. Brogdon started the twirling for the Buford boys and was going well when the mighty Robinson arrived on the scene, his teammates having left him behind at Buford. When he took his position in the box gloom gathered over the Lawrenceville team and the second inning he pitched he struck out the batters in one, two, three order, but after that the Lawrenceville boys steadied that he was not so awful and they latched on him for several hard wallops among them a two-bagger and a hit by H. Robinson for three sacks. The score was tied by the home team in the eighth inning and it was in the seventh before the Buford boys could put one across. This ended the scoring and gave the game to Buford.

The Lawrenceville team is open for challenges and would be glad to hear from some of the Atlanta teams.

PERRYMAN REINSTATED.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 31.—The national baseball commission declared Player E. K. Perryman, of the New York National league club, to be in good standing. The player stated that he did not report to his club this spring owing to his desire to complete his college course, and therefore no penalty was inflicted.

Klaus is Best Of the Bunch Claiming Belt

Klaus Has Never Met a Decisive Defeat and Probably Has the Best Claim to Middleweight Honors

NEW YORK, May 31.—Frank Klaus, world's middleweight claimant, really has a right to the title. Klaus never has met decisive defeat.

He has fought every good middleweight in the world. He has been fighting for nine years and in that time he has boxed close to 100 battles. He has also fought heavyweights as well as middleweights. He beat Porky Flynn at Boston in twelve rounds; Jack Twin Sullivan, also in Boston. He beat Jimmy Gardner when he was at his best, in Boston, in twelve rounds. He knocked out Frank Mitchell in nine rounds and also knocked out Tommy Sullivan in two rounds. These bouts took place in Boston.

Klaus fought Kid Hubert, also a heavyweight, and knocked him out in two rounds. It took Stanley Ketchel, then middleweight champion of the world, to win over Hubert, six rounds. Klaus has one of the quickest knockouts on record. He knocked out Jim Smith, the Westchester farmer, in 49 seconds, at the National A. C., at Philadelphia. In the same ring, the same night, he fought Harry Mansfield and knocked him out in two rounds. He beat Leo Houck three times, twice in Philadelphia and once in Boston, in twelve rounds. He beat Harry Lewis twice in Philadelphia. Klaus defeated Billy Papke in Pittsburg.

Klaus started to box in Pittsburg and after beating every good middleweight that could be secured for him, he decided to come east, five years ago. Since then he has made his home in Philadelphia. He has fought five times in San Francisco. He got a decision over Dillon there in twenty rounds and Petrosky in twenty rounds. He knocked out Montana Dan Sullivan in three rounds; also knocked out Vic Hanson in eight rounds at Colinga, Cal. He beat Willie Lewis, a knockout, in six rounds, in New York. Klaus knocked out Montana Jack Sullivan, in three rounds in New York.

WHIPPED KETCHELL.

When Stanley Ketchel was champion, Klaus beat him in six rounds in Pittsburg. This was Ketchel's first fight, after being beaten by Jack Johnson. Klaus should have knocked Ketchel out that night as he had him all but out in the third round and Ketchel slipped away and robbed Klaus from being the middleweight champion of the world then.

On May 30, 1912, Klaus went to Paris, where he fought George Carpentier for the middleweight championship of Europe; Klaus knocking Carpentier out in eighteen rounds. His next fight in Europe was with Marcel Moreau. Frank put him out in three rounds. Papke fought Moreau two months before that and it took him sixteen rounds to win over Moreau. After this fight Klaus toured Europe, giving boxing exhibitions.

The next important fight in Paris, then, was George Carpentier and Billy Papke, Papke winning the fight in seventeen rounds. Klaus was matched to meet the winner. Papke was recognized as the best middleweight in America and Klaus winning the championship of Europe, Frank was matched to meet Papke for the middleweight championship of the world and Klaus won in fifteen rounds.

THE RED MAN OF THE REDS ---BY RIPLEY

Sed Nuff!

We say it before we start. And then maybe we ought not start; but be gone—another little story won't do any harm.

His name is George Washington Murphy Johnson. George Washington—'cause all great men are named that; and Johnson—just like Walter of Clark Griffith's crew; and besides he's an Indian. Shall we all put on our hats and go home? Can you beat that? Little wonder he is the "find" of the year and the only bright spot of Tink's Tailenders.

So we'll tell you about him, those of you that are here. We'll tell you about this Big Chief who has joined the tribe of Bender, Meyers, and Thorpe.

What really makes George Washington Murphy Johnson great is the fact that George Washington Murphy Johnson is his honest and truly name—his Indian name. It is the name given him when a child and he has always kept it intact and always used it as a thing to be called by. And how well he has prospered is best illustrated in his career and present position in the pitcher's box.

You see George—we should say "Chief," because he wouldn't be an Indian if he wasn't called that once in a while—you see, George—mean Chief—is not a fullblooded Indian. His grandfather was Irish.

And his grandfather's name was Murphy.

Like all Murphys who are Irish, George's grandfather was a fighter, and when the Civil war broke out, he enlisted, leaving George's father in care of a friend by the name of Johnson, thus explaining why the Chief's father came to be called "Johnson" when he grew up. Naturally little George was always known as Johnson, when his real name was Murphy. So today we have it—George Washington Murphy Johnson, and we don't care what's in a name!

The Chief is a member of the Winnebago tribe of Nebraska, and was raised up on a reservation to the age of seven years. Then his father died and little George Johnson and his mother reached Philadelphia to live and forget—it's so easy to forget in Philadelphia.

But he remembered to go to school, and until the age of fourteen he attended the Lincoln institute.

George was a good scholar and soon was the very best baseball player in the whole institution, as well as the best pitcher for his size in the whole of Slumberland. Just as he was getting good his mother moved him back to the land of his birth among the Indians. It looked like it was all off—like he never would play ball again, and the little Indian looked like rain-in-the-face as he tearfully thought of his shattered future—his ruined career.

But what he expected did not happen, and he was sent to school in Flandreau, S. D., just the same as in Phillytown, and he continued his studies by playing on the school nine.

When nineteen he was made a member of the famous Nebraska Indian team, and for the first time received money for his play.

"It was a good team, too, and I learned a lot traveling about the country—probably all I know. I learned so much I guess that was why the Lincoln club in the Western league signed me.

"Want me to tell you about it—where I went, etc?"

"Sure—go ahead."

"Well, I went from Lincoln club to the Sioux City team the next year, and from there I went to St. Joseph. Stayed in St. Joe three years, and last year had my best year, winning twenty-six and lost ten, besides pitching a no-hit no-run game.

"Callahan of the White Sox secured me and I went training to California with him. James couldn't see me at all, and besides some knockers got in their work and as a result I was turned back to St. Joe.

Kilbane Works At Attell Game With a Novice

Attell Often Let Good Boy Make Showing in First Match and in the Return Engagement Placed Him Away

CLEVELAND, O., May 31.—With his title of featherweight championship, Johnny Kilbane is showing some of the habits of the former title-holder, Abe Attell.

Attell was one of the foxiest boxers that ever pulled on a glove, and, although he squandered a fortune in gambling houses, he was a good business man.

One of his pet games was to box a promising youngster and get a close decision, permitting his opponent to show well. Some of the decisions were drawn very fine, so carefully did the champion conduct himself.

Tht result of Abe's cleverness was a return match, and the "comer" was generally proved counterfeit by Attell in the second meeting.

Attell tried this with Kilbane, boxing him in Kansas City over the ten-round route, and being awarded a decision when a draw would have been fair to both men. In the return bout at Los Angeles Attell lost his title.

Kilbane fought Johnny Dundee April 28 in the same ring where he defeated Attell. It was his first twenty-round bout since he won the title, and the referee called it a draw, which has caused much criticism.

Talk of a return match is already on. Dundee, impressed with himself, believes he can win the championship. Kilbane has been coy, but there is little doubt he will take on his challenger and then will extend himself as he did not do in the first bout, beat Dundee decisively and annex another fat purse.

An indication of Kilbane's ability to win return bouts was shown with Attell. He also proved it in the case of Joe Rivers, who won a twenty-round decision from Kilbane in McCarey's arena and was knocked out in the return engagement—the only knockout, by the way, against Rivers' name.

Back in the past Kilbane met many boys of his weight, shading them at the first meeting and either completely outdistancing them or knocking them out in the next. He is running true to form with Dundee.

ATLANTA LEARNS LESSON IN INDUSTRIAL WISDOM FROM CHATTANOOGA; WILL SURPASS TEACHER

PARTY VISITS TENN. CITY AND INSPECTS DISPLAY BUILDING

Sixty-Five Manufacturers and Commerce Members See Permanent Exhibit of Chattanooga-Made Goods

TO CALL MEETING TO GET SUCH A BUILDING HERE

Brooks Morgan, Chairman of Committee, Will Present Working Plans to Manufacturers Some Time This Week

Atlanta sat at the feet of Chattanooga last Thursday and learned a lesson in industrial wisdom. It was an object lesson and a most impressive one. It carried its weighty message at a glance. The Atlantians who took a one-day course at Chattanooga were eager scholars, so much so that they returned home with the firm intention of surpassing their teacher both in wisdom and in deeds.

A party of sixty-five Atlanta manufacturers and members of the Atlanta chamber of commerce went to the Lookout city last Thursday and inspected the permanent exhibit of Chattanooga-made goods which the Manufacturers' association of Chattanooga maintains to advertise to the world their home products and to enhance the prestige of their city as an industrial center.

The visitors found a handsome four-story building 50 by 110 feet, containing 15,000 square feet of actual exhibit space, occupied by hundreds of articles, all the product of Chattanooga factories. The exhibits number 125 and the entire display constitutes a wonderful showing of Chattanooga enterprise. It gives one the inevitable impression that the city that can produce such an array is a place of life, growth and opportunity. Its pulling power cannot be escaped. Every visitor feels it. The result is that it brings Chattanooga more people, more trade, more industries every year. It might be properly termed the power house for expanding that city.

That was the lesson the Atlantians learned and when they had thoroughly absorbed it, they said with one voice, "Let us go home and do likewise and then some. Chattanooga has but 300 manufacturing plants and they have 125 exhibitors. Atlanta and Fulton county have 548 factories. We can have at least 200 exhibitors and can fill a building eight or ten stories high with Atlanta made products. We can make it a year round exposition of Atlanta's industrial greatness, a greatness that does exist but has never yet been adequately presented to the world. We will make our manufacturers' building one of the show places of the entire south. We have learned our lesson. Now we will profit by it."

When Atlanta moves, it has a habit of moving quickly, and there is to be no exception to this custom in the matter of the manufacturers' building here. Brooks Morgan, chairman of the permanent exhibit committee of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, has all details worked out for the enterprise. He has been engaged in mapping out a plan for several months, and this week Secretary Cooper of the chamber of commerce will call a meeting of the manufacturers here and Mr. Morgan will present to them his plan. It is not been set for ar i etao i shrdlu expected that it will meet with an enthusiastic acceptance and that the manufacturers' display will be a reality before the year is over. No date has yet been set for the meeting but it will likely be called about the middle of the week.

"Atlanta and Fulton county," said Mr. Morgan, "contain more than 500 factories. A large number of these are small concerns. The people of Atlanta do not realize that they are here and hence they do not give them the patronage they should have. The first thing the proposed manufacturers' building would do would be to open the eyes of the people to what is being made right at their doors. This would result in increased patronage for the plants and that would mean increased working forces and therefore more people for the city and a bigger pay roll. The total amount of Atlanta's pay roll is not one large as it should be. The bigger the pay roll, of course the bigger the city. It would maintain and enlarge real estate values. It would ramify in a thousand different ways toward making the city yet greater. The Chattanooga trip and the discussion it has aroused has given a big impetus to the building project and I see no reason why it should not be

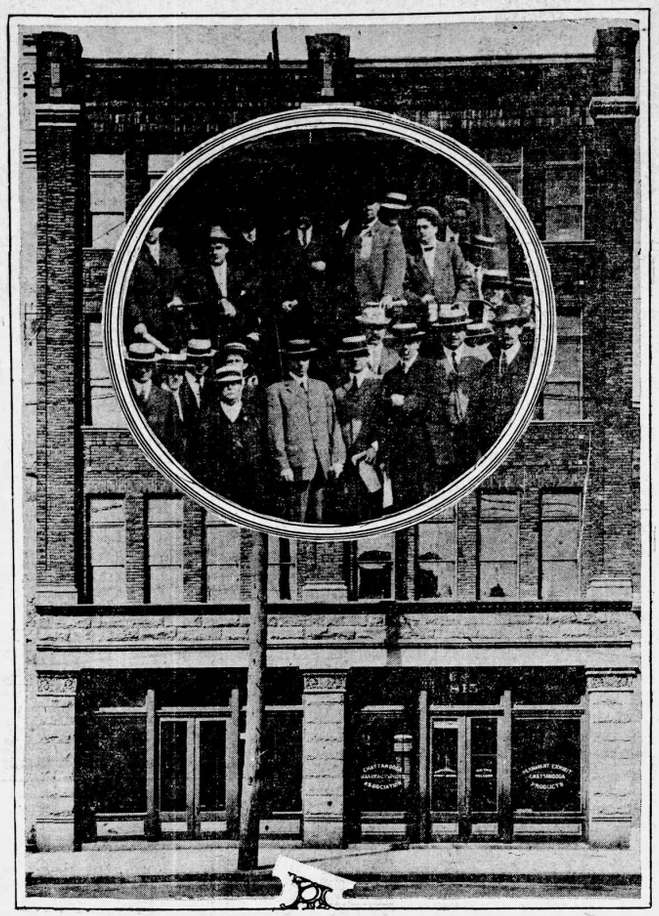
CHATTANOOGA HAS HANDSOME DISPLAY BUILDING



The illustration shows the building in which Chattanooga maintains a permanent exhibit of the goods made by its factories. In the small circular picture is shown the party of Atlanta manufacturers and members of the chamber of commerce who visited Chattanooga last Thursday and inspected the building.

FLORIDA U. C. T.'S URGE PASSAGE OF HOTEL LAW

Senior Counselor of Jacksonville Goes to Tallahassee to Press Measure

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 31.—Andrew Jackson, senior counselor of Jacksonville council 292, Jacksonville United Commercial Travelers, has been in Tallahassee for the past few days looking after the passage of the hotel bill for the state of Florida drafted and introduced in the senate by Senator Max M. Brown, and in the house by Speaker Farris, providing for better sanitary conditions and fire escapes in hotels.

This is one of the measures determined upon by the commercial travelers for the safety of the public. They live in hotels the greater part of the time, and they better than any other class are prepared to know what is needed.

This measure provides for a self-sustaining inspectorship to be paid for by the hotels and restaurants, the idea being that with between 3,500 and 4,000 hotels and restaurants in the state that none of them would object to pay a fee of $2 a year each.

Mr. Jackson says hat practically all of the hotel legislation that has been passed in former years has been inoperative, some of it because it was too unreasonable, but he has hopes that this bill will be passed. The congested calendar will make it necessary to get it through under a waiver of the rues, and since he has the support of some of the leading members he thinks it will be possible to do this.

"RAISE CUCUMBERS," SAYS PICKLE MAN TO FARMERS

Big Supply Needed for Pickle Factories Here—Now Sent From West

Georgia farmers are missing a great opportunity, according to S. E. Brannon, of Atlanta, in not growing more cucumbers.

Mr. Brannon, who is manager of the Atlanta branch of Jones Brothers & Co., the big vinegar and pickle manufacturing concern, with plants in various parts of the United States, says the demand in Georgia now for cucumbers for pickling purposes is far ahead of the supply available within the state.

"We are drawing large supplies for our Atlanta plant from the middle western states now," says Mr. Brannon, "but I hope there will be more home product for us within the next few years. Cucumbers should be grown here. Texas is now raising them in good quantities.

"Our company has a 100-acre tract in cucumbers near Ellenwood, Ga., and many farmers in that vicinity have started growing them for us. We are establishing a salting station there, where the cucumbers will be received from the growers, sorted and put in brine to be shipped to the plant here in Atlanta.

"The demand, the fact that the crop matures in two months and that it is ready to be marketed as early as July, and the good margin of profit, should all cause the Georgia farmers to give more consideration to the question of growing "pickles."

RETAIL GROCERS TO HAVE MONSTER PARADE

Suburban Towns Invited to Be Present and Take Part in Parade

Celebrating the first summer half holiday, the retail grocers and butchers of Atlanta will on next Wednesday afternoon give a monster parade. The parade will likely be three miles and will be the largest ever seen in Atlanta.

Plans have been arranged by O. T. Camp, president of the retail association and Francis Kamper, chairman of the arrangement committee.

The merchants and clerks of Decatur, Buckhead, East Atlanta, College Park, and Marietta are cordially invited by President Camp to be present on the occasion and take part in the parade.

GEORGIA RETAILERS WILL HOLD GREAT CONVENTION HERE

Secretary Bratton, of State Association, Writes of the Coming Meeting and Plans That Have Been Made

HUNDREDS OF FOREMOST MERCHANTS TO ATTEND

Will Convene for Three-Day Session Last Week in July and Will Urge Important Laws Before Legislature

Editor Firing Line:

Everybody is doing it.

What?

Boosting the Retail Merchants' convention to be held in Atlanta July 21, 22 and 23.

"We are coming."

This is the greeting that is coming in to the secretary, John Bratton, at the headquarters of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia from all over the state.

This is to be a notable gathering of merchants, the most notable perhaps in the history of the state.

Indications are that 1,500 or 2,000 merchants will be here. They are coming from every section of the state. The Georgia legislature will be in session at that time, and they will be present to witness the deliberations of that body and hope to wield such an influence as will cause the legislature to listen to their pleas and give them the laws so much needed and which they are asking for.

Forces are at work to make this gathering of merchants a most interesting and profitable one. And while they will not come here with an eye single to pleasure, ample entertainment will be provided. In short, Atlanta never does things by halves and will see to it that they have no dull moments. Of course the prime cause of their coming will be for business, of which there will be a plenty, and it is hoped and confidently believed that this convention will mark a new era in mercantile affairs and from hence forward improved conditions as relates to the retailers of Georgia will be seen.

Atlanta is indeed fortunate in securing this convention as no more important has ever been held within her confines or which will mean more to her as a convention city. That she gets the convention is due largely to the efforts of her two leading daily newspapers, The Journal and the Constitution. These papers are the friends of the merchants and are working hand-in-hand with the southern merchant in support of the measures they are demanding. That much credit is due them for the work they are doing is granted and will without doubt be accepted by the merchants themselves. Hotel accommodations and rates are being arranged for, also the railroads are being importuned and will make rates from every point in the state. There is no doubt that satisfactory arrangement will be made and when perfected ample notice will be given through the press and otherwise.

Everybody in Atlanta is on the job. Wholesalers, retailers, newspapers and all. Now that the convention is assured each interest is vieing with the other in seeing which can do the most work toward making the occasion a grand and glorious success in every particular. That such conditions prevail is indeed gratifying and bodes well for ultimate results.

In the meantime let the merchants of the state get busy. If you haven't already decided to come, do so at once. Be here, get in line with your brother merchant, stand shoulder to shoulder with him in the work before you, and thus help to bring about better mercantile conditions in Georgia.

As secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia for the past ten years I have had ample opportunity to become acquainted with conditions as relates to the retail merchant during that period, and up to the present time. They are indeed appalling. I watched the retail merchant gradually awaken from his Rip Van Winkle sleep until at last he has become fully aroused to the situation and the needs of the hour. That he has at last buckled on his armour and got into the thick of the fight in his own behalf is more than pleasing to me. With the coming of this convention we feed encouraged more than ever before and we unhesitatingly say that the prospects of success in the work we have been doing for the mercantile interests of the state so long are brighter than ever before. At the coming convention, July 21, 22 and 23 we hope to see and shake the hand of every merchant in the state, or at least his representative.

We would have it understood that every merchant in Georgia is requested and urged to be here, irrespective of whether he is a member of our association or not. When you have decided, kindly notify me at the association headquarters, 1124-25 Candler building, Atlanta, so that ample provisions may be made for you.

Come, be one among us to help do the things that will spell success to our efforts, and so that when the convention is over we can say, "We have kept the faith, we have whipped the fight."

Very truly yours,

JOHN BRATTON,
Secretary of Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia.
Atlanta, Ga., May 30, 1913.

HARDWARE MEN HAD SUCCESSFUL MEETING

Show Proved Drawing Card. Was Exhibit of Up-to-Date Hardware Products

The annual convention of the Georgia Retail Hardware association, held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, was one of the most successful meetings in the history of the association. The hardware show, which accompanied it this year, was also a successful feature, portraying all that was new and up to date in the hardware line.

J. R. Hall, of Moultrie, was elected president for the next year, with the other officers, as follows: J. H. Harris, of Carrollton, first vice president; P. S. Twitty, of Dublin, second vice president, and J. L. Moore, of Madison, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Moore was the only old officer re-elected.

The executive committee was chosen as follows: W. W. Robinson, of Dublin; E. D. Jarman, of Baxley, and C. B. Thomas, of Griffin. Delegates to the national convention are J. R. Hall, R. W. Hatcher, of Milledgeville, and John L. Moore.

The business sessions and the addresses and discussions had thereat proved most interesting and profitable. The entertainment features included luncheon at the Driving club, barbecue at the Atlanta Steel company's plant, and visits to the theaters and ball games. The next meeting of the association will be held at Savannah.

B. F. Avery & Sons, always active in any trade movement, had an excellent exhibit at the hardware show. It was in charge of W. H. Heuring, of the sales force. A feature of the exhibit was the new Avery automatically adjustable chilled steel plow.

Exhibits by the Blount Buggy company and the White Hickory Wagon company were adjoining and in charge of S. D. Jones and George Blount, respectively, and drew much attention.

The exhibit by the Atlanta Stove works opened the eyes of some of the visitors to the class and variety of their line, ranging from small heaters to big ranges, including the Imperial range and the advanced Barrett range.

Though most hardware dealers do not handle much that is included in the line of a leather concern, the exhibit of H. Wilensky & Sons was very interesting to the delegates. J. Wilensky was in charge. There was a leather-cutting machine in operation, a big display of sole leather and shoe accessories.

The Atlanta Agricultural works was well represented at the hardware show by a large and varied exhibit of their products, with several of the salesmen and officers of the company on hand to meet the convention delegates.

W. J. Dabney had one of the nearest complete lines of agricultural implements on exhibit at the show. He and his salesmen showed the delegates some highclass improved farm machinery.

Georgia Road Salesman Shows He Is There With the Rest on the Ragan-Malone Specialty

Here is Sammy in a "Johnny."

He is not preparing for an expedition to the north pole by way of the tropics, as the photograph might indicate.

This is merely Sam Hanes, Georgia road salesman for the Ragan-Malone company, and one of the "Johnny" coats that he has been selling in such large lots during the last month.

Don't get scared—this is feminine apparel. The salesman is not trying to set any new fashion in next winter overcoats for men.

Mr. Hanes put more cloaks into his territory in the selling season for the jobbers which is just coming to an end than his house has ever sold before down the Georgia road.

This is progressing considerably, too, for his house specializes on cloaks, carrying a big line from twenty factories and sending out all of their salesmen for several weeks in May each year on special cloak trips, taking two extra trunks to carry the cloak line.

This is Sam Hanes' first year with the house, but he took a place among the leaders on this feature right from the jump. That means big sales. This company says that as far as this item is concerned this year has been their biggest yet. Cloak sales have run high in total number and also in average price. This is on the cloaks ordered by the retailers for delivery next fall.

When the jobbers' salesmen go out with the cloak line it means bigger figures in the order sheets than on any other trip, for cloaks "run into money" surprisingly fast. The Ragan-Malone salesmen are now just finishing their cloak season.

The Lesson

Chattanooga's spirit of co-operative enterprise and progressiveness is splendidly typified in the building maintained by the manufacturers' association of that city for a permanent exhibit of goods made by Chattanooga factories. The building has been successfully operated for three years, and because of it Chattanooga is known as a thriving industrial center all over the eastern half of the United States. It has, too, made the people of Chattanooga thoroughly familiar with what is manufactured in their own town and they are yielding generous patronage to their home enterprises.

While Atlanta possesses a wonderful civic unity, a spirit of pull-together-for-the-common-good, this spirit has not yet been practically applied to the vast manufacturing industries with which the city and county teem. Because of this lack, the people here do not know what goods are made here and hence its consumption o Atlanta-made products is not a tithe of what it should be.

A definite plan for securing a display building here similar to the Chattanooga enterprise will soon be presented to the manufacturers by the officials of the chamber of commerce. No one thing could be of so much practical and immediate benefit to the city's industrial growth. Let the proposed manufacturers' building for Atlanta receive hearty and unanimous approval. Let the proposition be brought to a successful conclusion with true Atlanta spirit and celerity.

Trade Extension Trips

The suggestion of President Wilmer Moore, of the chamber of commerce, that the manufacturers and jobbers of Atlanta undertake a series of trade extension trips as an aid in the work of enlarging the city's wholesale market is worthy of earnest consideration. With competing cities on all sides of Atlanta, alert and aggressive for the trade of this territory, no means of emphasizing the importance of the market here should go unused. Atlanta's geographical situation with respect to the southeast is incomparable. This added to vigorous and unremitting trade campaigns will help the city to outdistance far her competitors. It is continuity of effort that brings results worth while and these trade trips such as those proposed would supply in effective measure.

Advertising

That advertising is one of the greatest forces in modern commerce is now generally admitted. Volume after volume has been written on its value and its methods. The following clipping from the trade magazine, Playthings, so aptly states what advertising does and unknowingly describes so nearly results that may be obtained from advertising in the Firing Line that we can not refrain from quoting it:

"It introduces the goods and paves the way for the advertising salesman; insures for the traveler a respectful hearing when he arrives; brings orders when the salesman is not on the ground; increases the volume of the order which the salesman can secure in person; makes the merchant respect the firm and the salesman; cements the friendship between the house and the merchant; tells the merchant what the salesman forgets to mention; supports the salesman in his statements to the merchant, and brings about a better acquaintance and understanding between the merchant and the traveler."

The Bagmen's parade was one of the big features of the meeting.

EHRLICH HOLDS NATIONAL MEMBERSHIP RECORD

Georgia T. P. A. Gets More New Members Than Any Man in U. S.

ALBERT EHRLICH.

Albert Ehrlich, of Savannah, Ga., chairman of the national hotel committee of the Travelers' Protective Association, and member of the Savannah post, holds the record of securing the largest number of new members to the T. P. A. of any one member of that organization in the United States during the past year, since the meeting of the last national convention.

Mr. Ehrlich wrote 107 applications for membership, the next highest number credited to any one individual was 105. Mr. Ehrlich has long been identified with T. P. A. work in Georgia and is one of the most enthusiastic and valuable members which the organization possesses. He is a member of the firm of A. Ehrlich Grocery company, of Savannah.

Through an error he was credited with only eighty-nine new members in the last issue of the T. P. A. magazine, but since the magazine came out, J. H. Andrews, secretary of the Georgia division, has received notice from the national secretary at St. Louis, that Mr. Ehrlich is the membership winner and that the proper number of new members which he has secured is 107.

Mr. Ehrlich's record constitutes not only an achievement for himself, but also for the Georgia division, and because of it he will be one of the most prominent figures at the next national convention which meets in Richmond, Va., on June 9.

P. W. Harris has already placed himself in the front rank of the A. M. Robinson company salesmen by a number of long orders recently from the big trade in his territory. He is covering the Piedmont section of South Carolina, with headquarters at Spartanburg. He will be recalled by many traveling men as an old Robinson salesman of some years ago, and he has only recently returned to this company.

brought to a quick and successful conclusion."

M. M. Davies, of Foote & Davies, who made the trip to Chattanooga, was delighted with what he saw there. "It was indeed a wonderful showing," said he, "and I think that our chamber of commerce can do no bigger work than that of launching such an enterprise here. And I think that Atlanta will have a display building and that what will be found there will be a surprise to the entire city."

Both President Wilmer Moore and Secretary Walter Cooper, of the chamber of commerce, were delighted with the trip to Chattanooga and are more firmly convinced than ever of the desirability of a manufacturers' building for Atlanta and the entire feasibility of putting it in operation here.

The Chattanooga building is located on one of the principal streets and not a day passes but what fifty or more visitors view the exhibits and during the four days of the reunion last week not less than 20,000 people passed through the building. Last year there were visitors from thirteen different states and three foreign countries. The first day of every January is set aside for "At Home Day," when the people of Chatta*nooga are invited to inspect the exhib*its. Last January there were 12,000 visitors.

"The selling power of the exhibits is very noticeable," said O. L. Bunn, the live secretary of the Chattanooga association who welcomed the Atlantians and devoted practically the entire day to showing them the exhibits and explaining the operation of the enterprise. "I keep an accurate tab on the sales that result from the inspection of the goods here. Whenever a visitor makes inquiries about any article of an exhibit, I at once telephone the sales manager of that firm and he gets in communication with the man in the shortest possible time. We keep a register which shows the occupation of visitors and their names are sent each day to such concerns as would be interested in selling them.

"The exhibit also is a powerful aid in deciding a man to locate a new factory here. He sees what Chattanooga is already doing in the manufacturing line and how successful are the concerns that operate here. Chattanooga's freight rate advantages are quoted to him and he is easily persuaded by what is right before his eyes that his opportunity lies here."

The Chattanooga display is maintained by dues and rentals from exhibit spaces. The rental per square foot is very reasonable, varying in price with the floor on which the exhibit is located. From rentals the association receives $5,000 and from dues $5,000 and about $12,000 from the freight adjustment service which it renders. The association makes enough to pay operating expenses and interest and to retire from time to time the bonds on its building.

The Atlantians who inspected the Chattanooga building were:

JENKINS WRITES OF RICHMOND MEETING

Urges Large Attendance of Georgia T. P. A.'s at National Convention, June 9

Editor Firing Line: It is just a few more days and the Georgia delegation of the T. P. A. will be off to Richmond, Va., there to meet with other members from over the United States in convention. What a congress of high-toned, high-class gentlemen this will be. All live wires of the active, touching, thinking, selling kind, full of force and energy, standing against "special privilege," for equal and exact fairness and justice to all.

If it takes fortitude and courage to discard all pretense and hollow shams, they have it, and will forever stand out against dishonest methods and deceiving artificialities for principles that go to make true and honest men.

This association stands for mutual aid and protection for public advantages, which will in a brief while solve many difficulties and result in social and business betterment for mankind the world over. The T. P. A. tends to create a fellow-feeling within the hearts of men on a co-operative basis, increasing confidence and helpfulness for the general welfare of all the people.

It is possible for each one to do something that no other can do quite so well, giving valuable assistance that no other could render so acceptably. In this connection we will have the best of men with us and get to know one another, becoming acquainted with our friends who are working in the same cause pulling for greater and grander results.

As traveling men, as commercial men, as T. P. A.'s, we stand for "equal rights to all, and special privilege to none," in deed, in name, in purpose and in truth, exact justice to all, reciprocity, mutuality, co-operation and a fairness of spirit manifested at all times for and towards all men.

It is a religious duty incumbent on us all so far as lies within our power to prevent corporations from controlling public utilities, from doing for us as they themselves would not be done by.

It is just a few days before the convention—June 9—and we want all to be there. So be in readiness not later than the 8th, to go with the crowd. It is important that you should be there. Lively times are expected. The new amendments are to be voted on, and other things coming up that call for a full attendance. Richmond is a historic, lovely old city, the capital of the Confederacy and of the Old Dominion State. It is one of the oldest cities in the American union. It is the Mecca for all who love the past and who take an interest in the history of their country. The Jefferson hotel will be the headquarters of the convention. It is one of the finest and most beautiful hotels south of New York, commemorative of Jefferson and constructed by a public spirited citizen as a public enterprise. We understand the hotel is run with little regard to profit. St. John's church, where Patrick Henry made his famous speech, "Give me liberty or give me death."

DRUG SALESMEN FIND PHARMACEUTICAL TRAINING GREAT AID IN MAKING SALES

It Is Estimated That One Out of Four of All Salesmen for Wholesale Drug Companies Have Seen Service at the Prescription Case

Not all pharmacists are pharmacists. Some of them are salesmen for the wholesale drug houses.

It is estimated that one out of four of all the firing liners for the drug jobbers have seen service at the filling of prescriptions before arming themselves with an order book and going to the front for the wholesaler.

That this training is not lost when they reach the selling game is daily demonstrated by the help their knowledge of pharmacy is in dealing with the druggists they call on.

This is attested by these two city salesmen for the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co., both of whom have had a good training at the laboratory end of the game.

J. B. Pendergrast's record is nearly ten years of prescription work prior to joining the Lamar & Rankin sales force about a year ago.

J. D. Lee has been selling to the retailers for so long that it will surprise many of them to know that he himself passed cough drops and such across the counter before he went with the wholesale house.

The salesmen equipped with this knowledge of prescriptions can step into the prescription department of their customers and lend valuable aid in selecting stock needed. Their practical knowledge of the pharmacist's work helps them in many ways. As well as helping him to keep a complete stock, they see that the customer does not overstock on some little used drug.

With the drug salesmen it is considered worse to oversell than sell too little, but these pharmacist-trained salesmen hold close to the happy medium at all times.

ATLANTA BAKING CO. DOUBLES ITS OUTPUT

Since taking over the plant of the old Georgia Bread and Baking company on Mangum street a few months ago the Atlanta Baking company has doubled the output and are figuring now as a factor in Atlanta's big business in this line.

H. C. Jones, who has recently joined this company as salesman, is now devoting his time to special trips building up the out-of-town trade.

The company have installed an entire outfit of new machinery at the Mangum street plant.

W. W. SCOTT NOW WITH RAGAN-MALONE CO.

W. W. Scott, one of the most widely known dry goods travelers of Atlanta, is now with the Ragan-Malone company.

He will make his first trip in his new connection about June 15, and will cover southwest Georgia for them. Merchants and salesmen in south Georgia have known him for years as one of the leaders of Atlanta salesmen in that territory. His territory has been southeast Georgia, covering that section ten years for one Atlanta house.

He is off for a two weeks' vacation in New York, and says when he returns he will be ready to break all sales records.

DEERE FORCE ATTENDS HARDWARE CONVENTION

Among the most active and interested visitors to the Hardware show were the sales force of the John Deere Plow company, consisting of W. H. Stentz, secretary and treasurer; T. K. Johnson, sales manager; J. L. Riddick, K. D. Brobston, E. F. Geiseimann, J. M. Jeffreys, A. J. Stevens and William Shoemaker. Though the Deere company had no exhibit at the show, a number of the dealers visited the Deere headquarters here and saw there the big offering of up-to-date plows.

SHACKELFORD WRITES NEWS OF COUNCIL 18

Says His Council Will Be in Membership Lead Next Year Also

Editor Firing Line: W. H. Varn, O. S. Johnson and W. A. Justice were successful at the last meeting of council 18, in riding the old goat that U. C. T. keeps stored away, although W. H. Varn was dumped several times.

Number 18 reported the largest percentage of gain of the year at the convention of the grand council. No. 18 will maintain that high water mark in the membership for the years 1913 and 1914. No. 18 is the oldest and largest council in the grand jurisdiction of Georgia and Florida.

That popular and good fellow, Arthur Brooke, was elected without opposition to the office of grand treasurer. Nothing else could be expected with Brother Brooke in the field.

That grand old United Commercial Traveler, C. F. Montgomery, was honored by his fellow churchmen by being sent as a delegate to Scotland to the international convention.

U. L. Cox, junior counselor, of No. 18, writes that he finds many U. C. T.'s in Mississippi. You have been greatly missed, Brother Cox.

J. P. Armstrong, graced the last meeting with his smiling countenance.

J. A. Lehman and F. C. Hudnall looked like two old cronies, the way they had their heads together last meeting.

J. B. Davidson, although not in the best of health, always makes it a point to fill his office in the council. Brother Davidson proved the most popular delegate at the grand council.

Jonce Elliott can not talk anything but Wrightsville Beach and the pretty girls. Brother Elliott is always strong for the seashore and the fair sex.

W. A. Webb, senior counselor, and one Junior counselor's chair. A new member but a strong one, is Brother Lyde.

W. A. Webb, senior counselor, and one of No. 18's delegates to the grand council had his charming wife at Clumbus. Mrs. Webb appears to be a good U. C. T.

E. M. Lunceford, No. 18's popular secretary, had the misfortune to be called in to his house at Baltimore, and was compelled to miss the convention, but they could not keep him away from his duties to 18. He was on the job last meeting.

W. D. Hart, 18's faithful page, reported last meeting and excused his absence from meeting on the ground of sickness.

Jack Farnsworth, that old and loyal U. C. T., delighted the meeting with his presence and logic.

All United Commercial Travelers who missed the grand council convention missed the time of their lives. Boys, I tell you when a great body of men assemble as did in Columbus last week, in the interest of their fellowmen, the world looks better to us all. It shows that man's inhumanity to man is being put aside, and that man's good will to man is taking place. All were of one accord, for the up-lifting of his fellow-men. Great good was accomplished in the interest of the order of U. C. T., and every one left feeling better for the opportunity of representing this great body of commercial travelers.

RIVIERE AFTER SALES RECORD ON FIRM'S SPECIALTY—COFFEE

Hal Riviere showing how pleased his customers look when they sample his coffee.

All McCord-Stewart Salesmen Make Coffee a Leader—This City Firing Liner Strong on This Feature

Every one of the bunch of McCord-Stewart company salesmen are big coffee salesmen, for coffee is a line the house features.

Hal Riviere, popular city man working the south side, therefore has claim to special distinction as a coffee salesman in being one of the leaders of this aggregation of coffee specializers.

His particular fort is selling large quantities of the higher grades. He has talked up the high quality brands so well in his territory that his sales on coffee might run much less in quantity than many a grocery jobbing salesman and yet be well ahead of them compared in dollars.

During the last two months especially all of the McCord-Stewart men have specialized on coffee because of large stock of rare six-year-old coffee recently received from Brooklyn warehouses but Mr. Riviere still ranks up around the top.

Hal Riviere broke into salesmanship seven years ago. He got his first primer lessons in the selling game with this house and the good record he has made puts him now in the graduate class—a fully equipped salesman.

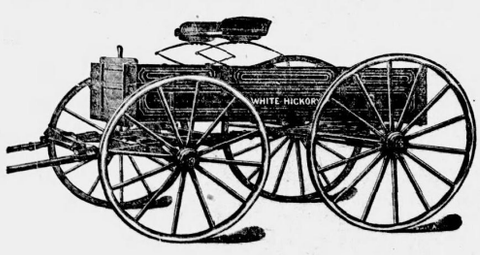
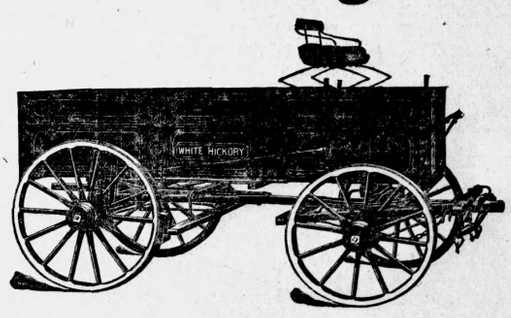
Established in 1878 by B. M. Blount, pioneer wagon manufacturer of the South, today the largest and best equipped wagon plant in the South. Annual capacity 15,000 finished jobs. Satisfied customers from Maryland to Mexico. Located directly in the heart of the hardwood section and six hours from the iron center, enables us to furnish better wagons at the same money than can be secured elsewhere. We carry two million feet hardwood timber on our yards and under our sheds, seasoned from 24 to 36 months before being used.

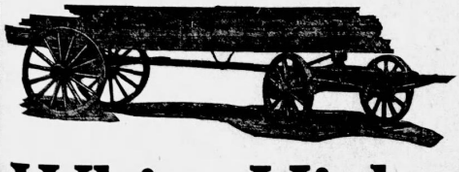


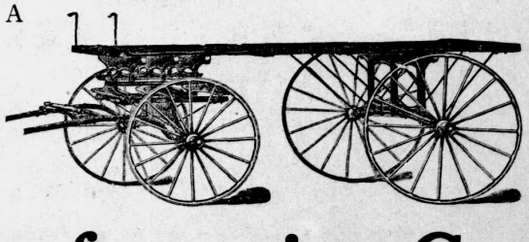


Freight rates from Atlanta to points in Georgia and adjacent states are one-third to one-half less than from the North and West. This is an important item to the dealer in figuring delivered cost of vehicles and is quite often overlooked.

WE WANT LIVE DEALERS IN UNOCCUPIED TERRITORIES

And if given the opportunity of a personal interview, we believe we can convince the most skeptical that the White Hickory agency is worthy of serious consideration. A postal request will bring one of our representatives on the next train.





We carry, made up, a complete line of farm, turpentine, lumber and log wagons, platform and city dray gears, dump, push and fertilizer carts. Steel convict cages, guard and kitchen cars, in 30 days after receipt of order.

Catalog and price list on request.

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

WITH SOUTHERN RETAILERS

"C. F. Jones, of Cedartown, Ga., was wearing a broad smile last week," said W. Y. Bailey, of Fain & Stamps, "thus indicating that business with him was good." Mr. Jones conducts one of the finest fancy grocery stores to be found anywhere in the state.

J. E. Almand, of the E. L. Adams company, reports that Brantley & Co., of Rockmart, have recently added a fresh meat department to their business, and for this purpose have installed a big Shannon refrigerator.

Among the most up-to-date fancy grocers in Georgia is W. R. Duke, of Canton, Ga. J. E. Almand says he has one of the swellest soda fountains to be seen anywhere.

Mr. Burgess, of Burgess & Co., of Decatur, was a visitor at the E. L. Adams company last week.

"Traveling salesmen make headquarters at the store of G. D. Vickery, fancy grocer, of Fairburn, Ga.," says P. S. Brownlee. "Mr. Vickery always has the glad hand for the knights of the grip."

C. R. Haynes is one of the thriving merchants of Sharpsburg, Ga., doing a fine business in the town and surrounding country. He is a favorite with the men of the road. His hearty handshake and cordial greeting are also a plesant experience for the commercial traveler.

R. A. Franklin, of Jackson, Ga., who has for years been a successful dentist, has entered the mercantile field with a well equipped general store. Many of the salesmen who make the town are already acquainted with Dr. Franklin and feel like they are selling an old customer.

J. H. Johnston, the Woodstock, Ga., merchant, was for once not in a frame of mind to give much attention to the salesmen, says J. O. Castleberry, who was up that way last week for the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company. Mr. Johnston had just lost his residence by fire a few days previously.

Two Syrians who came to this country with nothing but hopes four years ago, have just started a nice little general merchandise store at Helen, Ga. They are doing business under the firm name of Maloof Brothers.

At Thomaston, Ga., a new gent's fur-

A new store is to be started at Fort Valley, Ga., by W. P. Warlick, says the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, who sold him his opening bill a few days ago.

C. E. Kemp, from St. Petersburg, Fla., and in the stationery business at that place, was a visitor to Atlanta last week and called on Monteg Brothers.

It is announced that the general mercantile business of J. F. Cooper & Co., at Avalon, Ga., will be continued under that firm name under the active management of the younger wother of J. F. Cooper who recently died.

"Off fishing" was the answer J. R. Thornton, the S. P. Richards company's salesman, received when he asked for C. F. Cross at his store in Gadsden the other day. Mr. Thornton says this situation does not rise so very often for this merchant is usually right there on the job.

Mr. Wikle, of the Cartersville Book and Stationery company, was a visitor at the S. P. Richards company last week.

Will Butler, of Butler Brothers, who was in Atlanta and made a visit to the M. C. Kiser company recently, says that in the vicinity of Powder Springs, where this firm is located, crop prospects are as good as anyone could desire.

P. S. Tolbert, the Bullochville, Ga., merchant, will run for the legislature next year, it is reported. D. L. Lassiter, traveler for the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, who makes that territory, feels confident the Bullochville man would be elected.

BAG SALESMAN JOURNEYS FORTH TO BAG ORDERS, AND DOES IT

F. H. Glasgow, of the Consolidated Paper company, is shown prepared to catch gig game.

The firm of Smith, Sprinkle & Beasley, at Toccoa, Ga., though comparatively new in that field are coming strong, says J. O. Chambers, who travels for Brown, Perryman & Greene company.

Byron Dunn, at Manchester, Ga., has just moved into a new store. It is a fine brick, white front building. D. L. Lassiter, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt sales staff, says Mr. Dunn is one of the leaders in the move to make Manchester the county seat.

Several of the firm of W. A. Rowe & Co., of Comer, Ga., will come to Atlanta for the big gathering of southern merchants in August, says W. P. Sewell, of the A. M. Robinson company, who called on the firm a few days ago.

Among the younger men who are showing signs of success in the mercantile field is R. M. Thomaston, at Temple, Ga., who succeeded Griffin Brothers at that place.

T. A. Gary, at Liberty, S. C., is now settled in his new store.

The Vance & Griffin store at Bowden, Ga., is now only about a year old, but this mercantile establishment is already one of the leading concerns in that vicinity.

Paper Bag Trade in Atlanta Is Large–Retailers Find Innumerable Uses for Them, Sizes Range From Quarter-Pound to Quarter-Barrel

"The paper bag trade in Atlanta is immense," said F. H. Glasgow, city salesman of the Consolidated Paper company, who makes the selling of bags one of the chief features of his city trade. "I do not know that my estimate is correct, but I should say Atlanta uses at least 200,000 paper bags a day.

"Every family makes one or more purchases a day in which paper bags are used. More than a bag a day for every person in the city would not be an exaggeration of the number consumed.

"Retail grocers use bags more generally than other dealers, but there is hardly any business you can think of to which the paper bag is not a necessary adjunct. The retail trade would be paralyzed if their supply of bags were cut off.

"The sizes run all the way from the small quarter-pound sack to the big quarter barrel flour containers and the immense bags used in the millinery trade.

"Though the demand is good and persistent, the bag salesman has no easy time bagging orders. As in all other lines of salesmanship, he must be up and doing. He must know quality, prices and all about the texture and lasting quality of his goods, if he expects to be successful."

Mr. Glasgow has been with the Consolidated company a comparatively short time, but he already enjoys a large circle of customers and is "putting over" orders in a way that makes the heads of his firm smile as wide as the open mouth of a hat bag.

DRY GOODS WHOLESALERS OF THIRD DIVISION MEET

Will Hold Regular Meetings Quarterly–Next One Probably at Savannah

The first meeting of the recently formed Third division of the Southern Wholesale Dry Goods association met at the assembly hall of the Piedmont hotel May 23. The meeting was well attended and enthusiastic.

Chairman R. K. Rambo called the meeting to order. Mr. E. S. Espstein, of Espstein & Co., Savannah, Ga., was elected secretary. Explanation of the meeting was made by the chairman.

Mr. W. A. Parker, president of the Southern Hardware Jobbers' association, made a talk on "Co-operation," and urged that the dry goods people follow the example set by the hardware people and get closer to their competitors, which would be to their mutual interest and wellfare.

After two hours discussion of interesting matters the entire third division was given a luncheon at the Capital City club by Mr. Murray Brown, president of the Southern Wholesale Dry Goods association.

The firms represented were as follows:

E. G. Epstein, I. Epstein & Bro. Co.; Savannah, Ga.

L. Mohr, L. Mohr & Son; Savannah, Ga.

Hugo Frank, Frank & Co.; Savannah, Ga.

Murray Brown, Goodall, Brown & Co.; Birmingham, Ala.

C. Barnwell, Ragan-Malone company; Atlanta, Ga.

H. R. Calloway, Ragan-Malone company; Atlanta, Ga.

Joseph R. Little, Dougherty-Little-Redwine company; Atlanta, Ga.

W. H. Wyatt, Ridley-Williamson, Wyatt company; Atlanta, Ga.

Chas. J. Williamson, Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company; Atlanta, Ga.

P. D. Yates, Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company; Atlanta, Ga.

R. K. Rambo, John Silvey & Co.; Atlanta, Ga.

E. M. Roper, John Silver & Co.; Atlanta, Ga.

W. A. Ward, Ward-Truitt company; Atlanta, Ga.

P. B. Hofmayer, Hofmayer Dry Goods company, Albany, Ga.

Gershon Rothschild, D. Rothschild & Co., Columbus, Ga.

E. E. Hall, Covington company; Jacksonville, Fla.

E. L. Bryant, F. E. Calloway & Co.; LaGrange, Ga.

Popper, The Waxlebaum company; Macon, Ga.

J. Saul, J. Saul & Co.; Atlanta, Ga.

Lehman, Floyd Lehman & Co., Atlanta, Ga.

J. D. Robinson, A. M. Robinson company, Atlanta, Ga.

After luncheon the association held another interesting meeting and adjourned about 6:00 p. m. They expect to have these meetings at least quarterly and the next time they will probably meet in Savannah.

FINDS HIS SAWMILL EXPERIENCE VALUABLE AID IN SELLING SAWS

W. H. Hebbard, of the Maisby company, is shown with one of the monster saws, with the use of which he is thoroughly familiar from practical experience.

Salesman Knows Lumberman's Trade From Stump to Finished Product–Often Longs for the Open Pine Forests and the Vibrant Song of the Sawmill

W. H. Hebbard, with the Maisby company, can sell saws or operate them equally well. Just now he is doing the former for the Maisby company and his long practical experience at the sawmill business is proving of much value to him in his present work on the road.

"I like the selling end of the machinery business," says Mr. Hebbard, "but I miss the life of the lumberman. I don't know but that I would as soon be back again working a saw somewhere in Wilkes or Morgan county as to be here in Atlanta and catching trains and chasing orders. The work in the woods keeps you in such fine condition and feeling good all the time."

This salesman has taken a hand at about every variety of work to be done around a saw mill, up to operating one of the big fifty-four-inch saws such as shown above in the picture. During the last five years he has conducted saw mills in the two counties mentioned and was employed by other mills for several years previous to that.

His knowledge of saw mill machinery is thus thorough and practical. When an inquiry about saw mills comes in and he sets out to see the prospective customer he goes after the order with mighty practical talk and it is not often he loses.

When he gets out among the big pines, though, and hears the song of a saw mill he always feel like going back.

"UNCLE SAM" BAKERY SERVES WIDE TERRITORY

Up-to-Date Facilities of Bakeries Make Atlanta Bread Center of South

That Atlanta is fast becoming the bread market for towns throughout Georgia, is evidenced by the many new out-of-town dealers handling Atlanta's famous Uncle Sam Bread, which is made by the Schlesinger-Meyer Baking company.

To a reporter of the Firing Line, a representative of the Schlesinger-Meyer Bakery said:

"The orders for Uncle Sam Bread, from both our city salesmen as also from our out-of-town traveling men, are gratifying in the highest degree. In Atlanta, where practically every grocer handles our product, the demand for our bread is increasing most remarkably.

"And in towns in Georgia within a very large radius our men are adding the names of many dealers to our already large list of out-of-town customers.

"There are various reasons why this demand throughout Georgia is increasing for our bread. We advertise it very extensively in The Journal and as 'The Journal Covers Dixie Like the Dew,' the housewives in this large territory are quite as familiar with the name of our bread as they are with other well advertised products, such as famous breakfast foods, etc.

"The housewife also knows, from the ads that Uncle Sam Bread is made in a clean bakery, by experts, and that the dough is kneaded by clean machinery—and not by human hands. These are a few of the reasons why dealers get new customers when they put in our product.

"Through the splendid facilities of the Schlesinger-Meyer Baking company the housewife living many miles away from Atlanta, can now get from her local dealer our fresh and delicious bread as conveniently as though she were right in Atlanta. That's why Atlanta is fast becoming the bread market throughout Georgia."

Mr. Johnson, buyer for the Callaway department store, of LaGrange, Ga., and E. M. White, general merchant of Temple, Ga., were visitors at the E. L. Adams company last week.

DOINGS AND SAYINGS AT HARDWARE MEETING

Personal Items About Men Who Attended Retailers' Convention and Show

President Green's address was full of good points and created much favorable discussion among the membership.

W. L. Moore's remarks and statistics on the homicidal mania in the country and especially in the south proved a revelation to the audience and will without doubt result in some action by the association in respect to sale of firearms.

G. W. Woodruff, a prominent merchant and manufacturer of Winder, was here for the convenaion. Mr. Woodruff is one of twelve brothers, all hustlers. They have a big business in Winder with a branch in Atlanta.

L. A. Dietrich, general sales agent of the American Steel and Wire company, was a convention visitor. Mr. Dietrich is ta New Yorker, but he says it is easy to imagine himself at home among Atlanta's skyscrapers.

H. M. Owsley, of St. Louis, attended the convention. Mr. Owsley represents the Shapleigh Hardware company, and is an old Atlanta resident.

G. R. Hall, of Moultrie, was a prominent member of the south Georgia contingent at the convention.

W. W. Robinson, an ex-president of the association and an enthusiastic worker, was a popular member of the convention. He was accompanied by Mrs. Robinson.

Howard Nevin, of Jacksonville, Fla., a former Georgian, was a convention visitor.

P. L. Twitty, of Dublin, who represented the Georgia association at the Detroit convention, was one of the convention live wires.

R. W. Hatcher, of Milledgville, a former president of the association, was a prominent figure at the convention. Mr. Hatcher was a delegate representing Georgia at the recent national convention in Jacksonville.

W. A. Parker, of the Beck & Gregg Hardware company, was a busy man after the entertainment of the visitors.

T. W. Dixon, of Charlotte, N. C., secretary of the North Carolina association, was here attending the convention.

One of the big and attractive displays at the show was the booth of the malleable steel ranges, in charge of S. Edgar Hamlett, gulf states representative for his company. Mr. Hamlett was constantly busy with visitors desiring to see his ranges. He is a man of enthusiasm and an able salesman.

E. B. Richards, of Memphis, and W. H. Hester, of Atlanta, representatives of the Pittsburg Steel company, were prominent visitors at the show and convention.

John W. Melton, of Opelika, Ala., representative of the Simmons Hardware company, was among the genial visitors at the convention.

A. H. Sneed, representative of Wetter ranges, conducted the Drummers' Hour at the convention. He didn't follow the program arranged but conducted the occasion in his own way.

W. A. Freeman, with the McClure Ten Cent company, has just launched with the McClure Ten Cent company, has expects to rush it to the printer in quick order.

All of the salesmen under the Atlanta branch of B. F. Avery & Sons, agricultural implements, will be in Atlanta this week because of the hardware convention.

BREAD SALESMAN TELLS BAKING REASON FOR NEW DOUBLE LOAF

Escape of Gases in Process of Cooking Is Important. Juncture of Two Loaves Gives Them Outlet

J. W. Rogers, of the New South Bakery, knows bread like a cook book.

Why the double loaf?

Grocers handling the bread from the big Atlanta ovens which are turning out many thousands of these twin loaves daily ask this question of the bakery salesmen.

J. W. Rogers, city salesman for the New South bakery, shown above with one of the doubles, receives many queries along this line. The double loaf is as yet comparatively new to this section.

Here is the why of it, told for the benefit of the dealers, and others, too, for many housewives do not know the principle underlying this method of baking bread.

"It is rather generally known," says Mr. Rogers, "that up to a certain point, the larger the loaf the better the bread. These loaves are as large as consistent with good quality. The main advantage, however, in the twin loaf is this; the crust, just where the two loaves join, cracks at a cetrain period in the baking process and allows the escape of undesirable gases. Allowing this escape of gases makes a more wholesome bread than if the crust were unbroken as it is in the usual single loaf.

"The German and the French people, recognized as adepts at bread baking, long ago learned this principle of the broken crust and applied it by allowing a big meeting of the Bagmen in Atlanta at an early date at which fifty or more candidates will be conducted across the hot sands.

"By the twin loaf process of baking, the crust breaks automatically. The two pieces of dough knit together in the oven, then further along in the baking the crust splits just at the intersection of the two loaves."

Atlanta's big baking plants are said to by making a strong attack on the preference for biscuits which has so long prevailed in the south. Bakers' bread of the quality sold these days, it is claimed, was not available ten or fifteen years ago. The modern sanitary bakeries with their processes which reduce bread making to a science are wooing many away from the old liking for hot bread.

The cleanliness throughout the modern big bakery need not be called to the attention of any visitor to the place. It strikes him fairly between the eyes the moment he enters the building. Absolute cleanliness is evident from the mixing room, where the flour is first made into dough, down to the shipping ing the escape of the gases through slits they made across the top crusts. department, where the finished product is sent out to dealers all over the state. the absolute cleanliness is evident.

Atlanta's baking plants are extending their territory further than ever before. The road salesmen are placing agencies with dealers in practically every town where the distance and train service allows. Keen competition is helping keep the business very active.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

Claude A. Smith, with the A. M. Robinson company, has been away from his regular stamping grounds several days for a special trip in the territory around Columbus. He will be back in his territory this week.

L. W. Laudick, special representative of the Syracuse Chilled Plow company of Syracuse, N. Y., visited the John Deere Plow company here last week and attended the hardware convention.

E. E. Huguley, of the Huguley Oil company, spent a busy three days at the hardware convention. He had an agreeable surprise in meeting up with an old schoolmate he had not seen for many years in George Bailey, of the Bailey Tool company of Athens, who was here attending the convention.

G. A. Zellner, who has been turning up a lot of good business for the Huguley Oil company in south Georgia since he went with them a few months ago, has been transferred to South Carolina but will be there only temporarily and later will return to his old territory.

J. C. Trammell, city salesman for J. N. Hirsch, though a salesman for many years, has been at the grocery business only about two years but is steadily building up a good trade.

E. D. Huguley, who travels for the Huguley Oil company, is at Auburn, Ala., to attend the home coming of the Auburn alumni.

Jesse W. Bates, president of the T. P. A. in Georgia, and incidentally traveling salesman for the J. K. Orr Shoe company, was in Atlanta yesterday to attend a conference of a number of the J. K. Orr company men.

W. ... Beacham, of Athens, Ga., was over for a visit to his house, the J. K. Orr Shoe company, Friday.

W. B. Burpitt, who has been ill all of this year, having traveled but a day since January 1, is back at home from Indian Springs, where he has been in search of health. Mr. Burpitt's friends are glad to learn he has improved very much inheal .h and hope that he will soon be able to return to his road duties with the Marietta Fertilizer company.

B. F. AVERY FORCE AT HARDWARE SHOW

The illustration shows the Georgia sales force of B. F. Avery & Sons' Atlanta branch, gathered at the company's display booth at the hardware show last week. From left to right: Julius Peibelman, manager; W. M. Keuring, of Valdosta; W. T. Stapler, of Commerce; Georga Sweeney, of Atlanta; R. C. Dillingham, of Albany. In the picture is also shown models of the company's harrows and cultivators and one of its new automatically adjustable chilled steel plows. The Avery exhibit was one of the most attractive at the show.

BROWNLEE WRITES NEWS OF U. C. T. COUNCIL 505

Records Comings and Goings of Members of Live Body of Travelers

Editor Firing Line:

T. B. Lewis, the Great Ruler of the Bagmen, and P. S. Brownlee, Keeper of Seals and Records, are planning to have

All of the 505 boys who attended the Columbus gathering were back on the road last week, that is, were able to be back in a way.

A letter from Dayton Hale, Jr., of San Antonio, Tex., states that he keeps up with the boys through the Firing Line and sends his regards to all his Georgia friends.

O. H. Ball, the live U. C. T., sends a post card saying that he was at Dallas, Tex., during the Shriners' meeting and helped ..tlanta get the convention next year.

A. L. Deihl, the shoe salesman, returned to Atlanta Friday night and reports fine business on his recent trip.

R. L. Wallace, of council 505, reflects great credit on his council and Atlanta by the fine work which he did at the Columbus meeting.

Very truly yours,
P. S. BROWNLEE,
Secretary U. C. T. Council 505.

Bagman at Columbus

There was Cary Thornton in the front rank with little Brownlee for size,
A whisky drummer covered my left flank and the sight dazzled my eyes.

It was U. C. T. day and in gorgeous array with silk hats, kits and canes off they stepped
While the band played "Chippy, Get Your Hair Cut" several of the drummers wept.

As they marched away the streets with our steps were shaking
It was the finest body of men seen in Georgia since old Columbus was taken.
If Stoneman were here he would set up the beer as his eyes blazed with the sight of our splendor.
While the band played "Chippy, Get Your Hair Cut," old Sherman would have to surrender.

If the Bagmen were not here, there would be no convention, for drummers are Society's cream.

Blount — Factory at East Point — Atlanta

Thousands Demand Blount Vehicles
DO YOU SELL THEM?

From Texas to Virginia the demand for Blount vehicles is steadily increasing. This shows how the South is forging to the front in manufacture—20 years ago it did not make over 15,000 spring vehicles yearly; today its factories building spring vehicles sell at least 150,000 yearly.

This is a Georgia enterprise, and as such merits your support. It was founded in 1903 by B. M. Blount. He built good vehicles then. With ten years' experience and new machines we have built them better and better until today they are the best made—bar none. Good to look on, good to use, Blount vehicles are bought by the most exacting.

We build three grades of buggies—the Georgia, the Dixie and the Atlanta. You can't match them at any price for beauty, comfort and durability. They embody all that is new and good in carriage construction, and the name Blount on them is a silent guarantee of satisfaction.

We are the largest builders of carriages, buggies, etc., in the South. We occupy over 90,000 square feet of floor space and have every necessary machine. 100 picked men, trained to OUR ways, produce Blount vehicles, and the one idea of all is to build them as good as brains and skill will allow. Our capacity is 10,000 vehicles yearly, but the increasing demand will soon raise this.

In order to meet the demand on the Southern dealers for dependable wagons, we are now producing

No. 221 Atlanta Grade Buggy

A New and Full Line of Light Delivery and Spring Wagons

And we build them to the same high standard that has made the Blount pleasure vehicles the choice of thousands throughout the Southern states. Every bit of material used is the best we can buy, and production is slow and careful. When they are crated and shipped we KNOW we're delivering goods which any dealer would be proud to handle.

Now you, as a live dealer, want a live line. That's the Blount line. You want and should have the co-operation of a factory with your interest at heart. That's the Blount factory. Visit us at any time and we'll show you Blount vehicles in the making, and show you letters filled with enthusiasm from dealers who sell our line.

In the meantime the spring and summer trade is headed your way. Don't let it pass. Meet it by selling Blount vehicles. Build you a bigger and better business than is possible with an unknown line.

Road Reminiscence

Tales of adventure along the way told by Atlanta Travelers

What Makes Sales Easy

"It is a fact," observed an old traveler, "that no selling is easy. As every salesman knows, however, there are some kinds that are easier than others. It is not much trouble to sell a man who wants your goods. An order from such a customer may be said to sell itself.

"Reselling dealers in goods backed by strong and persistent advertising is likewise pleasant sailing. In each of these cases it should be remembered, much effort and expense have been previously expended. Before a customer can want your goods of his own accord he must have handled them before or else have known of them through advertising.

"My first sale on the road proved an easy one. In fact, I did nothing more than carry my samples to the merchant's town. He did all the rest. I was quite young then and had been working in the office of an Atlanta wholesale hat firm for only a few days. I knew very little about the stock and nothing at all about the art of selling.

"A call came for a salesman from a nearby town. The salesman who usually covered this territory was ill and the ranks of the house force also happened to be depleted by illness. There was nobody else to send but me. I left on an early train for the merchant's town next day with three trunks of samples. I hadn't the slightest idea of the character of the samples or how they were arranged, and the price lists were a maze to me.

"I found the merchant and told him I had come in response to his call. The hat season was well under way, and the merchant, who had put off buying, was anxious to get in his stock with as little further delay as possible.

"'Where are your trunks?' he inquired. I informed him they were still at the railroad station.

"'Don't let's take time to bring them over here,' he said. 'I'll go over there and look at your samples.'

"I rolled my trunks into the waiting room of the little station and opened them rather nervously, for I had only a vague conception of what I was to do after they were opened.

"'I want to look at your staple lines first,' said the merchant. Hats were hats to me at that time. I didn't know the staple lines from the novelties.

"I began to take out the hats from the trunk nearest me, thinking the merchant would say something that would indicate when I reached the kinds he wanted to see.

"But I removed the entire contents of the trunk and stacked the hats in high piles on the waiting room benches before he said anything, and then he burst into a laugh.

"'See here, young fellow, you must be green on the job. You haven't shown me a thing in the staple lines yet.'

"With a sense of relief, I admitted that it was my first trip out.

"'Oh, in that case,' said he, good naturedly, 'I'll show you how to make a sale.'

"He ran through my samples quickly, listing the styles, sizes and number of dozens he wanted. I did manage to get the prices right, and sold him, or rather I should say he sold himself, a bill larger than any I was able to book for a year after I went regularly on the road.

"In this connection I recall an incident related to me by a traveler for a widely advertised food product.

"He called on one of his regular customers, a small corner grocer, toward the latter end of the week and asked for the usual order for his product.

"'Put me down for two cases,' replied the grocer, 'and be sure you have it here before Saturday. I always need your stuff on Saturdays.'

"'Why so particular about Saturdays?' inquired the salesman whose product was staple and was a good seller, he knew, on other days of the week as well as on the last one.

"'During the first part of the week, I have time to talk up that stuff,' replied the grocer, pointing to packages of "Every hand of cards lay face down upon the table."

the competing brands on his shelves, 'and I can sell it, but it takes a lot of conversation. Saturdays I don't have time to talk. Customers just ask for your stuff and I pass it over the counter. No explanation is necessary. I don't have to sell. All I have to do is to serve.'

"I can conclude these few sales reminiscences of mine in no better way than by telling you of an incident not, however, connected with any sale that befell another young salesman.

"I have never been very religious myself, but I have the deepest respect and admiration for the man who in simpleness and sincerity observes the practices of his religious beliefs.

"A number of years ago a young salesman who is now a member of a big wholesale firm was at a crowded hotel. On account of the crowd he was assigned a room with another salesman, one of the old timers of the road. When the young fellow went up to his room to bed he found the older salesman already there, with a number of his cronies seated about a table playing poker. A whisky bottle was on the table from which it was evident that copious drinks had been taken. The poker players gave the new comer a good natured greeting and resumed their play.

The young salesman prepared to retire and then according to his custom read from his Bible and knelt down by the bed to say his prayers. In performing his devotions he was not obstructive on the other hand he made no attempt at concealment.

"When he arose from his knees, he noticed that the poker players were still and that every hand of cards lay face down upon the table. During his prayer, the players had paid the young salesman and his devotions this silent tribute.

"'Good night, son,' said the men at the table, and it was said almost affectionately, as they took up their cards and resumed the game.

"'Good night, fellows,' said the young salesman as he pulled the covers about him to sleep.'"

SHOE RETAILERS NOW BUY SMALL QUANTITIES OFTEN

Old Method Was to Order Entire Stock for Season at One Time

Far superior to the old custom is the way H. S. Collingsworth, secretary-treasurer of the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company characterizes the present methods of frequent buying by the retailers as compare[d] to that of former years when the jobbers' salesman would sell the shoe retailer his season's stock all at one time.

Mr. Collingsworth believes that even the dealers in isolated localities who still buy after the old method to a large extent will soon be making as many fill in orders as the merchants in the larger towns.

"There has been a great change in the last ten years," says Mr. Collingsworth. "Then the traveling men for the shoe wholesalers were off the road two to three months each year. Now they work the trade the year round just as a grocery salesman does.

"Keeping the salesmen continually on the road naturally is more expensive for the house but the present methods are good for the jobber as well as the retailer, with the merchants buying small bills and often they can meet their bills more promptly.

"This method, too, keeps the dealer from overbuying which makes them better customers for the wholesaler to carry.

"The retailer who buys six or eight times a year instead of only twice keeps his stock in so much better shape. He does not find himself loaded up with 'hard stock' now as he often did in the old days. He keeps in touch with the new styles better.

"Ordering by mail weekly to fill in missing sizes is being done more and more. These merchants who carry only a fair sized stock but send mail orders every week are our best customers. They pay prompt and they are good merchants. It is one of the traits by which we know the dealer is a live one.

"A jobber cannot buy intelligently if he buys only twice a year and neither can a retailer. As a rule the retailers are making their orders about as frequent as they are now, so there will be little change in future years, but the present methods are certainly far ahead of those ten to fifteen years ago."

NEW HOME OF THE H. L. SINGER COMPANY

The H. L. Singer company will move July 1 to this new building at Haynes and Hunter streets, recently erected by the A., B. & A. railroad. They will have 21,000 square feet of floor space and excellent shipping facilities and lighting. The company has been at its present place, 141 Madison avenue, for four years. H. L. Singer is president and J. L. Singer is vice president. The company is big wholesale dealers in fine, fancy groceries.

WILENSKY CO. TO ISSUE MAMMOTH NEW CATALOG

H. Wilensky & Sons Co., the Atlanta wholesale leather people, are nearly ready with their new catalog.

This eleventh catalog of the firm will be nearly twice as large as their last issue and contain over 250 pages.

The concern's line has been extended, calling for many more pages on the small items, and the issue also shows new features in shoe machinery added during the last year. As soon as the catalog is ready, which will be within a month, copies will be immediately sent to each of those on the company's mailing list of 2,500 names. Ten thousand copies will be printed.

"UNCLE JEFF" MAKES REPLY TO BROTHER

Says Marriage Nowadays Is Likely to Be Failure—"Waiting Till He's Grown"

Editor Firing Line: I would like to reply to the remarks of my brother, S. L. Jefferson, on the article written by me some time ago and published in the Firing of the Atlanta Journal, one of the leading papers in the south and one that always welcomes in its columns whatever may be of service to mankind. I must say that I appreciate the successful efforts of our editor and the good work he is doing through the Firing Line. I think great success is in store for him.

The article I wrote showed the greatness of motherhood and spoke also of the proper training of children. These constitute the foundation of all that is good and pure in nations and individuals.

I well know that the father also should have responsibility in the training of children. The mother, however, is nearer to the child. When the father is out fighting the battle for daily bread, the true mother is ever by the little one, giving comfort day and night, through sickness and health, and in after years if the children fall, the world may turn its back on them, but the mother, never. She will always be with outstretched hand and loving heart. A father may drive a child from home, but not the mother. Mother love always shines in its purity and beauty. The nearest to the Godlike love of all the earth is that of the true mother.

My brother says that I should get married, but this is a great responsibility. As the human family generally reaches a low state of morality, the responsibility becomes greater. We can observe and see danger and not have the experience in many cases. We watch and see many of the best people make a complete failure. Many more competent and better men that I have so failed. If we have not a reasonable hope of training children as the Higher Hand would have them, have we the right to marry in the sight of the Almighty?

When I get to the place I think I should marry, I will get my friend, the editor, to help me through the Firing Line, as I know he will do his best for me, but a good many of my old friends want to know why I don't marry. I often reply that I am waiting to get grown, as I don't like to see half-grown children marry.

Very truly yours,
G. C. JEFFERSON ("Uncle Jeff.")

ATLANTA JOBBERS IN CLOSE TOUCH WITH N. Y.

"Many people do not realize how closely Atlanta jobbers are in touch with the New York market and how quickly we get the latest fads that appear there," said P. D. Yates, of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, in speaking of Atlanta's wholesale business.

"We have buyers in New York watching for new ideas continually, and when some new twist to the styles appears in the metropolis, it is here two days later.

"There are more fads and more frequent small changes in styles that the jobber must keep up with these days than ever before. We have to get them quick, and we have the organization to do it. The retail trade are beginning to appreciate this, and that is one of the reasons Atlanta is getting a lot of trade that formerly went direct to the eastern wholesalers."

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

G. W. Bibley, western Georgia Firing Liner for the Silvey & Dougherty Hat company, has been having a good run of luck as recently. Perhaps that is why he chose this week for one of his occasional visits to the house.

Leopold Hein, who has been away in his Texas territory for the first of the year, is now in Atlanta and will be here about ten days. He travels that state for Montag Brothers.

J. C. Wilhite, who covers South Carolina for the Silvey & Dougherty Hat company, has been selling hats in that territory for many years and is running true to his usual form this season with a business that compares well with any man with the house.

The entire road force of the Hirshberg company took to the firing line again last week after about a month at the house. All are reported to be making a good getaway on the new season.

C. P. Webb is in the lead on May sales for the monthly bonus to the salesman copping the biggest business for the Warren Manufacturing company. This was at the last accounting two days ago. R. L. Minor is close behind him, however, and the final count tomorrow may give him the prize.

S. P. Richards company's salesmen are well underway on their new season. All of them have now been out two weeks.

That heredity affects salesmanship as well as other qualities is likely to be evidenced by Mack Hirshberg from the start he is making on the road for the Hirshberg company. His father, I. A., head of the company, was many years on the road and one of the big producers among Atlanta salesmen. Mack, on his first week out, is turning in orders something like the old man used to do.

"I believe more actual business was done during the hardware convention this week," said Lawrence H. Moore, of Atlanta Agricultural works, "than at any similar meeting ever held in Atlanta. We are highly pleased with results accomplished from our exhibit and believe every exhibitor shared in the benefits which are to be derived from a show of this kind."

If every exhibitor at the auditorium this week was as fortunate as we were," said Jack W. Evans, of Atlanta Agricultural works, "you can put it down that the eighth annual convention of the Georgia Retail Harware association, from a commercial standpoint, was one of the most profitable gatherings Atlanta has known for many a day."

J. J. Eley and S. E. Bayliss, salesmen for the Dixie Pickle and Preserving company, spent last week working in the vicinity of Rome, Ga., and their work will result in a carload shipment from the Dixie plant to a Rome Jobbing house. Sales Manager Holt has the field worked up for more carload shipments to follow soon, and with these salesmen backing him up they are counted a certainty.

W. E. Park, Capital City Tobacco salesman, who has been off the firing line recently because of illness, will be out of the game for two weeks yet. He has gone to the country for a vacation.

J. M. Frank, traveling for the Rosenfeld company, has just come in after a long trip through Indiana and Kentucky. He will be here now for several days.

Clyde L. King, president; Frank S. Dean, vice president; H. E. Dean, Lawrence H. Moore and Jack W. Evans, of the traveling force of Atlanta Agricultural works, were all in this week in attendance on the Georgia Retail Hardware association convention.

D. L. Lassiter, the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company's salesman, pulled into Atlanta from Fort Valley the other day by auto on three tires and a rim. Otherwise Mr. Lassiter says he had a very successful trip.

Uncle Jeff, the trainless traveler of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, is here for a few days. He tells us he is going to make a public reply to that recent letter of his brother's published in the Firing Line in which his brother advised him to practice what he preached regarding the joys of quiet domesticity.

W. P. Sewell opened two new accounts for the A. M. Robinson company in one town the other day.

W. M. Jenkins, representative of the Knoxville Coffin company, and a resident of West End for fifteen years, we are sorry to learn, has been confined to his room for several days from the effects of ptomaine poisoning. He is better now, and will soon be out again.

W. A. Freeman, for the last two years with the McClue Ten Cent company, has severed his connection with that company to move to El Paso, Tex. He will be associated with his brother, C. D. Freeman, in the motorcycle business at that place.

L. A. Redwine, vice president of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, has just returned from New York, where he has been for seevral weeks buying goods for the fall season.

T. I. Landers, of the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company sales force, who travels a large part of Alabama, with headquarters at Heflin, came over to Atlanta for a short visit the other day and with a big bundle of enthusiasm. He does not get over here as often as some Alabama salesmen, but when he comes he always has some comment on business conditions in his territory. Crop prospects are fine in his section now, he says, and he is looking for a big fall business.

H. H. Ware, the big manager of the Atlanta branch of the Liquid Carbonic company, is away this week in Chicago for the annual convention of the company's managers. After his return salesmen under the Atlanta office will have their yearly meeting in Atlanta, and they are expecting the chief to come back from Chicago loaded up with a fine assortment of new selling talks to unload on them when they get here.

F. F. Hein, the Florida man for the Montag stationery house of Montag Brothers, is one of the prize convention members of the salesmen of Atlanta houses. Whenever anything of that kind occurs anywhere in his domain he is right there. He is slated now to attend the gathering of the Florida Pharmaceutical association, which is at Tampa June 11 and 12.

S. E. Brannon, secretary and treasurer of Jones Bros. & Co., the pickle and vinegar manufacturers, reports that his company had the biggest month's business in its history here during May. Three carloads were shipped last week. The force had to work three nights to keep up with the rush of business this week.

E. E. Shyer and S. P. Smith were in Saturday at the Consolidated Paper company. J. C. Mason, contrary to his usual custom, will not spend Sunday at his home at Cuthbert, Ga., but will be in Alabama during the week-end. C. S. Harley, South Carolina traveler, will spend Sunday at his home at North, S. C.

O. R. Altman, bookkeeper for the Consolidated Paper company, was ill last week. His place was filled by H. P. Loveless, of the shipping department, who also held down his regular job. Pretty busy times for Mr. Loveless.

The "ins" at Fain & Stamps Saturday were Bill Bailey, Cliff Edwards, J. C. Owens and S. E. Smith. W. S. Gaston is spending the week with his parents at Carrollton, Ga.

Cliff Edwards, of Fain & Stamps, is rounding off the largest May business he has ever had.

Mrs. Paul Upshaw, formerly of the office force of Fain & Stamps when she was Miss Pearl Smith, was a visitor last week at her old firm. She is here with her husband on a visit from Little Rock, Ark., where they now live.

A. H. Branhorst, representative of Squire-Dingee company, of Chicago, selling the famous "Bill Quarles South Pole" mustard, was a visitor at Fain & Stamps Saturday.

W. O. Stamps reports that a number of visiting merchants were callers at his firm last week and that without exception give glowing reports of crop and business conditions.

Chris Irby, of the A. M. Robinson company staff, spent the week down in the Carrollton end of his territory, and had a successful trip.

W. M. Mitcham, city salesman for the M. C. Kiser company, has just closed one of the best weeks for total sales he has had for some time.

J. L. Williams, Rice & Hutchins' firing liner, is in Atlanta for a two weeks' stay. He has just come in from Florida, after finishing his first trip of the fall 1913 season in that territory, and is having a successful season.

E. G. Thomas, manager of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, has just returned from Boston, where he was for two weeks attending a meeting of all the Rice & Hutchins managers.

C. J. Finger, the M. C. Kiser company north Georgia man, has been ill at his home in Gainesville for several days, but expects to be on the road again this week.

D. L. Lassiter is in from the West Point road for the week-end at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, and says his happy look is a reflection of the good cheer of the merchants in his territory. With crop prospects good the merchants are all in fine spirits, he says.

W. S. Jones, traveler for the A. M. Robinson company, has been transferred from Florida to south Georgia. He is not among strangers, however, but back among old friends, for this was his territory for many years until about two years ago, when he took Florida for the Robinson company.

E. J. Smith, of Memphis, Tenn., joins the A. M. Robinson company this week and will travel Mississippi for them. He is already well known in that territory as an able dry goods salesman. This makes three Smiths on the road for this company. C. A. and R. L. are the other two.

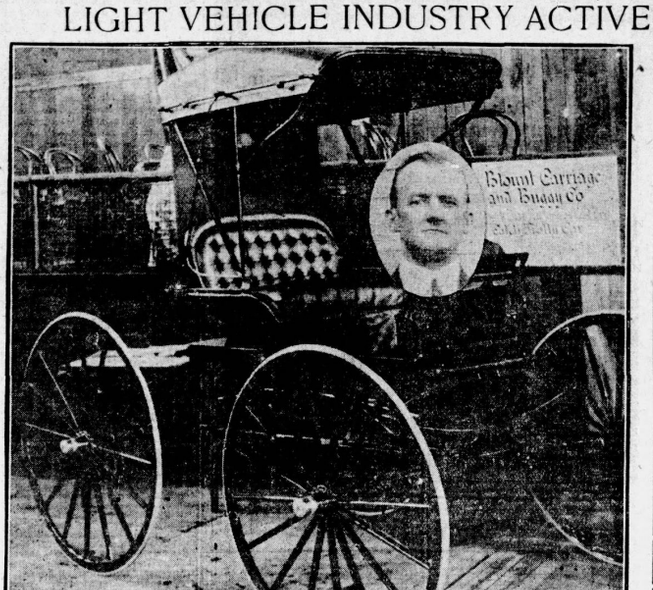
R. E. Sloan, the well known M. C. Kiser company salesman, who recently returned to the road after an absence of over a year, has shown already that he is in his old selling form. He turned in a $2,750 order from his Tennessee territory the other day.

N. A. Morse, with headquarters at Selma, Ala., was in Atlanta a few days ago. He is with the M. C. Kiser company.

A salesman who works his territory closer than perhaps any other dry goods traveler out of Atlanta, is H. D. Tuggle, who covers the territory along the Southern road to Birmingham. He gets around to all customers every ten days to two weeks.

C. J. Walker, comparatively recent addition to the sales force of the Brown-Perryman & Greene company, has shown that his brother, H. M. Walker, who has been with the company for several years, is not the only salesman in the family. He has done well on the road.

SALESMAN S. D. JONES ON THE JOB; LIGHT VEHICLE INDUSTRY ACTIVE



S. D. Jones, who travels Georgia for the Blount Carriage and Buggy company, and one of their vehicles at the hardware show.

Georgia Traveler, Here for the Hardware Convention, Is Pleased With Business Conditions in His Line—One of South's Big Industries

One of the Georgia salesmen who kept very busy during the hardware show greeting his friends among the retail hardware men from over the state, was S. D. Jones, of LaGrange, who was here to look after the interests of the Blount Carriage and Buggy company at the show.

Mr. Jones is an experienced salesman in the vehicle line, who is known to hundreds of Georgia travelers, as well as to the dealers throughout the state. Many Blount dealers from all parts of the state were attending the convention.

"Business in the buggy line has improved a great deal in the last two months," says Mr. Jones. "We expect the totals for this year to show up well. Automobiles have hurt the demand for high-priced carriages in recent years, but the demand for light buggies seems to go on just the same."

While Mr. Jones acted as greeter for the Blount company, George Blount was on hand during the hardware show as representative of the White Hickory Wagon Manufacturing company, which is the big companion industry of the Blount factory at East Point.

The companies are two of the biggest industrial concerns in the vicinity of Atlanta. The Blount factory is the largest of its kind in the south and a large factor in the growth of the vehicle industry in the south during the last ten years.

What is a Real Business Man?
Why, he's the fellow that's right on the job day and night, looking after the leaks; getting ready for a rainy day; keeping the resources well within a safe limit; guarding the credit of the house; reaching out after new business. He's a regular conserver. He's a good man to pattern after—no difference what you undertake. He's the man that's sensible enough to apply business methods to his personal health. When is eyes begin to annoy him—give out easily, strain and will not permit him to do continuous, close work without unnecessary fatigue, he gets busy—has an examination made and gets glasses. That's simply good business. Suffice to say we've been fitting glasses for the southern people for fifty years, and—well, that's sufficient for a real business man to know.

FARMERS ARE URGED TO STICK TO THE COUNTRY

Joseph H. Reynolds, of Augusta, Delivers Strong Address at Sparta School

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SPARTA, Ga., May 31.—Joseph H. Reynolds, formerly solicitor general of Richmond county, Augusta, Ga., delivered a strong address at the commencement exercises of the Tenth District Agricultural school here on "Back to the Farm."

He said in part:

"Tilling the soil and caring for the flocks and herds was man's first work. It was a glorious beginning, and will be the glory of man when his days on earth are finished. From the soil God gives all things living life. From the bowels of the earth the miner has decorated the crowns of kings with precious stones and glittering metals. He extracts iron and coal for commerce and comfort. Man has caught the lightning and made it do his will. He rides the seas and floats in air. He tempers steel, molds the earth and chisels stone. His genius utilizes every part of animal from hair to hoof, and every product of the field and forest.

"Accumulated wealth, the miner's harvest; the products of sculptors, the literature, the artist and the builder cannot appease a pang of hunger. Stop all railroads; close every factory door, halt the men of all professions; let every business house go down, and the farms live on in peace and plenty. Stop the tilling of the soil, and all others perish.

"These startling figures that have been going the rounds of the state press, if true, should convince us that our farm work is not wisely done.

SHOULD RAISE OTHER PRODUCTS.

"In 1912 Georgians purchased from other states $17,000,000 more foodstuffs than their cotton and cotton seed brought. These figures show conclusively that it is suicidal for the farmers to raise all cotton and send out of the state for products they can raise at home.

"In defiance of the mandates of the king as revealed in nature, that all life-giving sustenance must come from the soil, the farm has been neglected, the farmer has been robbed. Great fortunes have been amassed at his expense under the guise of protection to American products. Doubtless these laws were honestly enacted, but, by connivance and manipulation, they were perverted into usages for political power and pilfering.

"When stripped of power, those people mourned not the high cost of living, but the cost of high living, and in stupid grief sent out congressional committees to find the cause of high prices, while every layman near to farm life laughed at their folly and marveled that in their wild anxiety they had overlooked the dearth of supply and the barrenness of the country's fields. Many times has the speculator, for want of adequate laws to prevent it, cornered the market of farm products and robbed the farmer of his righteous earnings.

THE CITY CHARMS.

"The city holds alluring charms to the uninformed farm boy and girl. The father and mother, in the peace of home comfort, underestimate their lot in life and yearn to better the condition of their children. Misguided, they encourage the lad to forsake the plow for the monthly wage of city employment. The time when opportunities were plentiful in the city for the well-bred, courteous country lad has gone. The cities are crowded and the country deserted, and from this desertion the cost of living in the cities is trebled and the wages meager. The high cost of living is caused by non-production of the fields.

"The Georgia farmer who feels that he is making no progress should measure his lot not by the one who has achieved success in the city, but look to the great army who have failed. There are more who have been living unmerial labor in the cities than ever before in the history of our state. Let him be buoyed to extra effort and success by what his brother farmers are doing in the west.

STAY ON THE FARM.

"What's the remedy? Stay on the farm; till the soil. There you can be an employer and a veritable foreman. You have seen where every profession and commercial vocation has had the doors of learning thrown open to it, while tilling the soil went on acquiring its knowledge from the example of the stout hearts who have been unable to embrace the charms of higher education and by circumstances were forced to remain on the farm."

Why Hair Turns Gray

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 31.—In a communication to the French Academies of Science, Prof. Armand Gautier explained certain signs of old age by the disappearance of substances containing the element flourine which are found in the human body.

Flourine is found in the skin, the hair, and the nails, and the amount present decreases with advancing age. Prof. Gautier is inclined to believe that this decrease may be the cause of the hair becoming gray or falling out and of the teeth losing their enamel and decaying.

Grand Duchess Olga

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

ST. PETERSBURG, May 31.—Much interest is being taken in the Grand Duchess Olga, the tsar's eldest daughter, on account of statements made that she is to be proclaimed next heir to the throne of Russia after the tsarevitch, whose delicate state of health has of late been the cause of so much comment. Further interest is added by the knowledge that she is about to bestow her hand upon the Grand Duke Dmitri, as whose mother died shortly after his birth. She was the Grand Duchess Paul, of Russia, daughter of the late king of Greece.

Men Injured in 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis Speedway Will Recover

(By Associated Press.)

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31.—Jack Lower, driver, and Lee Dunning, mechanician, who were injured in the 500-mile race at the speedway yesterday when their car upset, passed a comfortable night and were reported to be improving today.

The extent of Dunning's injuries, which include three broken ribs, has not been determined yet. An X-ray examination will be necessary to learn whether he was hurt internally. Tower's right leg was broken.

ATLANTA SCOTS TO MEET TO PLAN ANNUAL PICNIC

In a characteristic Scotch notice, call has been issued to the members of the Atlanta Scottish association for a meeting in Knights of Pythias hall, Kiser building, June 6, to discuss plans for the association's annual picnic.

A special committee, recently appointed to make arrangements for the picnic, will report its progress.

The notice, in the dialect, announces that "Scotch sangs, Scotch stories and Scotch freends will mak' ye glad ye cam'." It is signed by A. Crutchshank, chief, and W: A. Summerville, secretary.

Tales of King Edward

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 31.—Further light on King Edward as a man is thrown by an interesting book just published by Messrs. Mills and Boon. In "What I Know: Reminiscences of Five Years' Personal Attendance upon the late Majesty King Edward VII," Mr. C. W. Stamper, who was the peacemaker's private motor expert and engineer, tells several anecdotes that show the very human side of his majesty's nature.

Mr. Stamper, though he never once drove the king, accompanied him on every journey his majesty made by motor-car. The king used to go out in one or other of his cars every day, and Mr. Stamper sat always by the side of the chauffeur.

He recalls the king's habit of saying, "Yes, yes, yes." "Constantly on his lips," Mr. Stamper writes, "the words were quite indescribably eloquent, and they expressed 'much more than mere assent.' His majesty, Mr. Stamper tells us, liked to be driven at a good pace and was always very strict on time. Caesar, the king's dog, always went in the motor-car except when his majesty drove to a race-course. 'Sometimes,' says Mr. Stamper, "the dog sat in front with me, but as a rule he rode on the seat inside with his majesty.

"On a drive from Rufford Abbey to Newark, the motor-car, going at a good pace, went over a culvert. The car jumped off the ground and kicked badly. 'Stop, Educational Features At Montgomery Theater.

The Montgomery theater has won much favorable comment on their educational features, included in the Friday's program each week.

This particular part of the high-class entertainment attracts large crowds at each performance, and program always elicits the most commendable praise for the management from the patrons.

The Montgomery maintains a very high standard of motion picture service and the "movie" patrons, when looking for the best exclusive attractions, always go to Montgomery's, where they have never yet been disappointed.

The Friday programs appeal strongly to the public, not merely from the highly entertaining features, but for their instructive and educational merit.

Doc Baker Coming Next Week to Montgomery.

The management of the Montgomery announces the engagement of Doc Baker, "the boy with the big voice," for next week.

Doc Baker is one of the best known spotlight singers in this section of the country, and his hundreds of friends will be glad to learn that he is coming back to Atlanta.

The unequaled program of three first-run licensed pictures every day at the Montgomery is attracting big houses, and the house seems to be enjoying a larger patronage than ever before.

The Montgomery wishes to announce that they have secured some of the best singers that can be found to appear at different times throughout the summer months.

The Boy in a Trance

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 31.—A remarkable case against Mrs. Annie Besant, president of the Theosophical society, and the foundress of the Central Hindu college at Benares, has been decided in the Madras high court. She has been directed to hand over to the custody of their father two Hindu boys, now studying in England, who had been placed in her care. The plaintiff was Mr. G. Narayan Iyer, a member of the Theosophical society. His sons in 1909 lived in the theosophical quarters in South Adyar, Mr. W. L. Leadbeater, of the Theosophical society, having undertaken their education. In his plaint Mr. Iyer said he became dissatisfied with Mr. Leadbeater's influence upon them. In her written reply Mrs. Besant submitted that the suit had been undertaken because she had sought to inspire the student population with loyalty to the empire. In his evidence the plaintiff alleged misconduct by Mr. Leadbeater. In December, 1911, he declared that the boys should be completely separated from Mr. Leadbeater, but Mrs. Besant refused. Mr. Leadbeater said the allegations were atrocious falsehoods. In cross-examination he said he had heard Mrs. Besant call him a man on the threshold of divinity." He had seen things in Mars and Mercury, and it was true he had stood face to face with "the supreme director of evolution."

A Horse-Lover

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

ST. PETERSBURG, May 31.—The motor car mania manages to grip most horse lovers in time, but the tsar is, amongst European monarchs, the one who has seen a motor. In former days he declared he would on no account enter such a conveyance, and when King Edward first brought a motor car to Denmark, where he joined the family party at Fredensborg one year, neither the tsar nor King Christian IX, his grandfather, could be persuaded to get into it, much less go for a drive.

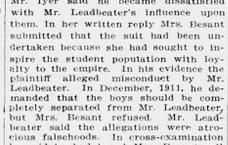
Pimples Should Be Watched

May be Means of Absorbing Disease Germs in Most Unexpected Manner.



Make Your Blood Pure and Immune With S. S. S.

The world renowned laboratory of the Swift Specific Company has collected a vast amount of information regarding the spread of blood diseases. In thousands of instances the most virulent types have been the result of coming in contact with disease germs in public places, and the apparently insignificant pimple has been the cause. It spreads with astonishing rapidity, often infecting the entire system in a few days.

It is fortunate, however, that there is a remedy to cope quickly and thoroughly with such a condition, and thanks to the energy of its producers the famous S. S. S. may now be had at almost any drug store in the civilized world.

This preparation stands alone as a blood purifier. It is somewhat revolutionary in its composition, since it accomplishes all that was ever claimed for mercury, iodides, arsenic, and other destructive mineral drugs, and yet it is absolutely a purely vegetable product. It contains one ingredient which serves the active purpose of stimulating each tiny cellular part of the tissues to the healthy and judicious selection of the known essential nutriment. There are more cases of articular rheumatism, locomotor ataxia, paresis, neuritis, and similar diseases resultant from the use of minerals than most people are aware of. These facts are brought out in a highly interesting book compiled by the medical department of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. It is mailed free, together with a special letter of advice, to all who are struggling with a blood disease.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day of your druggist. It will surprise you with its wonderful action in the blood.

HOW MAN'S EFFICIENCY HAS BEEN INCREASED

By the "J. B. L. Cascade"

Over 200,000 people have found that this new method of Internal Bathing keeps them always up to "Concert Pitch."

That by using it once a week their Lower Intestine is kept thoroughly clean, pure and sweet as nature intended it to be.

That biliousness, with its attendant nervousness, "Blueness" and depression no longer pulls down their efficiency, but they constantly feel bright, confident and capable; also that the more serious ills of constipation (appendicitis for instance) can not progress where the "J. B. L. Cascade" is used.

It is aptly termed "Nature's Own Cure for Constipation," for its operation is just as safe and natural as washing your hands.

Until recently the "J. B. L. Cascade" has been obtainable only by sending to its inventor, Charles A. Tyrrell, M. D., of New York City.

The demand for it now, however, has become universal, through the recommendations of those who are using it. Call at our main store and we will be glad to show you the "J. B. L. Cascade" and explain it in detail.

We are also distributing a very interesting Booklet on Internal Bathing, called "Why Man of Today Is Only 50 Per Cent Efficient," which can be obtained on request, without cost. Ask us for it today and inform yourself about this safe and sane method of curing constipation without drugs.

LEGISLATOR LONG FACES MURDER TRIAL AT AIKEN

Death of Pickens Gunter Will Be Charged to Him at Monday's Court

AIKEN, S. C., May 31.—It is expected that the June term of general sessions court for Aiken county, which convenes here Monday, will be featured by the trial of the Hugh Long representative from Aiken county to the South Carolina general assembly, who, with Hayes Gunter as an alleged accessory, stands indicted for murder.

The case of Legislator Long is a most interesting one, and politics is alleged to have been the ruling factor in the encounter which resulted in a homicide. Last fall, just after the last primary election, Long and Pickens N. Gunter, who was president of the Bank of Wagener, engaged in a personal difficulty on the streets of the little town of Wagner. During the struggle the legislator drew a revolver and fired several shots, administering wounds that proved fatal and resulted in the death of the banker.

It was stated that the tragedy was the outgrowth of a political feud. Feeling ran high between the opposing factions. Long was said to have been forced to flee from crowds. He is said to have barricaded himself in the house of a negro until the sheriff arrived and his posse arrived on the scene and found Long armed and "holding the fort" at the head of a narrow stairway. The sheriff, after expostulating with the crowd, found it necessary to work a strategic ruse, which was successful. Long was slipped through the cordon of men who had surrounded the house and was brought on to Aiken and landed safely behind the bars.

Meantime the newspaper office of Hugh Long was smashed up, supposedly by the malcontents, and the roads leading out of Wagner blocked, ostensibly, it was claimed, for the purpose of preventing the passage of the automobile in which the sheriff and his posse traveled.

Long was even later removed to the state penitentiary in Columbia, and continued in confinement there for some time, being later released on a $5,000 bond.

The representative was formally arraigned last February during the trial of the famous Beach case, but his case was continued. He was in his chair in the house of representatives last winter.

It is understood that the case will be finally disposed of at the present term. Mr. Long's attorneys are Messrs. Croft & Croft and Colonel Claude E. Sawyer, while Messrs. Henderson and Hon. Herbert E. Gyles, the Aiken mayor, will assist Solicitor Gunter in the prosecution.

It is known that the slayer of Pickens Gunter will enter a plea of self-defense.

VANDERBILT OFFERED $1,000,000 BY CARNEGIE

Medical Department Must Have Trust Board to Get Donation

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 31.—Chancellor J. H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt university, announced today that a proposition had been made by Andrew Carnegie to provide $1,000,000 for the benefit of Vanderbilt's medical department. Of this sum $200,000 will be given the university at once for the erection and equipment of laboratories. The income from the remaining $800,000 will be paid annually for the support of the department through the Carnegie corporation.

A condition of the donation prescribes that the direction of the educational and scientific work of the department be committed by the board of trust to a small board of seven members, three of whom shall be eminent in medical and scientific work.

The offer has already been reported to the executive committee of the board of trust and accepted by it. The action of this committee is to be ratified at the annual meeting of the board of trust on June 16, at which time the governing board of seven will be selected.

It is provided that the chancellor himself be one of the seven.

The gift is the largest single gift ever made the university. To the interest of Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Carnegie foundation, is ascribed the handsome donation.

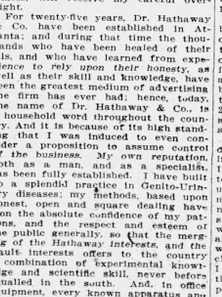
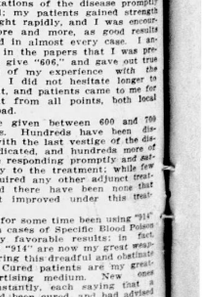
Dr. Hathaway & Co.--The J. T. Gault Chemical Co.

Announcement Extraordinary

Two Great Medical Enterprises Merged



DR. J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, Founder.



DR. J. THOMAS GAULT Physician in Charge.

The Greatest Equipment of Scientific Office Appliances in the Country.

By Dr. J. T. Gault.

The great success which has attended my efforts in the treatment of Diseases of Men—Genito-Urinary Diseases—since I first became engaged in this special work over nine years ago has necessitated the enlargement of my business to such extent that in March of this year I incorporated it, under the name "J. T. Gault Chemical Company," with ample capital to cover every demand of my special practice, as well as to enable me to broaden the scope of my work. The same proved highly satisfactory and profitable; the increase of my receipts amply justifying the additional capital invested. Today, I am pleased to announce that I have acquired the office, with the equipment, practice, good will and entire interests of every description of Dr. Hathaway & Co., in Atlanta and the two great interests of the J. T. Gault Chemical company, incorporated, and Dr. Hathaway & Co., incorporated, have been consolidated and will, in the future, be under my personal control as physician in charge, and every department of the largest medical enterprise in the southern states, will receive my careful oversight.

For twenty-five years, Dr. Hathaway & Co. have been established in Atlanta, and during that time the thousands who have been healed of their ills, and who have learned from experience to rely upon their honesty, as well as their skill and knowledge, have been the greatest medium of advertising the firm has ever had; hence, today, the name of Dr. Hathaway & Co., is a household word throughout the country. And it is because of its high standing that I was induced to even consider a proposition to assume control of the business. My own reputation, both as a man, and as a specialist, has been fully established. I have built up a splendid practice in Genito-Urinary diseases; my methods, based upon honest, open and square dealing have won the absolute confidence of my patrons, and the respect and esteem of the public generally, so that the merging of the two interests of my respective companies into one, will, I feel confident effecting to the country a combination of experimental knowledge and scientific skill, never before equalled in the south. And, my office equipment, every known apparatus and accessory that our practice demands is provided and installed for the benefit of our patients.

When I assumed charge of the Dr. Hathaway & Co. interests, it was not the stranger stepping into a work of which he knew nothing. Years ago, before I entered into my special practice independently, I had a long experience in this office, as one of principal physicians. I became familiar with every detail of the work of the office and its methods, and I have had the pleasure of meeting many of my former patients while there since I have been in individual special practice. And during the years which have intervened I have enjoyed most cordial professional relations with the gentlemen in charge, and a sincere friendship exists between us today. I am not a stranger, therefore, to the Hathaway practice. I know hundreds of the old patients, and to all I promise that the same high standard of dealing will continue in the future, which has always characterized this office during the past quarter of a century.

A great advantage which is assured to patients under this new order of things, is the combined efficacy of our laboratory products. Dr. Hathaway & Co. have, during the many years of their existence, perfected and brought to the highest state of scientific efficiency a line of remedies which no other specialist's office equals. Add to these my own private formulas for each of the diseases which I have included in my special line of practice, and I feel justified in claiming that, as far as I know, the most successful as it has been, this office will equal all former records in its career, and become, in the future, a mecca indeed to the afflicted. The enormous correspondence and practice of this office has necessitated increased facilities, and additional help which enables me to give patients at a distance the best service, and most scientific treatments that it is possible to afford. We recognize that it is this branch of the Hathaway practice that has served, to a great extent, in building up this institution, and I pledge my personal care and close attention to this work in the future. In order to do this, I have perfected a most complete and comprehensive office system, rendering it possible for every department of the business to operate under my own supervision.

In regard to our professional and business dealings with our patients, no change has been made that will disturb the regular routine of our work. The offices will remain in the home of this institution for more than twenty years are retained indefinitely, and the marble slab still remains that was inserted in the pillars of the Inman building, 22 1-2 South Broad street at its construction still directs patients to our suite on the third floor.

In regard to my personal practice, I desire to make it very plain to the public, and especially to my patients, that I do not intend, in any way whatever, to sink my identity or lose my individuality by this new arrangement. I shall meet my patients, transact all business in propria persona, and not assuming any business cognomen. My work is well known in this city for all these years, and the reputation that work has built for me, justifies my claim to the confidence of patients, and I am not afraid to refer to those with whom I am yet without a personal acquaintance.

I do not deem it necessary to assure those who know me, and who have been my patients in the past that the patients of Dr. Hathaway & Co. will receive the same courteous and considerate treatment at my hands that has characterized my dealings heretofore. My methods, since my first day in the practice of my profession have never changed. My only guarantee has been conscientious treatment, and a square deal; and that to all. I shall employ no means of a doubtful propriety, or shady look to lure the patients. I do not proclaim supernatural powers, nor rely upon legerdemain effect cures. The best and most approved remedies known to the world of science are the means employed, and the reputation already made for curing obstinate and often desperate cases attests the merit of these remedies. The class of diseases which we treat with such marked success, include special and chronic diseases of men and women such as Nervous Debility, Kidney and Bladder Diseases, Stomach Bowel, Lung, Heart and Liver troubles, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Varicocele, Blood Poison, Piles, Fistula, and all forms of Male and Female Weakness.

In the care and treatment of those diseases to which I have heretofore devoted my special attention (Diseases of Men) I am glad to say that I will be better prepared than ever to render successful service. Certainly I shall bestow the same close attention to them that I always have. And my success in the past is so well known that if I had no other claim to recognition that this I would feel sure of my standing with the public. Not only two years ago I adopted the use of Ehrlic's great remedy for Specific Blood Poison. It had but recently been given out to the profession. Strong claims had been made for it as a specific for this disease, and it did make a remarkable showing, which induced many of the specialists to give it fair test, and, after close investigation, I became convinced that it was a remedy worthy of fair trial, and as it had always been my policy to give my patients the benefit of the best that science produced, I did not hesitate or was reluctant to prepare myself and equip my office for its administration. My first experience with "606" was highly pleasing, the outward manifestations of the disease promptly vanished; my patients gained strength and weight rapidly, and my practice increased more and more, as good results were had in almost every case. I announced in the papers that I was prepared to give "606," and gave out true accounts of my experience with the remedy. I did not hesitate longer to endorse it, and my patients came to me for treatment from all points, both local and abroad.

I have given between 600 and 700 injections. Hundreds have been dismissed with the last vestige of the disease eradicated, and hundreds more of cases responding promptly and satisfactorily to the treatment; while few have required any other adjunct treatment by this new arrangement. I shall meet my patients, transact all business in propria persona, and not assuming any business cognomen. My work is well known in this city for all these years, and the reputation that work has built for me, justifies my claim to the confidence of patients, and I am not afraid to refer to those with whom I am yet without a personal acquaintance.

I do not deem it necessary to assure those who know me, and who have been my patients in the past that the patients of Dr. Hathaway & Co. will receive the same courteous and considerate treatment at my hands that has characterized my dealings heretofore. My methods, since my first day in the practice of my profession have never changed. My only guarantee has been conscientious treatment, and a square deal; and that to all. I shall employ no means of a doubtful propriety, or shady look to lure the patients. I do not proclaim supernatural powers, nor rely upon legerdemain effect cures. COLONEL GETS SIX CENTS FOR DAMAGE CAUSED BY A LIBEL

Editor Newett Says He Was Mistaken and Makes Apology—Roosevelt Asked Only Nominal Damage Verdict

NO COSTS ASSESSED BY VERDICT OF JURY

Colonel Says He Did Not Bring Suit for Monetary Damage, but Only That Character Might Be Vindicated

(By Associated Press.)

MARQUETTE, Mich., May 31.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today won his libel suit against George A. Newett, who charged the colonel with drunkenness, and, having waived damages after the defendant had uttered a retraction, the jury awarded the nominal damages of six cents, provided in such cases by laws of Michigan. Each party to the suit will have to pay his own expenses.

Judge Flannigan instructed the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff, which they did without leaving their seats. The colonel left for Chicago and the east at 5:30 o'clock this evening, less than two hours after the conclusion of the case.

When the afternoon session began the air was electrical with expectancy. Rumors were flying that the suit would be terminated. Attorney Van Benschoten, for the plaintiff, however, resumed the reading of depositions. It was noticed, however, that he ignored the testimony of some witnesses. The next move was sudden.

"The plaintiff rests," remarked the attorney, James H. Pound, in a matter-of-fact manner. William P. Belden, of Ishpeming, who with Horace Andrews, of Cleveland, was Mr. Newett's attorney, said:

"The defense will call Mr. Newett."

A ruddy checked man whose color did not disguise the fact that he is suffering from a serious illness, took the chair. In his hand he carried a manuscript. When the defendant began reading Colonel Roosevelt moved to the edge of his chair, and betrayed an excitement which his rigid jaws could not hide. Mr. Newett was well along in his reading before the colonel, whose position seemed like that of a man about to leap forward, lost the tense look on his face.

NOT ONE ACCUSER.

"It is fair to the plaintiff to state that I have been unable to find in any section of the country any individual witness who is willing to state that he has personally seen Mr. Roosevelt drink to excess.

At this the plaintiff smiled, and relaxed. The colonel broke into a grin again when Mr. Newett said, with reference to the mass of testimony adduced by the plaintiff, "I am forced to the conclusion that I was mistaken."

The statement admitted that a search of the country had been made to investigate stories of persons alleged to have knowledge that Mr. Roosevelt drank to excess, but in every case the stories flattened out to mere opinions or hearsay. The libel was published in good faith, Newett said, in the belief that it was true and proper information. That it was true, the defendant said, he believed until the trial opened.

No demand for a retraction ever had been made, he stated, and when the bill was filed against him, there was nothing left for him to do but make preparations to contest the suit. Forty depositions were taken in various parts of the country, but to use, or attempt to use them, would be to continue an injustice which had already become apparent to him and to his attorneys.

Leaving the stand, Mr. Newett looked in the direction of Colonel Roosevelt, but the latter was whispering to his counsel. Attorney Pound then said:

"With the court's permission the plaintiff would like to make a brief announcement."

ROOSEVELT SPEAKS.

The judge nodded and Mr. Roosevelt arose. Bowing to the court, the colonel said he would waive the matter of damages, save for the nominal amount provided by law. Speaking of his purpose in instituting the suit he said:

"I wished once for all during my lifetime to deal with those slanders so that never again will it be possible for any man in good faith to repeat them."

Here recess was taken. Judge Flannigan read his charge to the jury immediately after recess. Speaking of Colonel Roosevelt as the plaintiff, Judge Flannigan said:

"Certainly he has convinced the court not only that he was not drunk, but that he is now and always has been a temperate and abstemious man."

At some time court held that Mr. Newett, in publishing the editorial, "was not actuated by actual ill-will toward the plaintiff and that he acted in good faith."

But the court held, the injury to the plaintiff, had he not waived his right to damages would have sustained a verdict in any sum up to the amount claimed in the plaintiff's declaration, $10,000.

As soon as the foreman, William Matthews, a miner, thirty-one years old, reported the verdict as directed by the court, court adjourned and Colonel Roosevelt stepped forward and took the hand of each juror.

"I thank you, gentlemen, each one of you," said the colonel. "It was splendid, just perfectly splendid."

Matthews, smooth shaven and youthful, said the jurors had been much impressed with the testimony of each witness. "After Mr. Roosevelt's testimony I think we were impressed chiefly with that of Mr. Garfield and Mr. Ellis," said Matthews.

"The statement of Mr. Newett himself, that he could not doubt that Colonel Roosevelt was a temperate man after considering the character of the witness, was just just how we felt."

DRAMATIC INTEREST.

PANIC AMONG FANS AND IN THEATER WHEN STORM BROKE

Maggie Cline Did a Heroine's Role and Quieted Excited Audience at Forsyth When Skylight Was Smashed

CROWD AT PONCY MADE RUSH FOR GRANDSTAND

Flagpole on Piedmont Smashed—Plate Glass Windows Broken, Street Cars Stopped, Telephones Put Out

Driving all Atlanta indoors and leaving a trail of wreckage in its wake a heavy wind and rain storm, accompanied by a terrifying electrical display, swept over Atlanta late Saturday afternoon, deluging the city with one of the fiercest rains in its history.

A near-panic ensued at Ponce de Leon park where thousands of baseball fans huddled together to escape the torrents and the flying debris of several heavy signs torn loose by the gale.

At the Forsyth theater the audience was thrown into intense excitement when a skilight smashed and a score of women started for the exits. Maggie Cline, the comedienne, quieted the crowd with a number of "turkey trot" songs.

A bolt of lightning struck the flagpole on the roof of the Piedmont hotel and broke it squarely in two sending the staff and the banner crashing to the street. Heavy plate glass windows in numerous stores in the downtown section were wrecked.

TELEPHONES DISABLED AND CARS STALLED.

Telegraph lines entering the city and for a small area in the immediate vicinity of Atlanta were disabled during the storm, but communications were established within an hour after the wind abated. Officials asserted that the damage done was slight. Telephones also were affected by the electrical disturbance and electric lights throughout the downtown section were dimmed.

Street cars in the heart of the city were stalled for upwards of an hour.

The storm approached Atlanta from the north shortly after 4 o'clock and for two hours the elements were loosed on the heart of the city. The approaching rain fas preceded by a gale of wind which lifted a dust storm heavy enough at times to obscure from sight the tops of office buildings. Precipitation began with a short-lived hail shower followed by torrents of rain and a steady wind which reached an estimated velocity of from thirty-five to forty miles an hour.

According to weather bureau officials the disturbance was local in its nature and spent its real force on the downtown districts. Reports from outlying sections indicate that little damage was done to the suburbs.

PANIC AT BASEBALL PARK.

Panic reigned at the Ponce de Leon park for more than an hour. The park was jammed with 5,000 fans to witness the double header and when the heavy clouds piled up from the north and the wind swept over the park carrying its weight of rain, hundreds sought the center of the field and laid flat fearful that the gale would carry away the stands. When the rain descended several thousand bleachertites found the protection of the stands, crowding the occupants to the railings. A number of signs in center field and on the fence near the railroad track were torn loose and hurled and skidded across the diamond.

A farmer, giving his name as Walter Holbrook, had a narrow escape from death when the branch of a tree broke at Decatur street and Piedmont avenue and fell directly between a team of horses hitched to a wagon in which he was sitting.

Police reported at 6 o'clock that catch basins were clogged in certain low areas of the city and that these sections were flooded for a short time.

Telephone service in the city was dis-

Decision Made In Speer-Huff Contempt Case

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 31.—It is understood that United States Judge Grubb Saturday afternoon late mailed his decision in the Speer-Huff contempt case to federal court officials at Macon.

It is also reported that a copy of the decision was mailed to Attorney General Thomas S. Felder, of Georgia, who represened Colonel Huff.

Judge Grubbs declined to make public the contents of his decision.

Georgian Saves Man From Drowning, But Loses His Own Life

WILMINGTON, N. C., May 31.—J. D. Artley, of Savannah, was drowned today at Wrightsville Beach while attempting to rescue Pharmacist Knous, of the United States Marine Hospital service.

Artley, who was thirty-two years old and employed in the general offices of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, went to the assistance of Knous, and after a hard battle against the heavy surf and strong undertow, succeeded in keeping Knouz afloat until the arrival of the life saving boat.

Just after Knous was taken into the boat Artley sank.

THREE ARRESTED IN M'DONOUGH ROAD FIRE MYSTERY CASE

Walter Wilkes, Negro, and Joel E. A. Manard, Half-Breed, Are Taken in Custody Together on Peters Street

With the aid of Wade Stevens, son of Mrs. Sarah C. Stevens, whose charred remains were found beside those of her adopted daughter Nellie, in the smouldering ruins of their home on the McDonough road, Detective Bass Rosser late Saturday afternoon arrested two men suspected of the crime. They were Walter Wilkes, a negro, and Joel E. A. Maynard, a half-breed for whom the officers of two counties have been searching several days.

Detective Rosser was assigned to the case Saturday morning by Chief Newport A. Lanford, and in company with him and Sheriff McCurdy immediately visited the scene of the tragedy. It was learned shortly after that one of the suspects had been reported as being in Atlanta.

Accompanied by young Stevens, Detective Rosser set out in an automobile on the search. As they passed a saloon on the corner of Berman and Peters streets, Stevens caught sight of the pair coming out of the door.

CAUGHT TOGETHER.

As Stevens engaged them in conversation, Rosser walked up in the rear and deftly handcuffed both prisoners together before they actually realized what had happened. Both were taken to police headquarters and put through a short examination.

Wilkes at first denied that he had seen Wade Stevens on the day of the tragedy when Stevens declared he had told him that his father, William Stevens, was in Chattanooga, Tenn., in attendance on the veterans' reunion, and that his mother was in need of a man servant. He was going to run away to New York, he said.

Stevens reiterated to the negro that he had talked to him while he was doing some painting on Capitol avenue and had suggested that he apply for a position at his home. Wilkes' denial of the conversation brought Stevens to his feet. Dramatically shaking his finger in the prisoner's face, he recalled to him every incident of the talk and Wilkes finally acknowledged that he had seen him and remembered every word that was said.

The fact that the negro at first attempted to lie out of the charge and then admitted it, is taken as a significant fact by the detectives.

Wilkes, however, claimed an alibi, saying that he had decided not to go out to the house on the night of the

Conley's Statement Analyzed From Two Different Angles

The Weak Points in the Negro's Story Are Shown in One Analysis and the Points That Would Seem to Add to Its Reasonableness Are Weighed in the Other.

BELOW are given analyses of the negro, James Conley's latest statement or confession from two viewpoints. In one analysis the negro's statement is weighed with the idea that Conley has not told the whole truth, that he is endeavoring to hide his own responsibility in an accusation of Mr. Frank, who is innocent of the crime, is the victim of a chain of circumstances which link his name with suspicion. In the other analysis Conley's confession is discussed from the standpoint of the man who regards it as being truthful and its points are argued from that partisan angle. The Journal presents these discussions without any wish to influence any reader to either view but simply for whatever news value they may have in throwing light on the case.

Conley's Story Is Unreasonable from This Viewpoint

THOSE who have all along argued that Superintendent Leo M. Frank could not have had any hand in the murder of Mary Phagan, the pencil factory girl, whose body was found in the factory basement on Sunday morning, April 27, are, since the confessions of James Conley, the negro sweeper, more than ever convinced that Frank is innocent.

They now hold to the theory that the negro not only took the girl's body to the factory basement and wrote the notes found beside it, as he says in his confession, but that he, and he alone, committed the murder.

Calling attention to the fact that Frank is an educated, gentle and refined man, and one whose past record and reputation are such as to win the respect and loyalty of his friends and acquaintances, all of whom still believe in him, despite certain unfortunate circumstances which militate against him, they make the flat assertion that Frank, being the man he is, could not have committed the brutal crime charged to him by the grand jury.

After asserting this proposition, those who believe in Frank's innocence and the negro's guilt undertake to analyze the evidence adduced at the coroner's inquest and the negro Conley's affidavit of confession. In doing this they seek to substantiate the statement made by Frank at the inquest and to point out the improbabilities and weakness of the negro's story.

Frank's Clear Statement.

Emphasis is laid upon the remarkably clear and unwavering de-

Conley's Story Stands Test in This Analysis

THERE are several strong points in the detailed "confession" of the negro sweeper, James Conley, in the opinion of those who accept the negro's last affidavit.

All students of the mystery are disposed to admit that Mary Phagan met her death on the second floor of the pencil factory. Whether Conley killed her or whether Frank killed her, the negro would hardly imagine and fit together such details as he has fitted together and enacted, describing vividly the scenes on the second floor. Then, too, there was the tell-tale evidence of blood on the floor there and hair on a machines sharp point. Whoever killed Mary Phagan, killed her on the second floor of the pencil factory, it seems probable.

If the negro killed her why should he have cared to move the body?

Would it not have cast a suspicion at once upon others in the factory, if the body had been left where negroes ordinarily would not be bold? Would it have incriminated the negro workers, if found there, as it did at once when it was found in the basement?

Some one other than the negro might have been interested in getting the body, damning accusation of a crime done on the second floor, away from that floor.

Illogical would have been any initiative on his part to remove the body. Would it have been responsible still to suppose that the negro, of his own accord, would have faced the enormous risk of exposure entailed by carrying the

WILSON WILL AID SENATE COMMITTEE IN PROBING LOBBY

Every Member of Senate to Be Put on Oath—Probe Will Be Sweeping and Searching in Its Character

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—President Wilson's attendance upon and participation in the senate lobbying investigation will be welcomed by members of the senate committee. Senator Overman, chairman, stated tonight that he would confer with the president Monday morning and indicate to him the committee's desire to co-operate with him in making its probe. He will tell Mr. Wilson that the committee will gladly accept any suggestions he may make, and will welcome his prestige at its session.

The whole inquiry, it is conceded, turns largely upon the definition of what is a lobbyist and what is lobbying. The president is expected to furnish the answer, since he started the inquiry. He is entirely willing to assume the responsibility, and he may be relied upon to lend the probers his hearty support; also, it may be stated that the president has pretty clear and well established ideas concerning lobbying and lobbyists.

Senator Overman declared tonight that, in his opinion, the inquiry would cover a vast scope of ground. The business and professional relations of every member of the senate with industries and products affected directly or indirectly by the pending tariff will be disclosed by the inquiry. It is believed that a large number of senators will be found to be interested in some way with some of the manufacturing industries whose products are affected by the bill.

Senator Overman says that he himself is the owner of five shares of cotton mill stock. He added that he had never received a dividend on the stock and would gladly sell it for one-fifth of what it cost. Senator Bryan, of Florida, says he owns bonds on an orange grove in his state and the products of this grove will be affected by the tariff.

Leader Underwood is interested in some pig iron properties in Alabama.

The most searching investigation and business connections of members ever undertaken into the private afafirs o fthe United States senate will be the outgrowth of this investigation, which is to open Monday morning before a subcommittee of the senate judiciary committee.

While President Wilson's recent declaration that a powerful lobby is at

LANFORD TELLS WHY CONLEY WAS PLACED IN POLICE STATION

Chief of Detectives Gives Out Statement Relative to Transfer of Prisoner From the Tower to Headquarters

FURTHER QUESTIONING IS PLANNED BY DETECTIVES

No Arrangement Yet Made for Negro to Confront Frank—Report of Finding Girl's Purse Proves Without Foundation

The prosecuting officials, connected with the Phagan case all denied Saturday evening that the state's theory of the murder has been changed by anything that the negro sweeper Conley has said, but the fact that the negro was transferred to police headquarters, where he can be freely examined by the detectives, seems to show that the officials are not fully satisfied with Conley's story of the crime as it now stands.

Conley was permitted to leave the jail on an order signed by Judge L. S. Roan, of the superior court. Conley was perfectly willing to accompany the officers anywhere they desired to take him.

From the jail he was carried by Deputy Newt Garner to the solicitor's office, and it is said that only after the solicitor had talked with the negro two hours and gone over all of the "rough places in the story" was the decision to take him to police headquarters, rather than the jail reached.

REASON FOR TRANSFER.

Two reasons are assigned by Detective Chief N. A. Lanford for the removal of Conley from the Fulton county jail back to the state cell in police headquarters, where he was imprisoned for more than three weeks.

The first, according to the chief, is that Conley requested that he be transferred back, stating in explanation of his request that he was greatly annoyed Friday night by persons who came to visit in the tower.

A second reason advanced by the chief is that the detectives themselves prefer to have Conley at police headquarters where he will be easily accessible at any time they desire to further interview him in regard to the Phagan murder.

"There is so much red tape at the jail concerning the admission of officers to see prisoners," said the chief. We wanted Conley where we could get to him at any time we thought advisable."

Chief Lanford says he reported to Police Chief Beavers what Conley had said and the latter then went before Judge L. S. Roan and obtained the order for the transfer.

Conley still maintains that he is ready and anxious to face Leo M. Frank, superintendent of the National Pencil factory, with his accusations.

The detectives and other state authorities are also endeavoring to bring the two principal figures in the murder mystery together in order that they may watch the demeanor of the two men, when the negro sweeper accuses the factory superintendent of being the slayer of Mary Phagan.

MUST GET CONSENT.

The detectives will be able to stage the dramatic meeting without the consent of Frank's attorney, Luther Z. Rosser, however, and there is little probability of his going into the matter before Monday.

It was rumored efforts might be made to transfer Frank to police headquarters, where he would be under the jurisdiction of the city authorities and not the sheriff, but the rumor is groundless.

Solicitor Dorsey refuses to comment on the statement of Conley as made to him in a two hours' conference at his office Saturday.

CLOSELY EXAMINED.

It is understood that the solicitor vigorously cross examined Conley, and made the negro go into the most minute detail on every point in the case. The negro is said to have made no important variations from the story he told the detectives Thursday, and the solicitor is pleased with illustrations, when he was carried to the scene of the tragedy on Friday afternoon.

Chief of Police J. L. Beavers, who heard Conley's recital of his part in the tragedy at the pencil factory, was

MAKE REPUBLICANS WORK IS THE TARIFF SLOGAN

Democrats Confident Underwood Bill Will Pass Senate With Few Changes

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—"Make the Republicans work," is the slogan adopted by the Democratic leaders of the senate in charge of the tariff legislation, who today predicted that the senate would vote on the bill by August 1. Members of the finance committee declared that the bill would be out of the sub-committee's report should be the full committee's report should be ready for the caucus by the following week, and that the revised measure would be reported to the senate June 23.

Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, said that the senate should vote on the bill in the latter part of July.

"We will keep the Republicans who want to discuss the bill working and we will keep at work ourselves from the very beginning," said the senator. "We will meet in the senate every day at 10 o'clock in the morning and keep at work until 6 o'clock at night. That will prevent the opposition from delaying the bill by playing with it. We will tire the Republicans out of playing."

It was made evident today that the fight among the Democrats on the wool and sugar schedules would be concluded in the caucus and that this would leave Senators Bansdell, Thornton, of Louisiana, and Senator Walsh to oppose the bill.

LEADERS CONFIDENT.

More positive than they have ever been before were the administration leaders today that the bill would come from committee and through party caucus with free raw wool and free sugar in three years unscathed. Amendments to these schedules will of course be offered on the floor of the senate and the Democrats who will remain avowedly against the bill as it is reported will be expected to vote for them.

Even then, the leaders assert, the bill can be passed as President Wilson approves it, though it probably will require the vote of Vice President Marshall unless Senator Poindexter, the only avowed Progressive in the senate, votes for the measure.

Increases in all articles in the cotton schedule that may be classed as luxuries are to be made by the senate finance sub-committee. Members of the committee admitted this today, asserting that expensive cotton table covers, table cloths of the finer grades and tapestries all would be raised. One reduction in the cotton schedule will be made, the rate on cotton card laps, roping, sliver or roving being reduced from 10 to 5 per cent. On cotton yarns the duties are to be increased 10 per cent to be taken as the lowest rate, instead of 5, and the rates of the Underwood bill are to be increased from that basis upward.

CITRUS FRUIT SETTLED.

The citrus fruit rate fight was said today to have been practically settled today, practically as the rates came from the house. Senator Johnston's sub-committee has not reached a decision on the advisability of putting a retaliatory duty on print paper from Canada, owing to Canada's restrictions on wood and wood pulp.

The agricultural schedule is still under debate. Some senators favor a duty on meats, flour and oatmeal instead of placing cattle, sheep, hogs and grains on the free list. Members of the sub-committee are inclined to free list the raw materials but they said today that the sentiment of the senate would be sounded further before final report on this question was made. President Wilson has been consulted but his views of the matter have not been disclosed.

WIND AT CARTERSVILLE: LIGHTNING KILLS MAN

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., May 31.—One of the hardest rainfalls in years fell here about 3 o'clock this afternoon, lasting for about an hour. Wind and hail accompanied the rain, as well as severe lightning and thunder. No serious damage was done in this immediate vicinity, as far as can be learned, but a good many of the wires are down.

Fate Russell, who lived three miles south of Cartersville, was killed by lightning. He was an employe of the New Riverside Ochre company, but was at home at the time, having three children sick in bed with measles. He went to the back door of the house, and just as he opened it was struck and instantly killed.

Mr. Russell was a man of good standing and liked by all who knew him. He leaves a wife and four small children.

ERWIN HAS THREE MONTHS TO CLOSE GAYNOR CASE

Department of Justice Loses Patience in Long-Standing Case

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Marion Erwin, of Macon, for many years United States district attorney for the southern district of Georgia, and more recently a special assistant attorney general, has been given three months by the department of justice in which to close up the Greene and Gaynor case on which he has been engaged continuously since its inception in 1899.

It is understood that the department's three months' notice to Erwin is indicative of its general policy toward most, if not all, of the special attorneys who have been employed by the government. The move is welcomed generally by Democrats, who believe it means that the patronage plum tree is about to shake, and that scores of deserving Democrats will be taken care of in the department of justice.

Edwin J. Johnson, the special accountant who was employed by the government to straighten out the financial tangle of Greene and Gaynor, has already been dismissed by Attorney General McReynolds. He was released on May 22, following which it is understood that Erwin was given his three months' notice.

The Greene and Gaynor case, which has been in the courts and before the public for nearly thirteen years, is said to have proved a good thing financially for Mr. Erwin, who is one of the best known attorneys in Georgia. Beside the salary he received as district attorney for a number of years, Mr. Erwin was allowed a special fee of $5,000 a year and 10 per cent of the money recovered by the government from Greene, Gaynor and Captain Oberlin Carter. It is understood that, all told, Mr. Erwin has recovered upward of $500,000, and his percentage fee has totaled about $50,000.

U. S. TREATY RENEWED WITH GREAT BRITAIN

Secretary Bryan and Sir Cecil Spring Rice Sign Renewal Papers

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Secretary Bryan and Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, late today signed a renewal for five years of the general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, which expires by limitation on June 4.

PROVISIONS OF TREATY.

The treaty provides for the arbitration by The Hague court of any differences of a legal nature not affecting "the vital interests, the independence or the honor of the two contracting states" and which do not concern interests of third parties. A form of special agreement covering the subject to be arbitrated, subject to the senate's approval is prescribed.

The British treaty is the fourth of the arbitration conventions to be renewed this year, the others being those with France, Italy and Spain. Diplomats here are awaiting with much interest the expiration of the similar treaties with Japan and Mexico. The former expires by limitation on August 24. President Wilson has announced his willingness to renew it but Japan has given no intimation of its purpose.

The renewal of the treaty with Mexico would will expire June 27 would involve the important questions of recognition of the Huerta government, thus far withheld. No hint has been given that the Huerta government will be recognized and in announcing recently the names of the nations with which this government was willing to renew arbitration treaties, President Wilson omitted Mexico.

Other special treaties, all of which the president has expressed willingness to renew, expire in the following order: Norway, June 24; Sweden, August 18; Portugal, November 14, and Switzerland, December 23.

THERE WILL BE TWENTY HEREAFTER, INSTEAD OF NINE, AS AT PRESENT

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Twenty senators hereafter instead of nine as at present, were agreed on as members of the Democratic congressional committee by senators and representatives conferring on the plan for increasing the proportion of senators on the campaign organization. Representative Lloyd of Missouri, as temporary chairman, tonight issued a call for a meeting of the congressional committee next Monday night to act on the plan.

Representative Lloyd and Representative Page, of North Carolina, temporary officers of the committee, and Senators Gore, Newlands and other members of the senate agreed upon President Wilson's suggestion that there should be on the congressional committee one senator from each state to elect a senator in 1914, providing at least one senator from that state is now serving. With this plan will go to the congressional committee a recommendation that five members of that body be chosen to meet with five members of the Democratic national committee to conserve as a committee of ten in active charge of the next congressional campaign.

Redmond Bust Daubed

DUBLIN, May 31.—Fifty-five Irish Nationalists voted against the luckless women's suffrage bill, so Geraldine Manning, a woman of forty, showed her disapproval of their action by daubing the plaster bust of Mr. John Redmond in the Royal Hibernian academy, with green paint, and sketching broad arrows on the lapel of the coat.

On the pedestal was found an envelope containing a card bearing the inscription, "Why didn't you get votes for women, Mr. Redmond? A traitor's face is no ornament to our picture gallery."

FAVORABLE REPORT ON SMITH VOCATIONAL BILL

President and Administration Forces Also Backing Proposed Measure

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31.—A favorable report was ordered today on Senator Hoke Smith's resolution for the creation and appointment of a commission to consider the need and report a plan for national aid to vocational education. The report was adopted by the senate committee on vocation and labor, of which Mr. Smith is chairman. He will submit it to the senate and feels confident that with the backing of President Wilson and other administration forces he will experience small difficulty in getting his resolution through both branches of congress. The president is strongly committed to federal aid to vocational education in the several states.

Under the terms of the Smith resolution, the commission, which is to be named by the president, shall submit its report not later than next December, so that its findings may furnish the basis of the legislation to be enacted.

The committe is to consist of nine men, who will receive no compensation, but whose actual traveling expenses and subsistence while engaged on the work will be paid. An appropriation of $25,000 to meet the expenses is provided for.

Senator Smith stated that President Wilson was an enthusiastic advocate of vocational training and that no man was better qualified to appoint such a commission.

CREMATORY PLANT TO BE BOUGHT OUTRIGHT

Council Certain to Sacrifice Special Projects for City's Welfare

The final outcome of the crematory situation is hardly in doubt. Council is practically certain to buy the plant for $75,000 and pay the whole amount this year. Of this amount, $125,000 is already in the budget. To raise the balance it will be necessary to sacrifice nearly all special projects. Council members don't relish the sacrifice; and naturally so, since they are all striving to get as much for their respective wards as possible. But they realize that the health of the people is at stake, and on top of this they consider that the honor of the city and its credit are at stake. Therefore they are willing to give up improvements which their hearts were set on, and use the money to pay for the crematory instead.

Of course these sacrifices will not be permanent. Rather will they be delays. Next year the $75,000 which would have been paid on the crematory under the contract, will be available for special projects, and likewise the $75,000 payment which would have been due in 1915. It is simply a case of the city unexpectedly having to pay cash for a plant which it planned to buy on the instalment plan, and meanwhile putting off the purchase of other things for which it expected to pay cash—as for example, the English Commercial school building, the Whitehall regrading, the Eighth ward engine house, etc.

SITUATION IN DETAIL.

The crematory situation today stands where it stood yesterday. That is, a subcommittee of the council finance committee, representing the city, has asked Exlne & Spence, attorneys representing the Destructor company, to reduce the price of the plant, and this they have declined to do.

The subcommittee will report back to the finance committee Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The report probably will be that they do not feel the city ought to press the company for a reduction, and that therefore they recommend the city buying the plant for $75,000 and paying the whole amount this year.

This is the price stipulated in the contract. The supreme court has ruled that the contract is illegal. Everybody knew the contract was illegal, technically. That is, the city knew it and the company knew it. Both knew that if the contract ever "got to the court house" it would not stand. They simply hoped it would not get there.

PLANT NEARLY COMPLETED.

Meanwhile the company has proceeded to build the plant in accordance with the terms of the contract, it being nearly completed. Council members who have seen the plant unite in declaring it one of the finest pieces of work they ever saw. Captain Clayton, the city engineer, says he never saw a better. As for Mayor Woodward, who has so strenuously fought the plant, he has not seen it.

Now the company claims that the city should not take advantage of the situation and insist on a reduction in the price. It claims that the argument of a discount for cash does not apply, because the contract provided that the deferred payments should bear 6 per cent interest, which, therefore, rendered the deferred payments almost equivalent to cash. It further claims that a large slice of its profit already has been eaten up in "extras" required by the city engineers and in various contingencies arising from the mayor's opposition.

PURCHASE WILL GO THROUGH.

The finance committee will adopt the subcommittee's recommendation that the plant be bought and paid for, and the June budget will be written accordingly. Then council, when the budget is reported, will adopt it.

Mayor Woodward, when the budget reaches him, may veto it, as he still insists on a reduction of the price. If he does veto it, council will override his veto.

Finally, when the plant is finished and a check drawn to pay the Destructor company, if the mayor refuses to sign the check, which signature is necessary to make the check good, the Destructor company will simply institute mandamus proceedings in the courts and compel him to sign it.

Prepare for Parade

WASHINGTON, May 31.—More than 200 women gathered today in National Suffragette headquarters ready to proceed in a body to Baltimore, where they will march in the suffragist parade there.

METTER CITIZENS WOULD CREATE CANDLER COUNTY

Movement Afoot to Establish Memorial to Late Governor in South Georgia

Few of the governors of Georgia have had monuments raised to them after their death. Recently it was discovered that one of Georgia's first governors is buried in a back yard in Florida. Just across the Georgia line.

Sometimes the friends of a deceased governor get together and erect a monument in his honor. Then, again, it may be that a new county will be named after him, but this is not often. Out of ten new counties which have been created in the last nine years, two have been named after governors—Stephens and Jenkins. But there were other reasons why they were important in history besides the fact that they were governors. Governor Stephens was vice president of the Confederacy, and Governor Jenkins carried the executive seal to Canada when reconstruction began.

It is interesting to note that while the friends of the late Governor Allen D. Candler are raising a monument to him at Gainesville, his friends in the southern section of the state are planning to name a new county in his honor.

It is proposed to create Candler county from parts of Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel, with Metter as the county seat. The citizens of Metter claim to be more in need of a new county, as a result of distance from the county seats of all the counties adjacent, than the citizens of any other town in south Georgia.

The monument to Governor Candler, subscribed for by those who held state offices under his administration, will be unveiled at Gainesville on Tuesday. In the meantime his friends in south Georgia are working hard for the establishment of Candler county.

LEE STREET PUPILS TO GIVE ENTERTAINMENT

An entertainment for grownups as well as children will be given by the pupils of the Lee street school in the school building on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. For each performance an admission of 15 cents will be charged. The performances will begin night at 8 p. m.

There will be plenty of music of all kinds and loads of fun will be uncorked by the "Merrymaking Minstrels." There will be dainty fairies, who will disport themselves among the trees and shrubs of the school yard, and Indians to do the Apache dance around an improvised campfire.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS AT BAPTIST TABERNACLE

Rev. A. A. Holzer to Speak on Christian Missions During Week Commencing Today

The Baptist Tabernacle has secured the services of the Rev. Armin A. Holzer, the Jewish Christian evangelist, who is touring this country in the interest of Christian missions. He will begin his work Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the main auditorium of the Tabernacle, on Luckie street. He will deliver his lecture, "From the Synagogue to the Cross."

Dr. Holzer is a convincing orator. He is the son of a prominent Jewish rabbi of Austria, and has been led to embrace the Christian faith. He has preached in some of the largest churches in America and comes to Atlanta highly commended.

He will be in the Tabernacle all of next week, preaching afternoons at 3 o'clock and evenings at 8 o'clock. He will discuss several interesting subjects. Monday he will speak in the afternoon at 3 o'clock on "The Rejection of Israel." On Tuesday on "The Restoration of Israel." At other times he will discuss "The Infallible Word," "The Meaning of God's Love," and "The Glory of the Palestine Cross."

These meetings are interdenominational in their nature, and Christians of all denominations are invited.

ARKANSANS HERE ON AUTO TOUR TO ASHEVILLE, N. C.

S. J. Rosamond, a hydraulic engineer, of Fort Smith, Ark., arrived in Atlanta in his automobile yesterday morning from Rome, Ga., and beyond that from Montgomery county, Missouri, and way points in Indiana and Illinois. With him came Mrs. Rosamond and J. F. Henry, editor of the Fort Smith Times-Record. They expected to continue their journey this morning along The Journal-Herald national highway as far as Greenville, S. C., turning off from there toward Asheville, N. C.

Mr. Rosamond declared at The Journal office that he had experienced no trouble whatever with his car in all the 1,200 miles of road over which he had come to Atlanta, though he traversed some difficult trails in Illinois and that the floor had left many roads impassable in Indiana.

UNDELIVERED WIRE IS BASIS OF $1,129 SUIT

Asserting that the failure of the Western Union Telegraph company to deliver a telegram caused him to lose considerable business, damaged his business reputation, and made him the butt of sarcastic comment among business associates, C. W. Miller Saturday brought suit for $1,129.50 damages in the superior court.

Miller told the court that the Travelers' Bank of Atlanta, acting as his agent, filed a telegram with the Western Union, establishing his credit with a Hawkinsville bank. This telegram never was delivered, he contends.

As a result, Miller alleges, he lost $129.50 worth of business in Hawkinsville and his standing among merchants there was impaired. For injury to his reputation Miller asks for $1,000 more.

NO ORGAN CONCERT AT AUDITORIUM TODAY

There will be no free organ concert at the auditorium-armory this afternoon, according to the announcement of the Atlanta Music Festival association. The auditorium is occupied by a hardware exhibit.

It is expected, however, that the free concerts will be regularly resumed with the following Sunday. The Wagnerian centennial concert, held last Sunday, was one of the most successful the association has ever given.

COUNTRY SCHOOLS WILL EXHIBIT MANUAL WORK

Exhibits of the manual training department of the Fulton county suburban schools will be opened to the public at the school commissioner's office in the court house on Monday and Tuesday.

The exhibit will include work done in the domestic science department. Displays made by Marion Smith and Chattahoochee schools, located in the mill districts, promise to be especially interesting.

STORM RENTS DRUID HILLS CIRCUS; SOCIETY FOLK ARE SCATTERED BY DOWNPOUR

Baby Show Awards Made and Pageant Begun Before Rain Descends

Mother Goose and her children were sent running pell-mell to the house Saturday afternoon at Druid Hills, when a monstrous black cloud frowned on Atlanta's first society circus and soaked the plumage of the old lady who lived in a shoe, Mary quite contrary, Bo Peep and little Boy Blue.

It was a sad ending for a performance which began most auspiciously. All the beauty of the city's society folk fluttered laughing and shouting over the sweeping green of two of the finest estates in the city.

At 3 o'clock, when the pageant was scheduled to begin, the Josephn Habersham chapter, D. A. R., had gathered on the lawns of Dr. W. E. Campbell and Mr. Lyde King omre beautiful children as dimor proud mothers than have ever been collected before in Atlanta.

From the tow lithe Yundt twins aged ten weeks, who wriggled themselves around in their grandmother's arms in spasms of delight, to staid women with white hair and benevolent smiles, they were all there, the blue-eyed children, then blushing debutantes, the grand dames of Atlanta's smmart set.

They had picked the most beautiful baby from a row of contestants, and had marshalled the oMther Goose parade in long lines of flaring color, when rain came.

RAIN SCATTERS CHILDREN.

The wind and rain swept across the lawn, scattering frightened children hither and yon, with anxious nursemaids ir hot pursuit. Ready to laugh in one breath and ready to cry in the next, the disappointed participators and spectators sped for the safety of the house.

Great drenching sheets battered down the prettl booths placed here and there among the hedge rows and beat the roses into a scented pulp. From the broad porches the people looked out on the painted shoe of the old woman, standing sturdy and strong beneath the volley of the rain drops a monument to a short-lived but merry pageant.

At any rate, a fair sum of money was collected at the gate, and this will go to the chapter to use as it may; for it was the unanimous opinion of every one that the single hour of frolic was easily worth the price of admission.

To begin with, there was the baby show. It was a difficult task to find any one to act as judges, for none cared to pass on the merits of so many wide-eyed and rosy-cheeked children. Finally four ladies consented to undertake the job, but they request very urgently that their names not be published.

BABY SHOW AWARDS.

The children were divided into four classes, the four-year-olds ,the three-year-olds ,.e two-year-olds, the one-year-olds and the twin class.

The decision of the judges was as follows:

Four-year-olds, Murdoch Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Walker, and Elizabeth Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Jones, won the girls' prizes ,and Paul DeGive, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. DeGive won the boy's prize.

Three-year-olds: Davis Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Moore, won the boys' prize, and Julia Meador, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. T. D. Meador, won the girls' prize.

Two-year-olds: Lundy Sharp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sharp, won the girl's prize, and Blackman Hayes Dunn, third, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Dunn, won the boy's prize.

One-year-olds: Caroline Duncan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Duncan, won the girl's prize, and Richardson Sangster, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Sangster, won the boy's prize.

Twin class: Twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. George Yundt won the prize.

Miss Gladys Hanson Snook delivered the prizes to the delighted children. From Miss Elizabeth Jones, who clasped her big dolly and hugged her tight with both arms, to the twins, who neither knew nor cared whether they won a prize or not, all were delighted.

The prizes were of all kinds, and were very handsome ones. They were donated by the members of the chapter. Some were dolls, some were loving cups, there were pins, pictures and toys.

MAN IS MOTHER GOOSE.

With the conclusion of the baby show, which was held on Dr. Campbell's lawn, the grand parade was formed. It was led by Mother Goose, but let us whisper right here that the dear old lady was none other than one of Atlanta's prominent real estate men, let his name be a mystery.

Behind Mother Goose came laughing reproductions of the quaint characters that swarm through the pages of childhood's famous book. There were many others, too, Spanish dancers, Highland lassies and, as the rear guard, walked Mistress Mary, quite contrary, and four of the most beautiful flowers that ever grew in her's or anybody else's garden.

Now, in all the Mother Goose books we ever saw Mistress Mary appears as a rather cross, crabbed old maid, but Miss Fort has reclothed our ideas. Publishers of juvenile literature had best take the tip and get Miss Fort to pose for them the next time they want a Contrary Mary who will surpass the beauty of any of her garden roses and the laughter of her brightest sunflower.

Miss Mary had evidently picked out the choicest specimens in her flower plot to accompany her to the pageant, for surely she has none to equal her tonquil, Miss Josephine Smith; her American Beauty rose, Miss Willis Smith; her forget-me-not, Miss Helen Deans, or her daisy, Miss Hattie Deans.

Miss Mary's watering pot was not needed Saturday, however, for Jupiter Pluvius undertook to drench her garden and the gardens of every one concerned in the circus.

And a good job of it he made.

WALL STREET BANKER PRAISES GEORGIA LANDS

W. L. Rucker, of New York, Spends Week in Georgia on Business Trip

W. L. Rucker, a Wall street banker, left Atlanta Saturday for the metropolis after a week spent in visiting farm lands in the southern portion of the state.

The banker expressed himself as surprised at the wealth of the Georgia lands, and especially at the remarkable growth of the section during the past few years.

Mr. Rucker was carried over many miles of Georgia soil in an automobile by C. G. Rawlings, of Sandersville, and J. Sidney Stubbs, of Americus.

The people in the east he says are just beginning to realize the value of the south Georgia farm lands and are consequently turning their attention to them and away in a measure from the west.

Because of the remarkable growth of this section Mr. Rucker says that financial interests in the east are turning their attention to farm loans in Georgia and elsewhere in the south.

"I find that not half has been told about the prosperity and wonderful future of south Georgia," the New Yorker declared after his trip of inspection.

Mr. Rucker came south on a business trip representing financial interests in New York, Chicago and St. Louis, and he has completed arrangements for the lending of large sums on Georgia farm lands. Mr. Rucker's loans will be made through the Southern Guarantee and Investment company, and while here he was the guest of two of its officials, Burton Smith, general counsel, and Charles T. Phillips, of the board of directors.

LIBRARY SCHOOL GRADS GOT PAPERS YESTERDAY

Eight Students Have Positions Already Secured—Total Now Eighty Graduates

The eighth class to be graduated from the Library Training school, of Atlanta, finished the course yesterday, and the students received their certificates at the graduation exercises at 10 o'clock in the morning.

These exercises were held in the classroom of the school, on the second floor of the Carnegie library. The principal address was made by Miss L. E. Stearns, of the Wisconsin library commission, and made a deep impression on the audience. Miss Stearns' addresses to the successive graduating classes of the library school have sent the students out with an enthusiasm that is invaluable to them in their later work.

Another stimulating talk was made by Willis Everett, president of the board of trustees of the Carnegie library. Mr. Everett then presented the certificates to the following students: Miss Helen Brewer, Miss Isabel Davidson, Elwyn de Graffenried, Emily Kemp, Willie Kate Williams, Isabel Stevens, Mary Thornton and Catherine Walker.

It is a matter of satisfaction to the faculty of the school that each member of the graduating class has a good library position already secured. The school was founded in 1905 by the endowment of Andrew Carnegie, at the instance of Miss Anne Wallace. There are now 80 graduates.

COCHRAN WILL FIRE FIRST GUN OF CAMPAIGN

"The Future Industrial Progress of Georgia" will be the subject of an address which Ralph O. Cochran, representative-elect from Fulton county and candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator Hoke Smith in 1914, will deliver next Saturday afternoon at Chapel Hill, in Daughtie county.

This address will contain the fundamentals of his race for the United States senatorship, and will constitute the first gun of his campaign.

BIG CHICAGO PRINTERY FOUNDS ATLANTA BRANCH

Barnard Brothers & Spindler, one of the largest type founding and printers' supply houses in the United States, have completed negotiations to establish an Atlanta branch as the headquarters of the concern for this section.

The company has purchased the equipment of the Dodson Printers' Supply company and has leased the building at 20 South Forsyth street formerly occupied by the Uncle Remus Magazine. A complete plant for the manufacture of brass rule has been installed.

C. R. McCormack, formerly with the Dodson company, will be with the new concern, and F. P. Richardson, M. T. LaHatte, J. H. Beall, J. D. McFadden and C. J. Davis, salesmen, have been retained.

NOT THE LONG AND SHORT FIT, BY J. ED JONES AND HIS "GANG"

No, this is not the "long and short of it" even though the picture may suggest the pair.

Neither is it a part of the comic section of the paper that has found its way into these parts.

It may also be mentioned in passing that this had nothing to do with a vaudeville sketch, a side show or a street fair.

It is simply J. Ed Jones, of the Jewell Shirt company, of 34 1-2 Peachtree street, Atlanta, and his "gang," composed of N. Steele Andrews, special agent of the Alabama Fidelity and Insurance company, of Montgomery, Ala.

The "gang" has its left hand in its pocket while the other grasps the mitt of the poor little fellow it guards.

To their friends they are known as "Shorty" Jones and "Lanky" Andrews, which is some paradox, though it stands and is taken as a matter of fact by all with whom they come in contact.

Mr. Jones measures exactly six feet and six inches in his stocking feet. Mr. Andrews is merely four feet and one-half inch short. The six yards that it takes to make Jonesy a shirt would make the "gang" four suits of clothes, with vest and cap to match. The taller said he could throw them in and then have some scraps left over.

Yet Mr. Andrews pays just as much for his shirts and suits as Mr. Jones, who is nearly twice as tall and weighs over twice as much, which fact caused the former to observe, quite naturally, that he was just as much a man as Mr. Jones according to the decree of the tailor.

It was a peculiar coincidence through which the two became such good friends. Both were in the lobby of the Georgian Terrace hotel, but were strangers to each other, though mutually attracted by each other's size or lack of size. Mr. Andrews was tiptoeing up to get a slant at the register when Mr. Jones walked up with some friends.

In a voice audible enough for all to hear, the latter said laughingly to those with him, "Don't start anything around here. I've got my 'gang' with me."

Mr. Andrews caught the humor of the remark and, since that time the two may be seen together on every occasion that the Alabamian visits Atlanta.

MARIETTA FIRMS WILL CLOSE EARLY WEDNESDAY

The following firms on Marietta street have joined with the C. W. Hatcher & Co.'s policy to give a half-holiday each week during the summer months to their employes: A. S. Taylor, Peacock & Drennan, The Walkaway Shoe company, M. C. Strickland and the Harris Dry Goods company.

These firms all signed a written agreement Saturday to close their doors at 1 o'clock each Wednesday afternoon during the months of June, July and August, and hope before many days have past that other firms on this popular business street will join with them in giving this half day each week during the heated term to their employes. The business on Marietta street is such that the early closing hour on Saturday is out of the question, and for this reason a day in the middle of the week was selected.

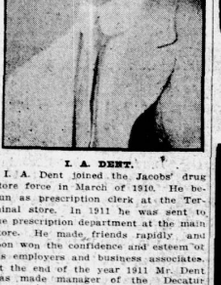
WILLIAM ABBOTT WILL BE BURIED ON SUNDAY

Mr. William Abbott, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Abbott, of 224 Rawson street, died at noon Saturday, after a lingering illness. He was seventeen years old.

He is survived by his parents, two brothers, Fain and T. Wood Abbott, and one sister, Mrs. Frank McNeal. The young man's father is a deputy clerk in the superior court.

The funeral will be held at Mount Gilead Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock and the interment will be in the churchyard. Carriages will leave Harry G. Poole's parlors on South Pryor street at 1:30 p. m.

A Popular Druggist.



I. A. DENT.

I. A. Dent joined the Jacobs' drug store force in March of 1910. He began as prescription clerk at the Terminal store. In 1911 he was sent to the prescription department at the main store. He made friends rapidly and soon won the confidence and esteem of his employers and business associates. At the end of the year 1911 Mr. Dent was made manager of the Decatur street store, which position he now holds.

He has put personality, brains and energy into his work and this combination has resulted in a tremendous business for this particular branch of the Jacobs lines. He is eternally on the watch for new customers and when he finds such it generally means permanent patronage for the store from such person. Mr. Dent has proven the possibilities of the telephone in retail business. He has stressed the fact of telephone orders being promptly delivered. It is said that this branch has the greatest telephone trade of all Jacobs' chain.

Mr. Dent is enthusiastic over his work. He puts his strong personality behind every movement and does not permit any of his co-workers to outwit him in his endeavor to win and hold trade.—(Advt.)

OUTSIDE CAPITAL IS USED TO PAY TEACHERS

Two Millions Was Borrowed Last Year to Meet Pay Rolls

Major A. Hardy Ulm, executive secretary to Governor Joseph M. Brown, has prepared for him a minute report of his investigation into the subject of the payment of salaries of teachers in the common or public school systems of the state.

An interesting feature of the report is that it shows conclusively that fully $2,000,000 in outside capital was used last year in financing the schools of Georgia and that this money cost approximately $75,000 more in interest. This is charged directly to the state's delay in making remittances and to no other cause.

It is suggested by Major Ulm that the state itself borrow this money, rather than have accounts at large rates of interest scattered broadcast, and thus save virtually half of the amount now expended to pay the teachers on time.

The report shows also that city school systems have paid promptly a larger per cent of their teachers than have the county systems. Out of 139 county systems reporting, says the report, seventy-nine superintendents state that their teachers were paid promptly, twenty-eight paid part promptly, and thirty-two made no prompt payments.

Out of fifty reports on special town or city systems, only seven say that their teachers were not paid promptly.

It is also interesting to note, says the report, that several school boards have been borrowing money to make up casual deficits from a Michigan bank at 6 per cent, because they could not obtain money at so low a rate at home. Others state that they have arranged to patronize the outside bank this year.

In conclusion the report says:

"From the reports before me I am convinced it will be many years before all the various systems will adjust themselves to the tardy payments situation and avoid the waste it causes.

"Most of them seem to be working on the theory that the state is bound, sooner or later, to make arrangements whereby its remittances can be made with due promptness."

stop!" cried the king. 'Do you want to kill me? Just look at my hat.' The king leaned forward and held out his brown felt hat, badly knocked in."

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS WILL RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

Wesley Memorial Church Gives Thorough Course of Instruction and Training

The graduates of the teacher training school of the Wesley Memorial Sunday school will be awarded their diplomas at the church this morning and interesting addresses will be made in honor of the occasion, the speakers being W. Perry Bloodworth, Major Robert J. Guinn and Rev. W. F. Glenn, D.D.

The members of the graduating class are as follows: W. H. Fitzpatrick, L. U. Hammack, F. J. Hunter, C. J. McElheny, Miss Alice Bailey, Miss Darrinda Martin, Mrs. Lucy E. Pierce, Miss Marion Preston, Miss Iva Thomas, Miss E. Estelle Witcher.

They have completed the regular two-year course of study and training and are excellent teachers. The training school was established by the church as a part of its policy of constructive, thoroughgoing work, and is a great help to the instructors as well as the instructed.

Another feature of the Sunday school this morning will be the annual children's day exercises.

Rev. W. R. Hendrix, pastor of the church, is out of the city to preach a commencement sermon, and there will be no preaching at the church this morning, the above special exercises taking up the whole morning hour.

CLYDE KING GETS COTTON CONVENTION FOR GRIFFIN

Another City Had Been Decided Upon When Griffin's Claims Were Presented

When the members of the Cotton Manufacturers' association of Georgia voted at their meeting in Columbus last week to hold the 1914 convention in Griffin, the influence of an Atlanta man was largely responsible for Griffin's se*curing the coveted honor.*

It is to Clyde King, one of the most prominent cotton mill men in the state, that much credit is due for landing this important affair for the city of his adoption. His interests in Griffin have made him a loyal son to her, despite the fact that his home is in Atlanta.

At the Columbus meeting the convention had already decided on another city for the 1914 convention when Mr. King rose to present the claims of Griffin. He gave them in such an attractive and convincing manner that other contestants for the honor gracefully withdrew and it was awarded to Griffin.

PROMINENT AUGUSTA MAN KILLED IN AUTO WRECK

Harris H. D'Antignac Dead and Four Others Injured—Were Returning From Barbecue

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 31.—Harris H. D'Antignac, son-in-law of former Mayor Thomas Barrett, was killed tonight, when the automobile in which his party were returning from the annual cotton exchange barbecue struck a wagon on a dark curve of the road and turned turtle.

R. W. Speffard, superintendent of the Augusta-Aiken Railway and Electric company, was driving the car. He was going at a fast pace, though not speeding. His left shoulder was broken.

Three other men in the party were bruised and stunned. They are: Albert Davidson, of the Augusta-Aiken company; James Smith, of the Southern railway at Columbia, S. C., and W. A. Swallon, of the engineering department of the Charleston and Western Carolina railroad.

Mr. D'Antignac was one of the most prominent young men of Augusta. He was thirty-five years of age. He leaves a wife and one child.

ROGERS PURE 36 FOOD STORES

Do Not Fail To Read This

It Is Important

Beginning Wednesday, June 4th and continuing through the *months of June, July and August, more than 300 retail grocers, in*cluding all the Rogers' tStores, will close their stores each Wednesday at noon.

As you know, a good many of the retail dry goods stores, all the papers and nearly all the railroads are able to enjoy half holiday on Saturday afternoon, but owing to the nature of our business, it is impossible for us to do so, and therefore as a day that would inconvenience the public the least we have chosen Wednesday.

Your co-operation will be appreciated by the retail mercants and their salespeople and their families.

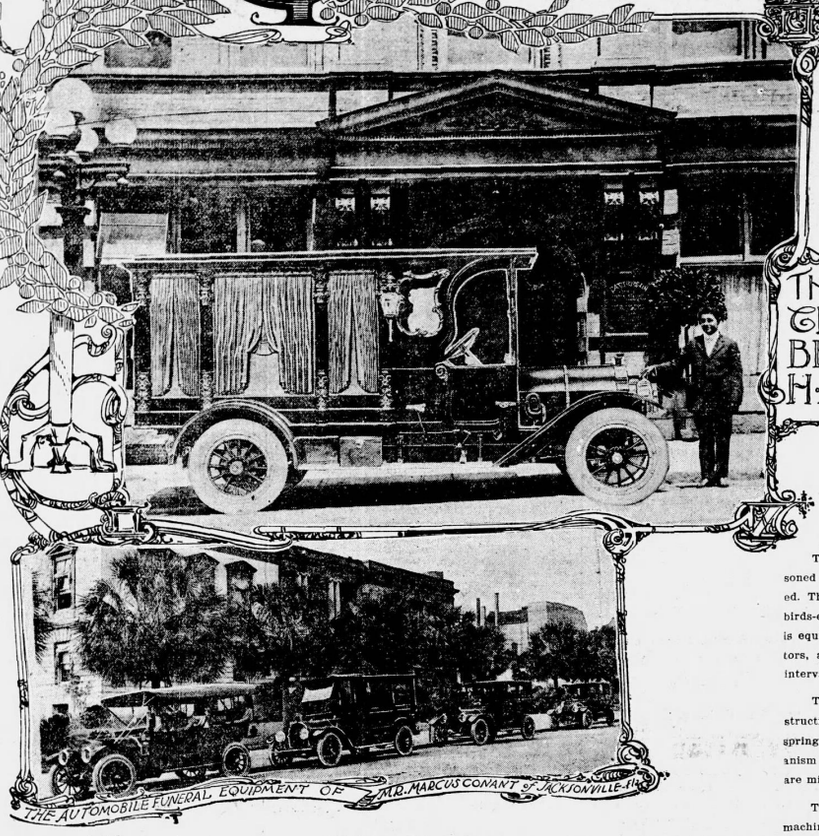
The Automobile Funeral to be in Atlanta

By Ward Green.

THE OPPOSITE PICTURE ILLUSTRATES THE BEAUTIFUL AUTOMOBILE HEARSE BEING BUILT ESPECIALLY FOR H. M. PATTERSON & SON:



THE AUTOMOBILE FUNERAL EQUIPMENT OF MR. MARCUS CONANT OF JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

The body is made throughout of the finest seasoned and kiln dried wood, handsomely hand carved. The interior of the car is finished in natural birds-eye maple. It is extremely spacious. The floor is equipped with highly polished silver plated castors, adjustable pin stops are provided at proper intervals for holding the casket steady.

The best material and shock-absorbing construction have been used throughout. Flexible springs and large pneumatic tires protect the mechanism from the effects of road inequalities. Strains are minimized and undue wear eliminated.

The enclosed driver's compartment with its machine buffed leather upholstery and trimming, the broad, sweeping lines of the car, the handsome side lamps and an electric lighting equipment add the final touch of refinement.

This machine has been specially built by the James Cunningham Son & Company, of Rochester, New York, who make a specialty of construction vehicles for the use of funeral directors. The chassis as well as the body is made by this firm of 156 inches wheel-base, 60 horse power motor. Unit construction, three point suspension, with Bosch magneto, electric self-starter, selective transmission, Timken roller bearings throughout, full floating Timken rear axle, Worm and Sector's steering gear and 36 inch wheels.

Although the purchase of the automobile hearse by H. M. Patterson & Son marks the first entrance of the automobile funeral hearse into Atlanta, it has met with success in other Southern cities.

In Jacksonville, Fla., the first automobile funeral was held in the South.

Marcus Conant, a leading funeral director of that city uses the automobile hearse in his profession and he is probably the first funeral director in the South who recognized that its entrance into his business was inevitable and was enterprising enough to act on this assumption.

His judgment has been vindicated, for the automobile funeral is now no more of a rarity in Jacksonville than in the large cities of the North and East, no more of a rarity than it soon will be in Atlanta.

The advent of the automobile funeral is not a novelty, it is a necessity, a necessity created by the demand of the people today for comfort.

Since Adam craved the apple in the Garden of Eden the cry of humanity has been for the things that would give them more comfort and more convenience. In this day and time the call has grown even more insistent and is being responded to by each and all who control public affairs and public utilities.

The railroad magnate seeks for the inventions which will render his engine swifter and safer, his cars speeding palaces on wheels. The owners of Lusitanias and Mauretanias are making the sea lose half its terrors occasioned by hunger, cold, privation and hardship.

So it is with the funeral director. He must keep pace with the times, he must see to it that his business is as up-to-date in its own way as is that of the shipowner and the shopkeeper.

He is a servant of the public and he must see that the public gets the best that can be given. He gave the public the automobile ambulance when more speed meant more lives saved and now when the public calls for comfort with a cry as insistent as that cry for speed, he gives it the automobile funeral.

THIS IS THE AGE OF PROGRESS

IN every walk of life, in every trade, in every commercial activity, from the time a man is ushered into the world until he steps out of it, he will find that he must keep up with its ever increasing changes. He must maintain the pace that his neighbor is setting, unless he would find himself a sluggard, a "down and out," a drag, a loser in the game of life.

Progress is not confined to any race nor to any country, it is not confined to any profession. The business man must hustle to meet the new needs and a new enterprise on the part of his competitors. The professional man must familiarize himself with new ideas and with new discoveries and inventions.

Fifty years ago our forefathers lived in rougher times and died in rougher places. The slow hearse took them to their graves in the family cemetery through muddy, rutted roads where horses balked and wheels broke.

Today in cities all over the United States people live in luxury and die only perhaps after employing the most attentive care of experts and the modern methods of life saving. They are even buried in mausoleums which would have appeared as wonderful as the pyramids of Egypt to the man of half a century ago. Their remains are now taken to the cemeteries in hearses placed on smooth rolling tires and guided by the touch of the throttle and the dynamo.

The people of the United States are the most civilized people in the world in caring for their dead. They are at least 20 years ahead of England. The automobile has become the motive power of the world. It is essential to pleasure, it is essential to business. Now it has invaded the realm of the funeral director.

It is through no spirit of irreverence that it has come, its advent does not mean less of sacredness, but more of convenience and comfort.

Ten years ago and even today a funeral cortege moves toward West View or Oakland Cemeteries, in the fore is a hearse drawn by a span of horses, behind it comes carriages.

In the future the automobile will be in front as well as in the rear, the span of horses will be succeeded by an automobile hearse, equipped for safety and fitted with detail such as the most modern of limousines.

With this in place of cabs and carriages will come limousines for the family of the deceased and the same and other machines for the friends.

Speed is not of course the object, but in hundreds of other ways the automobile hearse will be found well-nigh a God send. Should a family in which there is a death live many miles from the place of interment there will be no weary journey for wearied members of the household, no rocking from side to side in carriages; but the choice of riding the distance in an automobile, safe and far more comfortable and nerve-soothing.

H. M. Patterson & Son, of North Forsyth Street have added the automobile hearse to their establishment. Experience has shown them its value, and they have not hesitated to buy the best. The firm will of course retain its horse-drawn hearse, and the use of either it or the automobile hearse is optional.

They were the first to place an automobile ambulance in the city which has proved entirely satisfactory to the pubife.

The hearse is a perfect specimen of its kind, the latest innovation in motor-car designing. It is smooth, silent and speedy in operation, handsome and dignified in appearance, sturdy in construction and adapted in every detail to the easy handling of the work for which it has been specifically designed and built.

Here's to the June bride.

Also here's to the June graduate.

The Paramount Duty of The Finance Committee

The paramount duty resting upon the finance committee of Council in making up its June apportionment sheet is to provide for the immediate purchase and operation of the new crematory.

Other claims are important but this one is supreme.

Whatever else is done or left undone, the health and the lives of our people must be protected.

This is no time for procrastination or politics.

It is a time for instant action to the end that this community may be spared the tragic cost of neglecting sanitary needs.

The summer is upon us. The crematory plant now almost completed but not yet paid for is the public's one great safeguard against the risk of an epidemic of disease.

Under a recent decision of the Supreme Court, Council is forbidden to contract a debt extending over a period longer than the current year. Hence it becomes necessary to provide at once for the payment of the full amount due on the crematory plant.

This, the finance committee of Council should do even though it should be necessary to suspend for the time being all other public works.

There are many needed improvements which should be carried forward but there is not one comparable to that of protecting the people's health.

Let the committee and the General Council see to it that funds are allotted in the June apportionment sheet, first of all, for the crematory.

The small boy prefers the insane Fourth.

Hitchcockism Laid Bare.

It was the repeated boast of former Postmaster General Hitchcock that during his administration a postal deficit of some seventeen and a half million dollars was wiped out and a surplus of more than two hundred thousand dollars attained. This was his only answer to the public's protest against the demoralized and grossly inefficient conditions to which the service sank under his regime. The fact that mail was delayed for weeks or months and was frequently lost, the fact that business interests suffered, that the department's employes were overworked and that the United States postoffice became a national reproach—these things were of no concern to Hitchcock who, when confronted with the shame he had brought upon a great institution would smirkingly reply that the postal deficit had been eliminated and a surplus established.

And now, as the result of a special investigation into the affairs of the postoffice as they were left by the Hitchcock administration, it appears that even this claim was entirely a false one. The report of that inquiry as made public yesterday by Post-master General Burelson shows that the service far from becoming self-maintaining under Hitchcock actually sustained a deficit of over seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars. It was only through unjustifiable methods of accounting that even a semblance of the alleged surplus could be made. In this connection Mr. Burleson declares:

"It is pointed out by the committee that the published financial reports of the department states the revenues and the cost of the service on dissimilar, and therefore, incomparable, bases. Revenues of the postal service are almost entirely collected in cash and consequently relate properly to the fiscal year for which the report is made. But the committee finds it has been the practice to compare those only with payments actually made during the fiscal year, regardless of obligations incurred in that year but not to be paid until succeeding years."

It appears furthermore that Hitchcock not only sacrificed public interests to false economy and distorted facts in an effort to bloat his own reputation but that he also prostituted his power to political ends. Just before President Wilson took office, the investigation shows, Hitchcock filled long-standing vacancies, made postponed promotions and assumed commitments to fixed charges for long terms in such a way "as to saddle the new administration with greatly increased expense during months, if not years to come. More than one hundred rural mail routes were authorized in three days."

Of all the immediate blessings which last November's election vouchsafed the American public, few were more seasonable or more gratefully received than that which rid the government of Hitchcockism.

A Municipal Problem, And How to Meet It

Atlanta's charter forbids the incurrence of a municipal debt for a term longer than the year in which it is made. Time and again, however, the City has faced urgent needs or rich opportunities for which sufficient funds were not available but which everyone agreed should be met. In such cases, Council has heretofore appropriated such an amount as the condition of the treasury would permit and has then recommended to its successors in office that the remainder of the obligation be paid. It was in this way that the City acquired Piedmont Park, bought a new pump for the waterworks, built the Auditorium-Armory, secured the present City Hall and carried out divers other improvements which otherwise would have been long delayed or, perhaps, never accomplished.

In all instances of this kind, the City's creditors have relied solely upon the City's good faith; for, under the terms of the charter no Council could bind a succeeding Council to the payment of any debt; it could simply recommend, as we have said, that such obligation be respected and discharged. But the creditors considered their interests fully protected, knowing as they did Atlanta's keen sense of civic honesty and knowing, too, that such methods were well supported in precedent. This plan, though not strictly in keeping with the technical requirements of the charter, was generally sanctioned, in as much as the improvements it made possible were for the public good; and it has worked satisfactorily, without challenge or objection, until the recent dispute over the new crematory.

The Supreme Court's decision on that interesting case, however, removes the possibility of carrying forward public improvements, however imperative they be, by the method heretofore employed. The Court holds in effect that under the terms of the charter as it now stands Council is not warranted in entailing even a moral obligation upon its successors and that contracts thus entered into are legally void. The City is thus confronted with a serious and far-reaching problem, not only in respect to the crematory, upon the completion and use of which the community's health now depends, but also in respect to other essential improvements that will inevitably be demanded in the future.

Atlanta's growth is so rapid and its municipal needs are so manifold that there is never enough money in treasury during any one year to meet them; at least that is true and will continue to be under our present system of government. How, then, are we to meet these emergencies? That is a question which must be answered in behalf of the City's progress and the well-being of its people.

Since the Supreme Court's decision enjoins the method formerly employed, we are limited to two plans of accomplishing large public improvements. We must either issue bonds whenever these improvements are called for, or go straight to the heart of the problem and so amend the charter as to authorize Council, in cases of extreme necessity, to incur a debt extending beyond the current year.

Of these propositions the first is obviously impracticable. Yet the occasion has come in the past and will come in the future when the city would have to stop all current improvements and even suspend the business of its various departments, or else issue bonds in order to meet special and pressing needs. Consider, for instance, the present crematory situation. Here is an improvement which the community must have and have promptly or be exposed to the risk of an epidemic of disease. To obtain the crematory, it is necessary that the entire cost of this necessity shall be paid during the present year. Yet, in order to raise the entire amount of money due on the new plant, Council must withhold appropriations from schools, hospitals, streets and practically all other municipal institutions and activities. In short, the entire resources of the City government must be centered upon this one need, while scores of other important enterprises are halted.

Our only alternative, under existing conditions, is either this or a bond issue; and in such circumstances bond issues would be neither expedient nor wise. They would require a popular vote with all the preparation and involved machinery incident to an election. The purpose and justification of bond issues, furthermore, are to care for general, not particular, needs and for that reason the law has made the process of employing them more or less difficult and tedious. Problems like that of the crematory require prompt action and the means for solving them should be close at hand.

The suggestion which has been made that Council find some new loophole of escape from that clause of the charter upon which the Supreme Court has just passed is scarcely worthy of consideration. No problem is ever settled by evading it. We might temporize for a season but in the end we should have to grapple with the old difficulty hand to hand. Since, therefore, it is unfeasible to issue bonds for every large improvement that is demanded and inexpedient, if not impossible, to suspend all current activities to find funds for such improvements, what is to be done in situations like that to which the crematory has given rise?

It occurs to The Journal that there is but one practical solution and that is to secure an amendment to the present charter so that Council under specified conditions of public necessity may create a debt to extend beyond a single year. Such an amendment, to be sure, should be hedged about with the most rigid safeguards. The power it would confer should be exercised with utmost caution and only in order to meet extraordinary needs. Not until every other available resource had been exhausted and every other means tried out, should Council be permitted to place anything like overlapping obligations on the city; and such an amendment as we have suggested should be so framed as to provide first of all for these precautions.

That, however, can undoubtedly be done in the case of Atlanta as it has been done in the case of many municipalites whose charters now include such a provision. A bill asking for an amendment of this character could be introduced and passed at the session of the Legislature which is soon to convene, thereby opening a way of escape from the City's immediate difficulty with reference to the crematory and also providing a legal and conservative method of dealing with future problems.

It should be said in this connection that while such a plan is pending there is urgent need of taking care of the crematory affair; for, this is a matter that involves the most vital interests of the entire community. The finance committee of Council should provide in the June apportionment sheet, soon to be submitted, a fund sufficient to pay off all outstanding obligations against the crematory plant. This is an emergency that must be met, even though it require a suspension of all other municipal business.

When that is done the City can turn its attention to the enactment of a charter amendment such as we have described and by that means relieve the breaking strain upon the treasury, and enable the City's business to move forward. Let us repeat that any amendment which may be considered should make it utterly impossible for Council to contract a debt for longer than the current year except in cases of absolute necessity, when the vital interests of the people demand that a large improvement be made and when there is no other means of providing for such an improvement. Thus defined and thus restricted, the amendment would be useful and well advised; otherwise, it would engender problems far more difficult than those which now confront us.

It is evident, however, that some new plan for making needed improvements possible must be devised. Atlanta cannot go on trying to transact its enormous business in a tin cup. It cannot, as we have shown, resort to a bond issue every time some special and important piece of work is to be done, nor can it afford to suspend all other public work. Therefore, since the Supreme Court's decision puts an end to the method heretofore employed to meet needs of this kind, a new plan must be found; and a charter amendment is the only one, as far as we can see, that presents itself.

Georgia's Urgent Need Of Vital Statistics.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will lend its support to the State-wide campaign now under way to secure the enactment of a vital statistics law at the next session of the Legislature. Every other trade body and civic organization in Georgia should enlist in this intensely practical movement; for, the lack of a system of vital statistics is a serious detriment to business development as well as a menace to public health.

Georgia has abundant advantages to offer the home-seeker and investor in other parts of the Union. She has a wondrously fertile soil, a genial climate and other material resources which are well-nigh unlimited in their richness and variety. But the first question that occurs to the home-seeker concerns the healthfulness of the country into which he contemplates moving his family and until he is satisfied on that all-important point, other inducements lost half their appeal. Now, the people of Georgia believe, and rightly so, that theirs is a particularly healthful State. But what means have they of showing the outsider that this is true? An Idaho man who had been attracted by the advertisements of a certain Georgia county and was thinking of settling there with his family recently wrote Dr. Wilbur, chief statistician of the Government's health service, asking him for figures on the death rate of the community in question and on related matters. The official had to reply that there was no law for the keeping of vital statistics in Georgia and that hence he could not furnish the information desired.

That is but one among thousands of examples which go to show the great practical need of a complete and accurate record of births, deaths and disease throughout the State. Not only are we now at a continual disadvantage in respect to the country at large, but we are at an even greater disadvantage in dealing with our own problems of health and development. For, until we have a system of vital statistics showing precisely the conditions with reference to typhoid, pellagra, malaria and and other diseases, we shall be able to proceed but gropingly in efforts to overcome these ills. In short, we must know where we stand before we can know just how to move.

Georgia is one of the only four States in all the Union that have no legislation to this effect. It is to be hoped that the General Assembly will respond to the needs and the wishes of the people in this vital particular.

Some of us never tire of talking about the things they used to do and the friends they used to have.

Two Striking Views On The Same Country Town

"Oh, dear! It's good to get a breath of real fresh air," said Margaret Curson. "And yet I have the country—to live in."

"Do you?" a pleasant voice asked, incredulously. "Did you ever really try it?"

The two girls had met in a country railway station. Already, after an hour, they felt well acquainted.

"I was brought up in the country," replied Margaret. "We moved to the city only a few years ago."

"Why do you hate it?" asked Ruth Evans.

"It was so limited. There was no high school within reach and I had no chance for a real education. They couldn't afford to pay a minister, and we only used the church a few weeks in the summer. There was no place for amusements, and no fun going on anywhere. A girl had no chance to make any money for herself. Father and mother were satisfied, but for a girl—"

"Weren't there any other young people?" asked Ruth.

"A few, but they hadn't any spirit." Then Margaret added, "Do you live in the country?"

"Yes, and I love it," Ruth said. "But we were lucky. It's a dear little place we're in, nestling right under the mountains. To be sure, it's small, but we're happy there. I was like you. I wanted a high school education and didn't get it. I was sickly till we moved into the country. It wasn't too late then, but there was no high school. The country made me strong, though. What's the good of a school with a brain and body that won't let you study? I got the health, and then I made the school myself."

"How?" Margaret asked, with interest.

"I got the young people together and we started the Launch Out club. Every member had to launch out in some little enterprise that would make money to buy books. We applied to the department of agriculture for pamphlets that would help us. I had an outbuilding made into a pigeon house and sent squabs to market. Some raised hens; one girl bred a fine strain of ducks; another concentrated on cauliflowers. We soon had enough money to buy books for a course of reading. Then we read. We've done a lot since. We open the church every Sunday and have simple, helpful services. We have sports and entertainments and a village improvement society. We have made the houses ever so much prettier. The one we bought had plenty of possibilities. Oh, I believe this is your train."

"Yes, I'm sorry to go. But if you'd lighted on Gilead, where I was born, you'd tell a different tale. Your village has some life in it. Good-by."

"Gilead! Gilead!" Ruth ejaculated. "Gilead in Vermont Why, that's where I do live. You must tell me your name before you go."

"Margaret Curson."

"Why! It's the Curson place we bought—your house. And oh, it had such possibilities!"

The train was moving.—Youth's Companion.

Texas Turns to Prison Reform

(New York Evening Post.)

A committee of the Texas legislature is inquiring into the plan and the administration of the penitentiary system of that state. This occasion has been seized by a Texas citizen of large affairs, who has long been familiar with some of the operations of the system, through his employment of convict labor and otherwise, to make some far-reaching suggestions for reform. He would abandon the two penitentiaries now in use, and consolidate their activities in the vicinity of the farms which the prisoners work. This, he holds, would benefit the state financially, and the prisoners as well. Profit-sharing with the convicts, he thinks, would double their productive capacity. The greater result of such an outcome would be its effect upon their character. To go out from the prison walls, not as a pauper, but as a man possessed of a bit of capital, who has demonstrated by that very fact how far he is from moral bankruptcy, too, could not but raise him in his own eyes along with those of the more or less unsympathetic world. However, the merit of this or any of the other changes proposed is not important here. What will count for Texas is the intelligent interest that is evidently being taken in a problem which we in New York are not yet facing with the concern that we ought to feel.

LOST PALS.

I had a pal from 'Frisco town,
A roving lad was he,
And gaily up the world and down
We went by land and sea.
It was in Shanghai that we met,
In Nome we parted fair,
Because, you see, he chanced to get
A wife who kept him there.

A partner blithe in Callao
I struck one roaring night;
To stand a friend, or rush a foe,
Was his sincere delight.
He knew the call that leads away,
No matter where or how—
He met a maid on Casco Bay
And there you'll find him now!

In Sydney was a sailor spry,
Who out of Charleston hailed,
And he was broke and broke was I,
And so we signed and sailed.
Free footed 'round the world we rolled
And endless friendship swore.
He met a lass in London old—
He keeps a baccy store.

I've had 'em good, I've had 'em bad,
The wide world o'er the same;
But of the many pals I've had
Not one but quit the game!
What I have learned I'll tell to you—
I've come at last to know,
The only kind of pal that's true
Is just a wife—that's so!

HOO'S HOO

BY JOHN W. CAREY.

Who's up against a job he couldn't slip us on a bet, to wit, to keep the lid upon the howling suffragette?

Who puts to rout the fair ones when they make the rafters ring with happy little thoughts like this: "To hades with the king?" Who promptly gets upon the trail of skirts who toss a bomb and send some country home upon its way to kingdom come? Who's Johnny with the feeding tube, nor balts for fear it's rude, when girlies do the hunger strike, and shoots 'em full of food? Who doesn't seem to mind it when he's called a brute or cur That Reginald McKenna man—Home Secretary, sir.

Forestry Interests

By Frederic J. Haskin

Less than a quarter of a century ago the first forest reserves of this country were authorized by President Cleveland in the face of the severest criticisms coming from many classes of people. Now the interest in the conservation of the trees of the country has become so well recognized that school children understand its value and the different states are vying with each other in the passage of forestry laws and the establishment of public forest reservations. From June 16 to 20 an international forest congress is to be held in Paris which will be largely attended by American travelers in addition to the delegates appointed to represent the American Forestry association, an organization which, through its branches and affiliations in the different states is exciting a powerful influence in developing the forestry interests of the nation. The association includes many of the most prominent men in the country among its officers and members. Among those who have lately indicated an active interest is Vincent Astor, commonly credited with being the richest young man in the world. Mr. Astor will be in attendance upon the international forest congress in Paris because he has recently decided to devote much attention to scientific agriculture with special reference to the proper development of the woodland upon a farm of over 6,000 acres at Rhinecliff, on the Hudson river. The establishment of forestry schools in which men can receive training in the care and culture of trees in this country without going to Europe has been made possible largely through the generosity of wealthy men who have provided large tracts of land for this purpose. Some of the state universities have also established excellent facilities for this work.

The interest in forestry is not confined to people of wealth, however. It appeals strongly to citizens of every class. The establishment of Arbor day in the public schools of the country and the instruction of school children in the civic duty of planting trees and caring for those already growing in their localities has been so widespread that few towns have altogether overlooked the subject. As a means of increasing this interest in the development of forestry, the Pennsylvania Forest association held an interesting exhibition last month in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, which it is expected will be the introduction to a series of similar exhibits in other states. The United States bureau of forestry co-operated with them to the extent of supplying a number of valuable collections, including maps showing forestry conditions in different parts of the country, transparencies showing different classes of trees, a model of an imaginary model national forest reserve and a collection of basket willow specimens calculated to show the value of this wood. This exhibition, in charge of one of the experts of the department, will be available for similar exhibitions in other states upon demand. The Pennsylvania exhibition included a series of lectures delivered by leading experts upon forestry subjects, profusely illustrated by lantern slides.

• • •

No better demonstration can be given of the possibilities of results from tree cultivation than is afforded by some of the prairie states of the middle west. Many of these were practically treeless at one time and now are thickly dotted over with groves of valuable trees which add considerably to the financial resources of the states even now, while their future value is multiplying. In Iowa and Kansas especially the forest growths are an increasing asset. They are all the result of the tree planting work of the settlers who at first only planted trees around their own homes for shade and for wind-breaks to lessen the force of the driving prairie winds. At one time all the wood used in the prairie states had to be wrought in, even including that used for fuel. For twenty years these states have been supplying all of their own fuel wood, as well as fence posts, and now are beginning to yield larger timber not only for their own use but to put on the market to supply the needs which the wasted resources of the eastern states are no longer able to supply.

It was in 1891 that President Cleveland authorized the first national forest reserves which were made in what was then Washington Territory. Since then they have been increased to include reservations in twenty states and territories, amounting to 163,743,443 acres. In addition to these there are 23,748,850 acres in Alaska and 65,950 in Porto Rico. For the administration, protection and improving of these great areas of forest lands, the United States government last year expended the sum of $5,530,210.50 out of the $6,540,861.31 of available appropriations for that purpose, or less than 3 cents per acre. The total amount of lumber now standing in the national forests is nearly 600,000,000,000 feet board measure. The revenue derived from the national forests amounted to almost $1,000,000 revenue last year, an increase of over 10 per cent from the year preceding, and these forests are becoming more valuable each year.

• • •

In addition to the national forests are those in the different states which are administered by each state according to its own discretion. The increase of these state reserves and the establishment of a better system of caring for those which have already been made is securing the hearty efforts of progressive citizens in every locality. For some reason women have been more active than men in working for forestry legislation. In some states the entire movement for a forestry department has been initiated by the women, especially organized women. The village improvement clubs in the smaller towns have brought the forestry movement home to the citizens in a practical manner which they could easily understand.

In localities where the native trees have been destroyed, either from lack of care upon the part of the owners of the land or because of the greed of the lumbermen, the reforestration work has been inaugurated with good results already, apparent. It frequently is found that ground which has originally been forest land is of little value for anything else. It will produce poor crops of grain and only for a great expenditure of labor and fertilizer. If the ground could have its original crop of forest trees restored, it might, after a term of years, become productive of larger revenues than could be secured from any other crop, since trees were the natural product of that soil. The enormous revenues accruing to the German government from the Black Forest of that country are only typical of what may be secured from proper care of any natural forest and interest in this subject has received a wonderful stimulus in the United States within the past generation which is already yielding rich returns.

When the first forest protective measures were adopted by the United States government, they were severely opposed by most classes of people. Only a few were able to understand that they were needed for the protection of the people themselves. Now lumbermen, mine owners and other representatives of large industries, dependent upon the natural resources of the country, are nearly all co-operating with the government in the enforcement of every protective measure. One of the largest gold mining companies in the world, located in South Dakota, at first vigorously resisted the attempts of government forest officials to limit the amount of timber they cut down each year. A small part of this timber was used in the construction work of the plant but the bulk of it was allowed to waste. An official of this company recently visited the forestry department headquarters in Washington and said: "I want to thank you for the benefit your work has been to us. But for the restrictions you placed upon us ten years ago we might now be facing the necessity of having to buy lumber and ship it in for the use of our plant. With the system of conserving the timber we have upon our own ground we know we will have sufficient to last us for centuries."

AN OLD LANDMARK

Something about a notable building on South Forsyth street.

THE building on South Forsyth street where a tragedy was recently enacted has an interesting history. It was erected a short time before the opening of the famous International and Cotton States exposition, held in Atlanta in 1895.

From Atlanta newspapers of that year it is learned that owing to the great numbers of visitors expected on that occasion, the public comfort department of the exposition needed several additional hotels. Atlanta was determined to take care of all comers. On July 12, 1895, the papers say, about 1,600 rooms had been passed up, but still more hotel room was needed. It was decided to secure, if possible, this building, which was formerly used as a livery stable, one of the most commodious in the city at that time, and fit it up for hotel purposes. To that end negotiations were begun with the Venable Brothers by Chairman Alex W. Smith, of the public comfort committee.

The result was that a contract was made by the terms of which the big building with the granite front on Forsyth street was to be converted into a splendid first-class hotel with about 200 rooms.

Work was soon begun, and the large structure of several floors was rapidly converted into an elegant hotel, with electric lights, handsome furniture and all the modern conveniences. It was called The Granite hotel. It had four stories, with an imposing stone front, and was well located, being only two blocks from the Southern depot, which then stood upon the present site of the Terminal station. It was leased to a well-known hotel man, who managed it during the three months of the great exposition. There were accommodations for several hundred guests, and The Granite hotel was a feature of this city in those days.

Before this large building had been transformed into a magnificent hotel the convention of railway conductors had held great meetings on one of the spacious floors, and the third floor was once used as a drill hall by the Knights of Pythias. Captain "Tip" Harrison, the popular state house official, in speaking of this, said that the vast floor made an excellent drill hall.

Some of the most famous people who visited the great exposition of 1895 were entertained at the Granite hotel.

Among them were the artists who performed at the Trocodero, a splendid and most commodious amusement palace, which stood on the site of the old capitol building at the corner of Marietta and Forsyth streets. The Trocodero was easily the greatest and most attractive amusement feature of those days in Atlanta, or the south. It was a new departure in the amusement line, also, and the excellence of the performances.

The greatest performers of the age appeared in vaudeville there, including Patinta, the modern dancer; Samson, the strongest of all the strong men; Bryant and Saville, masters of comedy; the Salomitas, human frames; May Cook, the greatest cornet virtuoso; Drowee, the unequaled juggler, and the Bland Sisters, the most beautiful and graceful dancers ever shipped to Atlanta. There can be no doubt of it, the Trocodero gave the finest show of the high class vaudeville kind ever seen outside of Paris and no wonder the Atlanta newspapers of that day alluded to it as the Parisian palace.

It was a temporary structure, but strongly and elegantly built in one-story, and took its name from the celebrated Paris palace of the Trocodero. The proportions were immense. The main hall covered 15,000 square feet. There were thirty-six boxes on the north and east side tiers. There were a cafe and a music hall toward the front, and at the west side a magnificent theater. To the right of the mammoth stage, there was a huge orchestrian, the third largest automatic instrument in the world. It had 780 instruments, and the execution of fine passages was exquisite.

The cafe was a great feature, under the direction of a noted epicure. A feature was a daily service of an old-fashioned Georgia barbecue of lamb, chicken, bird, duck, guinea-hen.

The magnitude of this amusement palace amazed even Atlanta and the patronage was tremendous.

Governors, mayors, generals, senators, congressmen visited the Trocadero. Millions there were, too, the most noted at that time being Colonel John Jacob Astor, heir to $200,000,000, who was here taking in the exposition.

James J. Corbett, the then champion, while on his way to the west to fight Fitzsimmons, who bested him in fourteen rounds at Carson City later, did a turn at the Trocadero. An Atlanta man offered to meet Corbett that night, but the champion declined. While Corbett was on the stage the enthusiastic friends of the Atlanta man, who waved to them his thanks from a box, cheered him to the echo! Two thousand people sat in the theater, hoping that Corbett at the last minute would give in and box with the Atlanta man, but he didn't do it. With Corbett that night were DeLaney, McVeagh, Daly and O'Donnelly. That afternoon Corbett refused to be escorted to a hotel from the train by a brass band. He did not want any parade in his honor.

Those were interesting days in Atlanta. During the great exposition of 1895 four theaters were running here, to-wit, the Grand, the Lyceum, then on Marietta avenue; the Columbia, now the Bijou, and the Trocadero. In addition, there were a number of small shows in halls, tents, etc.

Charles Keene, since dead, played tragedy at the Grand, "Richielieu," "Richard III," "Hamlet," and so on. "1492" was also at the Grand, with Bessie Bonehill in many parts and Richard Hardiman as the Daisy Queen.

They were the best of their kind in that day. Lewis Morrison was also here in drama, and made Shined was at the Lyceum for a run and the Spider and the Fly held on with a short span of life. Joe Ott, since dead, was here singing "Only One" at the Columbia, and there was certainly one only Joe Ott, the most individually, personally, peculiarly all-to-himself man who ever appeared on any stage. He was really a great character actor, but unlike Sol Smith Russell, didn't even find it out when it was too late—didn't ever find it out!

That was a great old exposition. Several things happened that made and kept things lively. One was the fuss in Piedmont park. Another was advertising an exposition with circus posters, the original idea of Mr. H. H. Cabaniss, head of the "ad" department. Another was the trouble about the bullfights.

John Hosea Ballow wrote from Washington that bull fights should not be fought in Atlanta, he was laughed at—that is, Mr. Ballow. Later, he said he'd appeal to Tom Carlisle, secretary of the treasury, not to let any Mexican bull be imported, and if he did, he'd call for his impeachment. It got warm!

At last the directors of the expo, declared the bull-fights "off" and fourteen bulls—fighters in scarlet array were out of a job at the Mexican village.

Another hot thing was Cleveland, the president, pressed the button that started the show—and Atlanta didn't know it! 30,000 Atlantians greeted the Liberty bell.

The tub races and rope walking were good, the weather fine, everybody happy and—but

COTTON OIL MILL SUPERINTENDENTS AND MACHINERY MEN TO GATHER IN ATLANTA FOR ANNUAL CONVENTION ON JUNE 4-5-6

Machinery Exhibit at Auditorium to Be a Special Feature

Fully 450 delegates gathered from all parts of the south, will assemble in Atlanta June 4, 5, and 6 to attend the third annual convention of the Interstate Oil Mill Superintendents' association. The sessions of the convention will be held in the auditorium-armory. It is confidently expected the convention will be the largest and most successful ever held by the association.

For the second time Atlanta, more or less the central point for a meeting for those engaged in the cotton oil industry, has been chosen as the convention city and local oil men, backed by the bureau of conventions of the chamber of commerce, are bending every effort to make visits of the delegates complete in detail.

THE MACHINERY EXHIBIT.

One of the important features of the sessions, according to information given out, is to be the machinery exhibit. Recently oil mill men have formed an auxiliary to the superintendents' association and some fifty delegates, representing the machinery interests, will be present at the convention. The machinery exhibit to be placed in the auditorium during the sessions of the convention will be, without exception, the largest ever shown in this section.

From the advance information sent out this exhibit will include engines, pressing machinery, pumps, belting, packing, valves, pipe, insulating material, scales and all sorts of special appliances for oil mill machinery. It is said that every machine and device required for the installation and operation of an oil mill will be shown.

ENTERTAINMENT ARRANGEMENTS.

The entertainment features planned by the local committee are such that the delegates will be busy during the evening and there will not be a dull moment in the three days' visit.

On the night of June 4, a bull buffet smoker will be given. On June 5, delegates in a body will enjoy the performance at the Forsyth theater and on the afternoon of June 6 an old fashioned barbecue will be served at the plant of the Atlanta Manufacturing and Supply company, at East Point. During the day visiting ladies will be treated to visits about town and to the large department stores.

The local committee has announced that the Southeastern Passenger association will make special rates on railroads entering Atlanta during the days of the convention.

F. C. Myers, of Atlanta, secretary of the association, issued the full program of the convention, which is replete with speeches and talks on subjects dealing with the mill craft. In a letter to the mill men Secretary Myers has assured the members of the association that the convention is to be a great success from start to finish and the largest ever conducted by the association.

HERE IS THE PROGRAM.

The program in full follows:

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 4.

9:30 a. m.—Convention called to order by President J. T. Holmes.

Invocation.

Address of welcome—Fred Houser, Atlanta.

Response to address of welcome—J. T. Holmes, South Carolina.

Afternoon session called to order at 1:30 p. m.

Miscellaneous—Reports of committees.

Election of officers.

Selection of meeting place for 1914.

Adjournment of convention.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DEPARTMENT

By Philip T. Samuel

The international topic for Christian Endeavor societies today is the sixth in the series for consecration meetings on the "Ideal Christian. His Bible Study." The lesson is found in Deut. 9:1-6.

The ideal Christian knows the Scriptures, for in them he finds the means to overcome temptation, a guide to his conduct and to his relations with his fellowmen, and the hope of eternal life. Systematic Bible study has too often been neglected by the churches, its importance in the development of youth and in maintaining civic righteousness not being stressed. A prominent physician of Atlanta calls attention to the fact that the service of the church has three phases, each closely related and interdependent. The church at worship, on the Sabbath; the church at prayer, in the midweek prayer meeting, and the church at Bible study, in the Sunday school. By their consecration to the work of the Sabbath school Endeavorers can do much to emphasize the necessity of careful Bible study in the development of ideal Christians.

An interesting service was held under the direction of the Atlanta Christian Endeavor union, at the Confederate Soldiers' home last Tuesday evening. In the absence of Dr. A. R. Holderby, who usually conducts these monthly meetings, the service was led by Mr. G. W. Kenley, of the North Avenue Presbyterian society. The topic selected was "Peace," and in a stirring talk the leader referred to the peace that followed the War in which the veterans fought for principles dear to them and to the peace found by those who follow the banner of the Cross. Besides the North Avenue Presbyterian society, the Westminster Presbyterian and Central Congregational societies were represented.

The regular monthly business meeting of the North Avenue Presbyterian society was held Friday evening in the church house. Important business was acted upon and plans were made for further work. A gratifying increase in the pennant under the efficiency campaign was noted.

The monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Central Congregational society will be held at 6 o'clock this evening at the usual place. The regular business meeting will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

The extension committee of the Central Congregational society is at Liberty chapel, near Convers, Ga., today, for a Christian Endeavor society there. The purpose of this committee is to strengthen the weaker churches of the denomination, especially in the rural districts, by establishing Sunday schools and Endeavor societies. The members of the committee visit the churches, explain the work and perfect organizations.

Mr. L. E. Brubaker, of Sheffield, Ala., recently elected president of the Alabama Christian Endeavor union, was in Atlanta last week and conferred with prominent leaders of the work in Georgia relative to closer relations between the two state associations. Endeavorers of Georgia have too long felt themselves isolated from the rest of the Christian Endeavor world, and the announcement of a visit from such a prominent worker as Mr. Brubaker should make us realize that others know and appreciate our efforts better, perhaps, than we do.

Another prominent visitor to Atlanta recently was Mr. Leroy Holt, president of the Birmingham (Ala.) Christian Endeavor union. Mr. Holt had a conference with Mr. J. R. Regnas, president of the Atlanta union, at which plans were discussed for greater unity between the two unions and for definite reforms to be carried out. These plans will be presented to the executive committee of the unions for consideration and ratification, and announcement of same will be made in due time. We are glad to welcome Mr. Holt to our councils, and feel that Birmingham is to be congratulated on having at the head of its Christian Endeavor union a man of such consecrated enthusiasm.

Efforts are being made to insure a large and representative delegation from Georgia to the International Christian Endeavor Convention at Los Angeles in July. Mr. E. J. Walker, of Atlanta, southeastern passenger agent of the N. C. & St. L. railway, is co-operating with the state officers in advertising the trip. Any one interested in attending the convention should communicate as soon as possible with R. W. Crenshaw, state president, Equitable building, Atlanta.

Tribute to Mrs. W. T. B. Wilson

In the recent death of Mrs. W. T. B. Wilson, the modest, gentle mother of a lovely group of devoted children, hundreds of friends and relatives have lost a most cherished friend and loved one and all have bowed in sorrow.

Having known and loved her for many years, I feel it a very keen privilege to be permitted to write of her brilliant worth.

My memory has gone back through the years to the days when I first knew her in the old home in Gainesville, when in her beautiful young motherhood she held in her arms her first born son (now W. T. Wilson, of Atlanta) and looked down into his infant face with all an adoring mother's love.

Those golden days of friendship and fellowship will ever be to me a priceless memory.

The old home in Gainesville has long since passed into other hands, the dear old father (Uncle Tom Wilson) has gone away to the house of many mansions, the friends of those old days are scattered far and wide, and it is with deep emotion I think of the many sad changes.

Early in their married life Major and Mrs. Wilson came to Atlanta to found a new home. Here they have reared three daughters and two sons. She dedicated them all to God even before she ever saw them, and taught them the meaning of that dedication at the altar of her knee. Now since she has gone home to be with God her life will be the best commentary on the Book her children will ever know.

Her pathway to glory was full of intense suffering during her last days on earth, but the crown she has won by such a struggle and is now casting joyfully at the feet of her Saviour, must be brighter than the stars.

How simple her life, yet how grand. Dear Father, we thank thee for that wonderful life.

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep.
From which none ever wakes to weep."

A FRIEND.

Dr. Macon to Speak

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ANNISTON, Ala., May 31.—Dr. George Macon, a member of the faculty of Howard college, will be the orator at the commencement exercises of the Calhoun county high school at Oxford.

TIME STREAKED AND HISTORIC BEAUVOIR STANDS AS A MONUMENT TO DAVIS

BEAUVOIR, Miss., May 24.—Time-streaked, though well-preserved and having a grandeur that the years failed to obliterate, stands historic Beauvoir, at one time the home of Jefferson Davis, who was then ex-president of the Confederacy. In solemn dignity, among majestic live oaks, pines and other trees near where the land and water meet in southern Mississippi, between Biloxi and Gulfport and about seventy-five miles from New Orleans, is the mansion of ante-bellum fame, and of associations with a man who was one of the greatest factors of the most stirring times in the history of the United States, a hero and martyr of the fiercest conflicts of carnage and horror the world has known.

HOME OF DAVIS.

Often visited by classical travelers, Beauvoir obtains a fame which is continually spreading to all parts of the world. To Jefferson Davis, his life and career, historians have devoted more than one chapter. Records show how he distinguished himself in the Mexican and Civil wars, in the senate, as secretary of war, and so on. But Beauvoir holds its own story, and the imaginative person while contemplating the old pile, can easily conjure up the tramping of horses and men, the roar of guns.

It was not until 1879 that Davis lived on the Beauvoir plantation, when it was bequeathed to him by Mrs. Dorsey, an enthusiastic southern woman. The house on the place, at the time occupied by Mr. Davis and his family, was built in 1854 by James Brown, a Mississippi planter, who owned the land at the time, and from whom Mrs. Dorsey subsequently bought it.

When Mr. Davis went to live on the place it was not until years of tribulations and soul-stirring difficulties to the immortal hero, following the Civil war—after his capture, on May 10, 1865, and subsequent imprisonment in fortress Monroe; his indictment for treason in the federal court at Norfolk, Va.; the nolle prosequi of the case against him; his trip to England and France, and his presidency of a life insurance company of Memphis. At Beauvoir he lived quietly, never murmuring over his inexpressible troubles, nor even about his exception, in 1876, from a bill removing political disabilities on those who participated in the Confederate cause, nor in connection with his exception, in 1879, from a bill providing for those who fought in the war with Mexico.

The house at Beauvoir, a large structure with living apartments, or story, on high pillars and an inclosure on the ground floor making it appear as a two-story building, is practically in the same condition as that in which Mr. Davis left it. The single-story cottages, one on each side of the Beauvoir yard, slightly to the front, are still there, and also in good condition.

CHANGES ARE MADE.

Some changes have taken place on Beauvoir, however, owing to its transformation into a home for Confederate veterans. There is an average of nearly 200 old soldiers as inmates of the institution. Appropriations have been made by the state of Mississippi for the maintenance of the soldiers' home and dormitories have been erected on the grounds. The dining room for veterans is on the lower or ground floor of the Beauvoir house.

The place is an ideal one as an old soldiers' home, where the veterans, tottering with age, spend their last days in precincts formerly the home of their courageous leader. One by one the old soldiers are dying. To the rear is a burying ground in which the bodies of veterans unclaimed by relatives or friends, or for which no other provision has been made, are laid away. As yet there is no appropriation from the state for the placing of a marble slab at each grave in the cemetery, but there is a plan to erect a large memorial in the grave yard, whereon the names of those buried therein may be chiseled.

The mansion has a large hall, also a broad veranda, porches being in front as well as on either side of the house. From the spacious stairway leading from the veranda is a wide walk way, a path between the house and the front gate. Immediately in front of the Beauvoir yard is a trolley line, which, running from Pass Christian to Biloxi and connecting with Gulfport and other points, affords easy access to the place, in addition to approaches presented by the railway to the rear and by the Mississippi Sound and Gulf of Mexico to the southward. The beach, blissful and serene, is just beyond the track of the trolley line.

DREAMY AND MELANCHOLY.

Dreamy and melancholy is Beauvoir, a scene worthy of celebration in art. View it from the beach, the yard, or stand on the veranda and look about, and you cannot help being singularly impressed by the picture of it all. Gloomily hangs the moss from the oaks in the yard. On the blue water to the southward may be frequently seen both sailing and steam craft.

It is quite interesting to look at the rocking chair used by Mr. Davis, which is still in the house. In that chair he meditated for hours both in his room and on the veranda. The sofas and ottomans which were in the hall when the Davis family occupied the house are yet in their wonted place. On the walls of the parlor are hung paintings of highly artistic character. High are the ceilings, and decorated with fresco work of interesting designs.

In the small cottage on the east side of the yard Mr. Davis did much of his reading and writing; in fact, the main room of that building was his study. There the great statesman and soldier wrote "The Rise and Fall of the Confederacy," a voluminous book of 1,500 pages of printed matter. That work was published in 1881. He was then seventy-three years old.

After moving to Beauvoir, Mr. Davis devoted himself almost exclusively to literary work. It was the winter of his life. There he was sought by leading characters of the world, and it has been stated that during that time his estimates of public men showed the best of judgment.

Jefferson Davis did not die at Beauvoir, his death having occurred in New Orleans, shortly after midnight on December 6, 1889, at the residence of one of his life-long friends, J. U. Payne, following four weeks' sickness resultant upon cold caught while traveling on a river steamboat. So serious was his illness that his physicians would not let him return to his Mississippi home.

Beauvoir was a fit place for Jefferson Davis, where, in retirement, far from the madding crowd, he must have contemplated over his bitter disappointments, an old man with blasted hopes, yet, withal, a hero and a philosopher.

Physical Regeneration For Your Town

DID you ever think that city officials can materially lower the death-rate of their towns if they would do it?

¶ Serious thought, that.

¶ We want to talk to the officials of towns or cities that need better sanitation.

¶ So long as disease has a wide-open chance at your town, neither you nor your neighbor is safe. And if you can prevent it, you are criminally negligent not to try.

¶ The sewerage system of your town--is it correct? How about it?

¶ Is the water supply pure? How about the chances for a summer's run of fever that may sweep right through your population?

¶ Somebody says it is wiser to spend time arousing town officials to do their duty than to spend it comforting the bereaved mothers whose little children are taken from them because of insanitary conditions in the town.

¶ We think so, too. That's why we are talking to you after this fashion.

¶ Our specialty is the designing and installing of correct systems of sanitation for towns and cities.

¶ We also feature lighting and paving plans.

¶ We do the whole thing, planning, estimating, financing, constructing, operating. That is, if you want all that done. Or we do any part of the work.

¶ We are Municipal Engineers with a record of more than 400 contracts carried out successfully and without a break.

¶ We want you to write to us and let us show you how it will pay your town to put in modern improvements. Write us your needs.

FLOOD OF FOREIGN GOLD POURING INTO AMERICA

President Wilson Highly Elated Over Wonderful Increase in Export Trade

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31.—President Wilson and the leaders of the Democratic party are filled with amazement and gratification today over the stupendous growth of the export business of the United States. Secretary of Commerce Redfield has just completed the figures for the first ten months of the present fiscal year, and the totals show such an unprecedented case that the president and his immediate political advisers this morning were laughing aloud at the Republican predictions of business stagnation as a result of the Democratic tariff revision.

No other country in the world has had such a development of its export trade in the past ten months. No country in the past has approached such a development. The totals gathered by Secretary Redfield prove in particular that the American manufacturer is fast dominating the trade of the world in many lines of production. The effect upon the prosperity of the United Staes, with such an unprecedented amount of foreign money pouring into this country, is alleged to be sufficient to anticipate any temporary faltering in some directions on account of the readjustment of the tariff.

HOW EXPORTS HAVE GROWN.

From July 1, 1912, to May 1, 1913, the period covered by Secretary Redfield's compilation, the total United States exports increased in value over the like period of the preceding year by almost a quarter of a billion dollars. The exports for the ten-month period of 1913 amounted to $2,107,873,911, and for the same period of the fiscal year of 1912 they were $1,890,708,608. Thus, in ten months, the United States advanced its possession of foreign money or credit abroad by $217,165,302.

The increase in exports of manufacturers reached a value of $154,654,415, or an average increase in the exports of manufactures of $15,000,000 a month.

DRENCHED IN FOREIGN GOLD.

During the ten months the total export trade exceeded the total imports by $559,834,446. If business continues at the same rate for May and June, this will leave a grand balance in favor of the United States of about $670,000,000. In short, the United States is being drenched in foreign gold, a condition which will make a panic impossible in the view of the administration, especially if an adequate currency reform law can be passed within a reasonable time.

Secretary Redfield estimates that the end of the fiscal year will show that the exports of American manufacturers now exceed in value the total exports of the country ten years ago, before the sale abroad of American foodstuffs began to decline. American manufactures are now being sold in foreign countries at the rate of $5,000,000 a day, and it will not be long, if this rate of increase continues, until the United Staes will be the leading exporter of manufactures of the entire world.

INCREASE IN MANY LINES.

The increase in the exports of manufactured goods cover many lines. The increase in the export of automobiles for the ten months reached $4,-000,000; cotton goods, $10,000,000; electrical machinery, $5,000,000; vegetable fibers, $1,00,000; cement, $2,000,000; chemicals, $2,000,000; United States dollar coin, $30,000,000; canned goods, $5,000,000; manufactures of furs, $2,-000,000; glass, $1,000,000; rubber, $1,-000,000; enamel ware, $1,000,000; firearms, $1,000,000; cash registers, $1,000,-000; engines, $2,000,000; locomotives, $3,000,000; metal working machinery, $2,000,000; milling machinery, $2,000,-000; sewing machines, $2,000,000, sugar mill machinery, $1,000,000; typewriters, $1,000,000; all other kinds of machinery, over $20,000,000; steel rails, $2,000,000; steel plate, $2,000,000; structural steel, $3,000,000; leather manufactures, $5,-000,000; paints, $1,000,000; paper, $2,-000,000; paraffin, $2,000,000; silk manufactures, $5,000,000; manufactures of wood, $7,000,000; manufactures of wool, $1,500,000.

Other lines of manufacture make up the grand total. The administration feels it could not have found a better time for tariff revision, and that now, at last, the country will discover the fallacy of the charge that previous Democratic tariff revisions have caused hard times in the United Staes.

Home-Made Products Boomed by Redfield

PITTSFIELD, Mass., May 31.—Secretary Redfield, of the department of commerce, speaking at a banquet here tonight, tendered by the Democratic city commission, denied the contention that American manufacturers could not compete successfully abroad and declared that, on the other hand, they were doing so more and more successfully.

He pointed to a continuous growth in the business of Americain manufacturers abroad, beginning with a total of $443,000,000 in 1892, to an estimated total or $1,500,000,000 in 1893. He predicted a still greater growth with the elimination of what he curmed "unsystematized management."

A new freedom for American industries, he said, was the affirmative test to which the Democratic party had set its hand.

"It stands for industrial education and federal aid to it," he said. "It stands for the reduction of taxes, not only upon food but the means of earning; that is to say, upon buildings, upon machinery and upon materials, which together compose the fundamentals of our industrial life. It does not stand for a reduction of wages, because it knows that American economic history has taught as perhaps its greatest lesson that the highly paid workman, well equipped, well treated and well fed, is the cheapest producer in the world, else, with our handicaps, we should not be selling $1,500,000,000 abroad now."

EFFICIENT INDUSTRIES.

"We have industries that are efficient, as, for example, steel, though in this industry there are wide variations in efficiency. In other industries we have individual factories that are highly efficient while others are less so. You will find, for example, in various lines of machinery one factory selling its goods all over the world and another selling none outside the United states, and variations of efficiency exist from 20 per cent of a good standard up to 70 per cent and even higher. Our factories are very much unlike and a good many of them have gotten along somehow at a rather high cost to the public in the price of the goods they make because being free from foreign comptition they have not had to be efficient.

"But these are not the only handicaps that have troubled our industries. We have almost wholly lacked industrial education and we still lack it sadly. We spend a lot of money turning boys and girls out into the world quite untrained to do anything in particular. Yet, does not the very fact of the wonders that have been worked despite such obstruction, point forward to the time, when wonders yet undreamed shall come to pass once these obstructions are removed?

"If for a condition in which most of our industrial plants come under the head of what is called 'unsystematized management' we substitute another, where merely in order to exist plants must become systematic in their methods; if for the ignorance as to cost and the carelessness as to waste which still prevails too much care in both directions, if for the taxes which have made the cost of machinery and buildings and materials excessive we may substitute a system which shall reduce these costs, if for the general ignorance of our young working people of any definite occupation we may substitute the trained hand and instructed mind of intelligent young men and women; it, I say, we may do all these things, why may not our commercial position in the world, already mighty, become the mightiest?

GROCERS AND BUTCHERS WILL GIVE MAMMOTH PARADE NEXT WEDNESDAY TO CELEBRATE WEDNESDAY CLOSING

Above are some of the men who have contributed to the success of the movement for the grocers and butchers of the city to close on Wednesday afternoon during the months of June, July and August. They are as follows: No. 1, O. T. Camp, president of Retail Grocrs and Butchers' association; No. 2, J. P. Eve, a member of the holiday committee of the association; No. 3, E. L. Adams, the well-known wholesale grocer; No. 4, H. L. Simmons, president of the City Salesmen's association; No. 5, F. E. Kamper, chairman of the arrangements committee for the parade; No. 6, Harry L. Schlesinger, who conceived the Wednesday closing idea.

The grocers and butchers of Atlanta have decided to close their stores on Wednesday afternoon during the months of June, July and August, and in celebration of the first of these half-holidays, which will be next Wednesday, they will give a mammoth parade in the afternoon through the streets of the city.

Ninety per cent of the grocers and butchers have signed petitions agreeing to close. Hence the closing will affect 90 per cent of the people of Atlanta. The parade has a double purpose in its day when everybody must buy provisions. So the grocers and butchers decided to split the time between Sundays and close in the middle of the week.

HISTORY OF MOVEMENT.

The closing movement goes back to a luncheon given at the Piedmont hotel last August by Harry L. Schlesinger. The holiday committee of the grocers and butchers' association were his guests, they being as follows: O. T. Camp, W. A. Byers, F. E. Kamper, J. P. Eve, John R. Morris, J. G. Rainey and R. H. Comer.

After a delightful repast, Mr. Schlesinger stated the object of the meeting.

"Boys, why can't we close one afternoon each week during the months of June, July and August?" said he.

He pointed out that it was only a few years since one dry goods merchant on Whitehall street began by closing on Saturday afternoon, and that now practically all the merchants had followed his lead; that only a few years ago the movement was started among the wholesale jobbers, commission merchants, packing houses and other large corporations dealing in provisions, and now all of them gave their employes a regular half-holiday each week.

The holiday committee received Mr. Schlesinger's idea with enthusiasm and got to work at once. They wrote petitions and called on their friends, the city salesmen, to circulate the petitions among the grocers and butchers, which the salesmen did gladly, covering the entire city and spreading the holiday committee's enthusiasm.

Today the movement is finished, so far as the preliminaries are concerned. The grocers and butchers held a smoker last Tuesday night in Taft hall and went over the plans for the parade. Everything is now in readiness.

THREE-MILE LONG PARADE.

The parade next Wednesday will be three miles in length, the longest ever held in Atlanta, and will be the most unique the city has ever seen.

It will form at the state capitol and will start at 2 o'clock, the route being as follows: Down Washington street to East Fair street; down East Fair street to Brotherton street; down Brotherton street to Whitehall street; up Whitehall and Peachtree streets to North avenue to West Peachtree street; back West Peachtree street to Five Points.

A battalion of mounted police will ride ahead of the parade. At the head of the parade will ride Harry L. Schlesinger and Nym McCullough, the grand marshals, flanked by their aides. After them will be the drum corps band of Mariat college, in a mammoth automobile.

Then will come the grocers' and butchers' delivery wagons, something over 1,000 of them. Practically every delivery wagon in the city will be in the parade. They will be decorated in bunting, advertisements, souvenirs and cards. The store employes will ride in the wagons, throwing out confetti along the way and toward the rear of this section of the parade will be a band composed of the Greater Atlanta drum corps, led by Major Albert Rozetta.

Following these wagons will come the delivery wagons of the local and western packing houses, followed by the wagons of the commission merchants, the city salesmen and their wagons, the wagons of the jobbers, and after these will come four mammoth trucks with bands. These in turn will be followed by the wagons of the bakeries, cracker manufacturers, pickle manufacturers, etc.

Then will come the sixty-five automobile trucks and wagons of the Atlantic Ice and Coal corporation, with their leaders on horseback, and the rear of the parade will be brought up by other large corporations with their immense delivery forces.

In all, there will be four bands in the parade. The members of the holiday committee, wearing red sashes drawn from shoulder to waist, will act as aides, keeping the parade in order.

WIDESPREAD ENTHUSIASM.

Enthusiasm for the Wednesday half-holiday has gone beyond Atlanta's bounds and the merchants of East Point, becoming infected with the fever, have decided to join raking a success of the gala occasion. Even the dry goods merchants are talking of joining the movement and making Wednesday the universal closing day.

After the parade the grocers and butchers, together with the other merchants in the parade, and the small army of employes, will make merry downtown. There will be special features for their benefit at the moving picture theaters and a number of other amusements arranged for the day.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP SLOGAN IN COLUMBUS

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 31.—Municipal ownership is the slogan in Columbus just at this time, and unusual interest centers in a movement with this end in view.

A mass meeting was held Friday evening when an organization was formally perfected and committees named to get busy on the movement. The first work of the organization, it was stated, is to promote a bond issue of some $600,000 with which to build and equip a municipal waterworks plant in the city.

Committees were named and actual work on this movement is to commence at once. At the monthly session of the city council, scheduled for next Wednesday afternoon, a resolution is to be considered, with a view of submitting to the qualified voters of Columbus the question of issuing bonds in the sum of some $600,000 to build a water plant, and it is expected that a bond election will be called at this time.

At the present time, the city is being furnished water by a private corporation, a portion of the supply coming from the river and the balance from springs in Alabama.

COLUMBUS DENTISTS TO ENTERTAIN ASSOCIATES

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 31.—Columbus dentists are making extensive plans for the entertainment of the Georgia Dental association, scheduled to meet here June 12-14. An excellent program has been arranged and everything, with few exceptions, provided for the entertainment of the visitors, some 200 delegates being expected.

Dr. A. P. Gordy and Dr. A. Burghard are taking the initiative in the convention plans.

CAPT. THOMAS SCREVEN REPORTED NEAR DEATH

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 31.—Captain Thomas F. Screven, sheriff of Chatham county, is dying at his home here, according to physicians, who this afternoon said that he may not live through the day.

Captain Screven comes of a prominent Georgia family and is well known throughout the state.

SAVANNAHIAN DROWNS AT WILMINGTON BEACH

WILMINGTON, N. C., May 31.—Battling against a heavy sea in the heroic rescue of a surf bathing companion, Pharmacist Knoug, of the United States marine hospital; J. D. Artley, thirty-two years old, recently of Savannah, Ga., now employed in the general offices of the Atlantic Coast Line here, disappeared in the surf opposite a hotel at Wrightsville Beach upon the opening of the season there today and was drowned just after he had given over his companion to the hotel life saver, who had gone to the assistance of both. Knouz was saved. Arley's body was recovered and physicians attending decided heart failure caused his drowning.

ATLANTA'S OLD GUARD ON WAY HOME AGAIN

Most Cordial Receptions Accorded Southerners on Their Second "Peace Mission"

BY L. J. HARRIS, JR.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

PHILADELPHIA, May 31.—The second peace mission of the Old Guard of Atlanta was brought to a close last evening when they were escorted to the train which took them to the Fall River boat en route to New York, thence to Savannah, where they will entrain for Atlanta. The Old Guard stay in Boston and the cordial greetings, receptions and parade will linger long in the hearts of those who were fortunate in being on this trip.

Thursday morning the guard had a rare treat in witnessing the 3,000 high school cadets as they paraded the streets attired in their attractive uniforms. At noon the Old Guard were taken for a sixty-mile auto ride over the Blue Ribbon roads of Massachusetts. This ride took in Lexington, Waltham, Cambridge, Concord and many other historic points.

On the return trip they stopped at the beautiful and sumptuous estate of Cal Benton, himself a past commander of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery. Reaching Boston after this delightful drive, the command were ordered to stop at the celebrated Algonquin club, where they prepared prior to going to the armory to join with the Ancient and Honorables at a dinner in honor of the Old Guard. Friday morning at 8:30 they were escorted by the Second Coast artillery to the headquarters of G. A. R. camp No. 113. After parading the principal streets of Boston, the Old Guard marched on Boston common, where each member of the company placed his individual wreath of roses upon the monument erected to the memory of the northern soldiers who lost their lives in the struggle between the states. This act was referred to time and again at Fremont temple, where the memorial exercises were held, not only by the orator of the day, but by every speaker. The press also made special note of it.

The beautiful uniform of the Old Guard and the splendid appearance the Atlantians made was the talk on every hand and manifested throughout the entire line of march by the reception given them as they marched through Boston to the strains of "Dixie."

Following the memorial exercises there was a dinner in honor of the Old Guard.

Every member was escorted to the table by a member of Edwin Kinsley camp No. 113.

The Old Guard will be the guests of the Georgia Huzzars while in Savannah next Thursday. They will reach Atlanta Wednesday morning, after an absence of some two weeks.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 31.—Mrs. T. J. Edwards, the mother of Congressman Charles G. Edwards, died this morning at her home in Daisy, Tatnall county.

MORTON M. STOUT OPENS TAILORING STORE HERE

Big Baltimore Clothing Establishment Adds Atlanta to His Chain of Stores

The announcement that Morton M. Stout had opened a tailoring store in Atlanta has created considerable interest, especially among people who like to wear good clothes at moderate prices.

Morton M. Stout is one of the best known clothing men in America. He operates a chain of fourteen stores throughout the country. His name has become synonymous with quality and low prices.

Mr. Stout's Atlanta store, one of the most attractive of the kind in Atlanta, is located at 122 Peachtree.

Several weeks ago Mr. Stout visited Atlanta, while on a pleasure tour of the south. He recognized Atlanta as the south's most progressive city and a great commercial center, and made up his mind to establish a branch store here. He went in person to select a location. He found 122 Peachtree available. He visited a real estate office, asked the price and accepted the terms of a long lease on the store within five minutes after asking the price.

W. C. Lindwall came to Atlanta to assist C. A. Hammond, who will manage the place, in arranging for the opening day, which was Friday.

The store was thoroughly overhauled and the front rearranged to comply in detail with all other Stout stores. It has an unusually attractive appearance and has elicited much favorable comment from the passing crowds.

Mr. Hammond announces that he is elated over the way business has started off in Atlanta and is confident of a liberal patronage on the part of the local people as soon as they are better acquainted with the Stout store. (Advt.)

Geographically

Manchester—the junction of the three lines of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad system—occupies a commanding position.

Practically equi-distant from Birmingham, the iron and coal center; Brunswick, the shipping port of the Atlantic seaboard; and Atlanta, the trade center of the east and middle west. Manchester is the logical point of distribution. It is practically the same distance from Macon, LaGrange and Columbus, which gives it an advantage of being in close touch with these centers without being sufficiently close to cause municipal competition.

To the natural advantages of topography and climate; the progressive advantage of railroad construction, there have been added man-made opportunities which are at your disposal.

GRAND JURY MEETING REMAINS A MYSTERY

Foreman Will Not Say Whether Beavers-Felder Controversy Will Be Considered

There is still much speculation over the probable action of the Fulton county grand jury on the Felder-Beavers-Lanford controversy, and it is not yet known whether or not the grand jury will make an investigation.

Foreman L. H. Beck, who called a meeting for next Tuesday morning, has refused to commit himself on the matter, although repeatedly asked whether or not the Felder-Beavers controvrsy would be investigated.

The present grand jury has little more than a month to serve, and none of the routine investigating committees have been appointed, and this is one of the matters which will come before the body next Tuesday.

Chief of Police Beavers, who has requested a grand jury investigation, has not seen or communicated with Foreman Beck since the controversy commenced, according to the latter.

Chief Beavers, however, is expected to go thoroughly into the case with Solicitor Dorsey on Monday, and then he will repeat his request for a grand jury probe of the charges against himself, his department and the charges against Colonel Thomas B. Felder.

Solicitor Dorsey states that he does not know the object of the special meeting called by Mr. Beck.

Should the grand jury take up the Felder-Beavers matter, it is very probable that no bill against any individual will be presented for consideration, but that the grand jury will simply have an exhaustive hearing, summoning many witnesses, and that then it will embody its finding in the usual report to the court.

WILSON WILL AID STATE COMMITTEE IN PROBING LOBBY

work to influence action on the tariff bill forms the basis for the investigation, questions prepared tonight by the committee to be asked of each member of the senate are such as to carry the investigation far outside of tariff matters.

SENATORS UNDER OATH.

Each senator will be required to testify under oath whether he has any interest in any matter affected by any bill now before congress, or that has been before the senate during his term; and whether or not he has ever tried to use influence any other senator to vote for a measure in which he was interested. Subcommittee members declined to express the opinion tonight that the questions would require a statement by each senator as to any business interests he may have that would be affected by the tariff, currency or any other legislation.

Many members of the senate are openly associated with manufacturing, trading, live stock, field or farming corporations. Interrogated under the questions of the committee they probably will be required to give any such connections they have in voting on bills affect their business in any way. Senators Overman, Reed, Walsh, Cummins and Nelson are expected early today by the judiciary committee to conduct the investigation. This subcommittee has decided to summon all members of the senate, beginning with the committee and calling four senators at a time. Each will be put under oath and required to answer eleven formal questions and further questions that members may ask.

QUESTIONS ASKED.

The first two questions submitted are as follows:

"Please state whether or not you are financially interested in the production, manufacture or sale of any article mentioned in the tariff bill or any other bill now pending before congress, with which has been considered during your term as senator; if so, state fully the nature and extent of such interest and whether you ever sought to influence any other senator as to the duties upon such articles."

"Please state whether you represent or are connected professionally or otherwise, directly or indirectly, with any person, firm or corporation or association organization which is engaged in the manufacture, production or sale of any article named in the tariff bill now pending in congress, if so, state whether you ever sought to influence any other senator as to the duties upon such articles?"

NOTED WITNESS.

The committee will then attempt by further questions to develop fully the facts as to the statement that a great and powerful lobby is working to secure special tariff concessions. The course to be followed in securing President Wilson's testimony or any statements he may have to make has not yet been determined upon.

PUBLIC'S AID ASKED.

Senator Overman tonight issued an appeal for public aid in the hearings.

"We invite the public to give us any information they may have in regard to a lobby," he said. "The committee wants to go into this matter as thoroughly as it can; if there has been any lobbying done in Washington in behalf of any legislation the committee wants to get the facts fully. We will not consider anonymous communications."

The committee will call senators "in blocks of four," Senators Ashurst, Bacon, Bankhead and Borah appearing at 11 o'clock today. Senators Bradley, Brady, Brandegee and Bristow at 12 o'clock, and the balance of the seats in relays of four each hour, sitting until 10 o'clock each night, with noon and night recesses, the senators hope at this rate to expedite the investigation.

QUESTIONS FOR SENATORS.

Each member of the senate in addition to the questions before mentioned in regard to legislation, will be asked to give the following:

The names of any persons who have approached him for the purpose of influencing any legislation "especially the tariff bill."

The particular item of the tariff bill such persons were interested in.

A description of the interviews he has had.

A statement of whether any person directly or indirectly attempted in any manner improperly to influence him or his action upon any legislation pending in congress, especially tariff legislation.

Any information as to the use of money or any other improper means or methods," to influence action on legislation.

Any knowledge of the use of money to support a lobby, with a definition of "lobby" or "lobbying."

Any knowledge of the use of money for advertising or literature "intended to mislead or otherwise influence public opinion."

A statement of whether he knows of any lobby or lobbyist maintained in Washington or elsewhere to influence any legislation now pending before congress?

Any other information on the subject.

CONLEY'S STATEMENT ANALYZED FROM TWO DIFFERENT ANGLES

Conley's Story Is Unreasonable from This Viewpoint

tailed statement of Frank at the inquest, when for three hours he was put through a rapid fire cross-examination by the coroner, who was prompted by the solicitor general. Without hesitation, and without once entangling himself, it is claimed, Frank answered every question concerning even the most minute incidents in which he figured on Saturday, April 26, the day of the murder.

And it is pointed out that the other witnesses corroborated every material statement he made.

Taking up the negro's affidavit of confession, those who hold to the theory that he committed the murder reason as follows:

Conley's statement that on Friday afternoon Frank told him to meet him Saturday morning about 10 o'clock at the corner of Forsyth and Nelson streets, as he wanted him to do some work, is not to be believed, because if Frank had wanted the negro for any purpose he would have told him to report at the factory.

That it is impossible to assume that Frank premeditated the murder, because he is not that kind of a man, and even if he was, he had no way of knowing that the little Phagan girl would show up at the factory Saturday.

That had he known the girl would come, and had he planned to murder her and employ the negro's services in hiding the body, he would not have had Conley meet him at a prominent street corner, a half block from the general offices of the pencil factory.

In Hiding All Morning.

That as a matter of fact Conley never met Frank on the streets at all, but was in hiding practically all the morning in a pile of boxes beside the outside stairway, where he could see everything that occurred in the front part of the factory on the lower floor without being seen himself.

Conley admits he was drinking that Saturday morning and admits he was in the basket of boxes, but says he did not come to the factory until between 10:30 and 11 o'clock, following Frank from Nelson and Forsyth streets at his (Frank's) suggestion.

Frank did not leave the factory to go to Nelson street until about 10 o'clock. Miss Mattie Smith, an employe who came for her money Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, says she saw a negro sitting on the box at the front of the factory. She says it was either Conley or Gordon Bailey, both negro boy employees of the factory. She did not notice which.

Bailey's movements have been accounted for, and he was not at the factory that Saturday morning. When Conley saw Miss Smith enter through the closed front doors he followed her in and secreted himself in the pile of boxes. He knew some of the employes would be coming for their money and that he might have intended to rob some of them. He was looking for an opportunity.

Left Factory at 9:30.

Miss Smith, according to her own statement and those of several persons who were at the factory, declare she arrived about 9 o'clock, and she left about 9:20, and that N. V. Darley, the manager, walked down the steps to the front door with her.

In his confession Conley says he saw Miss Smith and Darley come down and to the detectives he described the kind of dress the young woman wore. This was at 9:20 before Frank ever went over to Nelson street.

About fifteen or twenty minutes after Miss Smith's departure Superintendent Line, of Montague Bros., and Wade Coleman, an inspector at the pencil factory, left the pencil factory. Conley says he saw them, yet this happened before Frank went to Nelson street.

A few minutes before 10 Frank, accompanied by Darley, left the factory, walked to the corner of Forsyth and Hunter streets, where they drank a soda water and separated, Frank going to Nelson street and Darley to the Montgomery moving picture theater on Peachtree street.

Frank says he arrived at Montag Bros. on Nelson street a few minutes after 10 o'clock, and his statement is corroborated by a half dozen or more persons. Darley says he walked to the moving picture theater, going by way of Hunter to Broad, Broad to Walton, then along Viaduct place to Whitehall, and thence to the theater on Peachtree. He says he arrived there three or four minutes before the theater opened and that it was scheduled to open at 10 o'clock.

Conley says he saw Darley leave and that he went away by himself. The latter states that he never returned to the factory, after he went out with Frank.

Some time between 10:30 and 11 o'clock E. F. Holloway, the factory timekeeper, talked in the entrance of the factory with Lee Hall, a negro driver for the Pittsburg Plate Glass company who had brought a load of boxes. Conley says he saw the two men talking. This was while Frank was on Nelson street.

Conley tells of other persons who came in and went out again after Lane hour when Frank returned to the factory which was a few minutes after 11 o'clock, he having hurried back because of a telephone call from Miss Hall, the stenographer, who was helping him that morning.

The negro says he did not see Mary Phagan enter the factory at 12:10 o'clock, that he had drunk a half pint of whisker and several beers and dozed some while hidden behind the boxes. However, he recalls having seen L. A. Quinn come in, and according to the testimony at the inquest Quinn arrived at the factory about 12:15 or 12:20, within five or ten minutes after the girl.

What Mr. Frank Said.

Quinn left about 12:25. In Frank's statement at the inquest, he said he left the factory to go to lunch about 1 o'clock; that just before leaving he walked upstairs to the fourth floor where Harry White and Arthur Denham, two machinists, were working and where Mrs. White was talking with her husband. He said he announced to them that he was going out and would lock the front doors, and that if any of them cared to get out before he returned from lunch they had better go then. Mrs. White left and Frank followed her out, locking the doors. White and Denham continued at work on the fourth floor.

Frank testified that after leaving the factory he caught a Washington street car; that he arrived at his home, 68 East Georgia avenue, about 1:20 and found his wife and Mrs. Selig his mother-in-law, dressed and ready to go to the grand opera at matinee, which opened promptly at 2 o'clock; that he told them goodbye, ate lunch with Emile Selig, his father-in-law, and lay down for a few minutes; that he left home about 2 o'clock to go back to the factory; that he walked to Glenn street where he boarded a Washington street car; that on the way he met his aunt and his cousin from Athens; that after getting on the car he saw J. C. Loeb and chatted with him until the car reached the corner of Hunter and Washington streets, where it was halted by the Memorial day parade; that he left the car there and walked west on Hunter to Whitehall, stopping at the corner of Hunter and Whitehall a moment to view the parade, then proceeding north along Whitehall; that in front of M. Rich & Bros.' store he met Miss Rebecca Carson, a forelady at the factory, to whom he spoke; that he got through the parade at the corner of Whitehall and Alabama and went into Jacobs' pharmacy, where he purchased some cigars after which he proceeded along Alabama to Forsyth street and down Forsyth to the factory, arriving about 3 o'clock; that he went into the office on the second floor, removed his hat and coat and walked up to the fourth floor to see if White and Denham were still at work; that they were concluding their work and about ten minutes later came by the office where White obtained from him an advance of $2; that White and Denham then left.

What Conley Claims.

As against this detailed statement of Frank's, Conley says that about 1 o'clock Frank came to the top of the stairs on the second floor and whistled twice for him to come up; that when he got up the steps Frank, who appeared to be highly excited, said he had picked up a girl back in the metal room and had let her fall, her head striking against something; that Frank told him to go back there and bring her out; that he went back and found the girl lying on her face dead; that he came back and told Frank she was dead, and Frank told him to go bring her out; that he asked how he was to do it, and Frank told him to go into the cotton room and get a piece of bagging; that while he was tieing the girl's body in the bagging, Frank remained at the head of the stairs and watched; that he started out with the girl's body on his shoulder and, after walking for about fifty or seventy-five feet, he dropped it; that he then went back to Frank and told him it was too heavy; that Frank came after the feet and he the head; that they carried it in this way to the elevator; that Frank went into the office and got the key to the elevator switch-box; that Frank ran the elevator to the basement and helped him get the body off; that Frank directed him to carry it back to the sawdust pile in the rear of the basement; that, while he was obeying, Frank climbed up the ladder, poked his head through the cubby hole on the first floor and kept a watchout; that after he had deposited the body in the sawdust pile he came back and ran the elevator up to the first floor, where Frank got on and rode with him on up to the second floor; that Frank went to the sink to wash his hands while he (the negro) shut off the elevator motor, that they both then went into the inner office; that soon after their arrival some one was heard approaching, and Frank put him in a wardrobe; that Frank went into the outer office to talk with the persons who had come in and was none other than Newt Lee, whom he came back and let him out of the wardrobe; that they then sat down in the office, when Frank got him to write and talked with him for several minutes, telling him that he was a good boy and he would not forget him; that after obtaining the notes, Frank gave him a roll of money, but took it back a little later, saying he would see him on Monday; that Frank offered him a cigarette, and he found $2.50 in the cigarette box, which Frank told him he could have; that a few minutes later Frank led him out and to the stairs, and that he left and went to a nearby beer saloon.

The negro says he noticed the clock when he came back to get the cotton bagging to tie up the girl's body, and that it was four minutes to 1. He states that he left the factory about 1:30.

Couldn't Have Happened.

The incidents related by the negro could not have possibly been enacted within thirty minutes and, according to the testimony of witnesses, Frank went home, eight or ten blocks away, at 1:20.

What is more plausible and more probable is the distance of the negro's hiding place, saw Mary Phagan enter the factory, and peering up the steps saw Frank, who appeared to be highly excited, said he had picked up a girl back in the metal room and had let her fall, her head striking against something; that Frank told him to go back there and bring her out; that he went back and found the girl lying on her face dead; that he came back and told Frank she was dead, and Frank told him to go bring her out; that he asked how he was to do it, and Frank told him to go into the cotton room and get a piece of bagging; that while he was tieing the girl's body in the bagging, Frank remained at the head of the stairs and watched; that he started out with the girl's body on his shoulder and, after walking for about fifty or seventy-five feet, he dropped it; that he then went back to Frank and told him it was too heavy; that Frank came after the feet and he the head; that they carried it in this way to the elevator; that Frank went into the office and got the key to the elevator switch-box; that Frank ran the elevator to the basement and helped him get the body out from concealment at the rear, to the front, where anyone might come in or go out and see him, and so to the basement either by stairs and ladder or by elevator—all to accomplish the directly opposite of what the negro's logical defense would have been?

If the negro had killed the girl in the office, for example, would it not have been natural on his part to want to lay her body at some such place as at the door of the factory office?

But wouldn't he have left the body wherever it lay, and fled?

Yet he moved it, and then returned to work Monday morning.

Realism of Statement.

The strength of the negro's statements is in their realism. Their weakness consists in the fact that they have emerged from a mesh of lies. The negro lied flatly at first. Why? Self-preservation. He knew nothing of law, and instinct to save his own neck made him swear that he knew absolutely nothing about the murder—that, and perhaps, also, the hope of reward for silence. Had his ignorance been less, he might have made a truthful statement early in the investigation. But he lied. Afterward he told a partial truth. The detectives knew at once that there was more than he had told, and they urged him to reveal the rest. He revealed more, acknowledge that he had lied. They knew he still was lying, and they dug for more. Then they opened up the vein of information that they sought.

The minute the negro admitted he knew anything at all about the crime he was in for the whole story. It seems reasonable that his mentality is too low for him to create the fiction of a yarn which would fool the detectives—who have every phase of the case in mind or at their command. Could any person—even one of the detectives—fabricate a story that would fit in with all the known circumstances of this or any other real case?

There remain crudities in the negro's story. It is improbable, seemingly, that Frank should exclaim, "Why should I hang?" to the negro. Yet the phrase was said that in effect, without melodrama. It is improbable that Frank premeditated the crime, if he did commit it, and summoned the negro to the factory in advance. Yet that might be merely one of the original falsehood which the negro has been trying to harmonize with his present story. Perhaps the negro went to the factory for some natural purpose that took him to the basement, and found the dark corner behind the boxes a good place to rest and snooze when he came out. It is improbable that Frank deliberately called the negro in to help dispose of the body. But could it have been possible that he was looking around for a place of the coast was clear before he started with the body, when his eyes met those of the astonished negro beside the elevator, who realized that an accessory had been forced upon him? Then there is the possibility that his fear of strength to lift the body made help necessary. He is a slight man; the negro is stout.

Accounting for Mistakes.

Perhaps there are mistakes in the sequence of the negro's story. Yet that might be natural. It is a most difficult task to remember what you have done in exact sequence. Try it. What did you do day before yesterday? What did you do yesterday—act by act, minute by minute?

Exact sequence might be immaterial. The thing is, if a lie is being told out of the whole cloth, even a plausible semblance of sequel is impossible. That is the strength of fact that a lie cannot stand. A man may say he rode to town at noon on a trolley car. He knows that the car whistles blow, he swears. Yet it may be proved on the contrary that all cars were stopped for two hours, from 11 to 1 o'clock on that very day. That is an illustration.

On the face of things it can be argued, then, that the negro is lying now with regard to the larger facts. His tale is constructed too admirably, it is woven too subtly with corroborated fact, it can be claimed to be the product of his imagination rather than any very intelligent person, either.

There is the wardrobe, for instance. Would anyone imagined such a superfluous incident as that, swearing he hid in the wardrobe in the office when somebody called Frank?

There is another point, the crocus sack that was used to wrap the girl's body in. It is entirely superfluous. No blood-stained crocus sack was found on the trash pile where Conley says he threw it, in the basement, after the girl's hat and one shoe and her ribbon were found there. The mention of a crocus sack is introduced something entirely new into the known case. Conley does not even suggest an explanation of why the one sack used it. It was there on the trash pile, that's all he knows. Nor does he explain the girl's parasol being found at the bottom of the elevator shaft. The last time he saw it, it was on the floor near where he picked up her body. Are these the only things which Conley does not attempt to explain. He does not presume to illuminate every point. If he did, would his story be so credible?

The negro told a story in detail and swore to it. Several hours later he repeated that story—and acted it—at the factory; and his repetition corresponded with the original.

The negro Jim Conley may be capable of a crime like this. But it is unreasonable to condemn him therefore. It would be equally unreasonable to accuse anybody of any crime of which he is capable. That is not the standard by which Jim Conley must be judged.

It is right here that the great difficulty comes in about believing Jim Conley's story. Leo M. Frank's most intimate friends believe him incapable of any crime, much less of such an atrocious deed as the murder of Mary Phagan. If the negro sweeper's accusation is to be accepted, it follows that Frank is possessed of what science knows as a dual personality. The personality that his friends know would never have harmed the little girl. The personality that the negro Conley paints is something fearful.

To ascribe the crime to Frank implies necessarily, too, that he planned its own escape from it, deliberately, astutely, cunningly. Yet if he committed the crime, the rest would have been nothing but logical.

a plain trail indicating that something had been dragged from the elevator to the sawdust pile and when the body was examined Sunday morning by the officers the eyes and mouth were full of dirt, the face was scratched, the dress and one of the stockings was torn and there was an abrasion on the left leg which appeared to have been scrapped against something.

Wrote the Notes.

After leaving the body the negro ran the elevator back to the second floor and went into the general manager office where he wrote the notes and where there is always lying around the kind of pencil pads upon which the notes were written. He then took the notes, climbed down the ladder into the basement and laid them on the body, after which he pulled the staple on the rear door and made his escape. The front doors were locked while Frank was at lunch and this was the only way he could get out. Evidence at the inquest showed that the staple had been drawn from the rear door.

It is hard to believe that Frank if guilty would have shared his secret with anyone, much less a negro, and even had he done so he would have sent him away with more explanations than are given by the negro.

With the negro in possession of his secret Frank would without doubt have let him retain the roll of bills and almost anything else he wanted. The portion of the negro's story about Frank slipping him $2.50 in a cigarette box seems too silly to believe. Had he been guilty and desired to give the negro something he would have done so openly.

Little if any credence can be attached to the negro's declaration that Frank kept murmuring "why should I marry when I have got rich kinfolks," and the same is true of the negro's allegation that Frank explained his dilution of the notes by saying he was going to send them to his mother.

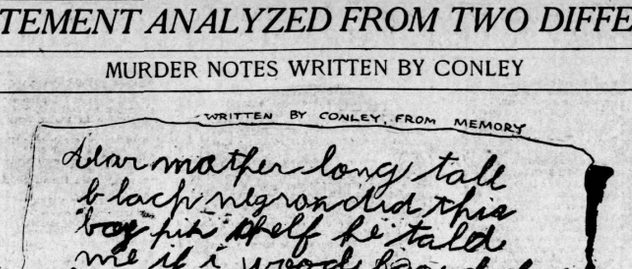
The negro had written the notes and he knew they were planned to fix the crime on some other negro. He couldn't, as he says, have believed they were wanted merely as a sample of his handwriting. If Frank were guilty and had taken the negro in his confidence, as the latter claims, it goes without saying that Frank would have made some effort to see him and get him out of the way after suspicion began to point at him (Frank).

Things to Be Explained.

Then, too, the negro must explain why it was that on the Monday following the crime he remarked to Herbert Schiff, the assistant superintendent, that he would give a million dollars if he was a white man so that he wouldn't be bothered. He must also explain why he was washing his shirt on the day that he was arrested. The statement that he had only one shirt and wanted to be presentable at the inquest to which he had been summoned, will not suffice.

The above represents the theory of those who believe that the negro has not told the truth, and who are trying to save himself by putting the crime on Frank.

MURDER NOTES WRITTEN BY CONLEY



At the top is a photograph of the note written by James Conley, the negro sweeper, at the pencil factory Friday afternoon after he had pantomimed his part in the murder of Mary Phagan. He wrote from memory and without prompting.

At the bottom is a portion of one of the notes found by the dead girl's body and which Conley admits he wrote.

HIGH SCHOOL "FRATS" OPPOSED BY COLLEGIANS

Greek Letter College Societies Would Abolish High School Organizations

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, Ill., May 31.—An organized campaign for the extermination of high school fraternities was inaugurated here yesterday at a conference of delegates representing fifty-five Greek letter college societies. A public pronunciamento against the preparatory school organizations will be issued today.

The statement will include definitions of the nature and purposes of college fraternities and sororities to offset adverse public criticism and threatened hostile legislation. It is planned to bar from admission to any Greek letter college society any person who has been a member of a high school "frat."

It was the opinion of several speakers that antagonism to fraternities is due to the activities of the academic organizations. Suggestions that a campaign of education be started to acquaint the public with the real purposes of college fraternities and correct erroneous impressions, met with universal approval.

FLORIDA CITRUS FRUIT LAW IN SUPREME COURT

S. J. Sligh, Georgian, Convicted for Shipping Immature Oranges to Ga., Tests Law

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—The constitutionality of the Florida law of 1911 prohibiting the sale or the shipment from the state of immature citrus fruits is to be passed upon by the supreme court of the United States.

S. J. Sligh, of Waycross, Ga., convicted of shipping immature oranges from Florida to Georgia, today docketed an appeal in the supreme court.

Mr. W. E. Delay Dead

Mr. William Eli DeLay, aged fifty-six years, died Saturday morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas L. Hollingsworth, 514 Highland avenue. He is survived by his wife, three sons—Theron E., Melville and William Emery DeLay— and three daughters—Mrs. M. M. Murphey, Mrs. W. F. Booker and Mrs. Hollingsworth. He also leaves his mother. The funeral will occur at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the residence, and interment will be at West View cemetery.

MITCHELL NOT RECOGNIZED AS LABOR COMMISSIONER

New York Comptroller General Will Not Honor Sulzer's Appointment

ALBANY, N. Y., May 31.—Acting upon a recent opinion received from the state attorney general, the state comptroller today refused to recognize as legal Governor Sulzer's recent appointment of John Mitchell as state labor commissioner.

WANT HUMANE PLAN FOR KILLING OF DOGS

CHARLESTON, May 31.—The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has appointed a committee to confer with Mayor Grace and Chief of Police Cantwell looking toward the asphyxiation of dogs impounded by the police for running at large on the streets.

This means of killing the dogs has been urged for a long time, but now it is proposed to take active steps to carry it out, and asphyxiation may take the place of drowning and shooting of the stray and worthless canines.

Conley's Story Stands Test in This Analysis

present at the examination before Solicitor Dorsey, and together the officials looked for flaws and "rough places" in the story.

Conley's admission that he was an accessory after the fact of the crime has naturally made him the principal witness in the case, and the detectives are making every effort to secure corroborative statements, which bear even on the seemingly unimportant points of his sensational recital.

Detectives Campbell and Starnes were present at the latter part of the negro's examination by Chief Beavers and the solicitor, and they, it is said, will work towards securing evidence of a corroborating nature.

Attorney William M. Smith has been requested by relatives of Conley to look after the negro's interests, and he was admitted to the conference for a short time.

Mr. Smith made no objection to the transfer of the negro to police headquarters and says that he is willing for Conley to remain there as long as the detectives desire to keep him.

He is also desirous of bringing about the meeting of Conley and the man he accuses of the crime.

JESSE BAG STILL MISSING.

Persistent rumor that the missing mesh bag, said to have been carried by Mary Phagan on the morning of her death, and been located by the police, was silenced late Saturday night when Detective Collingsworth asserted that the bag pawned a week ago Wednesday and thought, at first to have been the Phagan girl's, had been identified as the property of another girl.

The negro pawned the purse with Barney Morris, 92 Decatur street, and the latter instantly became suspicious. As a result the negro was quizzed, but proved conclusively that the bag had been given to him by a woman for whom he worked.

TROLLEY CARS ARE STOPPED BY STORM

The street cars were stopped Saturday afternoon from about 4 o'clock until 5. At the starter's office no information could be obtained as to the cause. The superintendent's office was also called and that office didn't know what the trouble was. It is presumed there was a breakdown somewhere, however it was at Bull Sluice or at one of the city plants, officials of the company couldn't say.

Why not clear his own skirts by directing suspicion elsewhere? Why not employ notes, get some one else to write them, shift the whole matter by so carefully and artfully devised program with all details foreseen, all except that every negro employed around the factory would stand pat and none of them would run?

There is a wealth of realism in the negro Conley's statement, his "confession," or explanation, or whatever one has a mind to call it.

He added nothing unnecessary to the case when he said he found the body away around at the back near the stairway. No one had suspected that it lay there at any time. There had been nothing at all even to suggest that.

Several Things Explained.

There is his story about the body getting blood on and about his right shoulder and falling heavily to the floor just as he reached the dressing room. Of course, what has been regarded as blood, found on the floor there. It explains the bruises on Mary Phagan's dead face, caused by the face hitting on the floor after she was dead. There is the vivid detail about the elevator had been up, so that he and Frank didn't have to stoop when they put her body on the elevator floor. He explains the good place to rest and snooze when he came out. It is improbable that Frank deliberately called the negro in to help dispose of the body. But could it have been possible that he was looking around for a place the coast was clear before he started with the body, when his eyes met those of the astonished negro beside the elevator, who realized that an accessory had been forced upon him? Then there is the possibility that his fear of strength to lift the body made help necessary. He is a slight man; the negro is stout.

SIX-CENT VERDICT GIVEN ROOSEVELT; CHARGE WITHDRAWN

tending over five days, lost its dramatic interest.

Hour after hour Mr. Newett, although suffering from a serious malady and with pain always visible in his face, sat listening to testimony given against him by former members of Colonel Roosevelt's cabinet, literary men, doctors, naturalists and other of national reputation. Ten feet away sat Colonel Roosevelt, the plaintiff. The balconies and the seats behind the lawyers' inclosure were always filled.

The first witness was Colonel Roosevelt and the last one for the plaintiff was Admiral George Dewey, whose testimony was introduced by deposition. Between them were James R. Garfield, Robert Bacon, former secretary of state and ambassador to France; Gifford Pinchot, Truman H. Newberry, former secretary of war; Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff; Dr. Lyman Abbott, W. Emlen Roosevelt, George B. Cortelyou, Dr. Albert Shaw, William Loeb, Jr., Jacob A. Riis and many newspaper men, all of whom testified orally or by deposition that Colonel Roosevelt did not "get drunk" as charged. While Colonel Roosevelt, smiling delightedly after the verdict, was chatting with various persons, Mr. Newett was speaking with friends in the room, while everybody else was watching to see if the two principals to the suit would get together.

COLONEL LEAVES TOWN.

Mr. Newett was the first to leave the court room, but, although frequently halted by persons who wished to express their admiration of the manner in which he had achieved vindication in the wrong, he was on his way to his home in Ishpeming before the colonel left the building.

The colonel had to hurry to catch his train, which left at 5:30 o'clock, and on it, besides the colonel, were James R. Garfield, W. Emlen Roosevelt, William Loeb, Jr., and others.

The libel of which Colonel Roosevelt complained was published October 12, 1912, in Mr. Newett's weekly paper at Ishpeming, the Ironers. It took the colonel to task for "screaming" to others when "he himself gets drunk, and that not infrequently, as all his intimates know."

Colonel Roosevelt's statement to the court was as follows:

"Your honor, in view of the statement of the defendant, I ask the court to instruct the jury that I desire only nominal damages. I did not go into this case for money. I did not go into it for any vindictive purpose. I went into it, and, as the court said, I made my plaintiff in an issue, because I wished once for all during my life time, thoroughly and comprehensively, to deal with these slanders, so that never again will it be possible for any man in good faith to repeat them. I have achieved my purpose and I am content."

WHAT NEWETT SAID.

Mr. Newett's staement follows:

"I was born on a farm near Janesville, Wis., in 1856, and lived there until I was about 16 years of age.

"I obtained my education in the district school. I came to Marquette county in 1873 and have lived here ever since. In 1874 I began working for the Iron Home, the first paper published in Ishpeming, and have ever since been engaged in newspaper work in this county.

"In 1879 I left the Iron Home and started the publication of a paper of my own and have continued publication from then until the present time. This paper is known as Iron Ore.

"In October, 1912, it had a circulation of from 2,500 to 3,000, four-fifths of which was confined to the county of Marquette.

"I do not use wines or liquors mouself in any form and am an absolute teetotaler, having strong convictions on this subject. Neither do I use tobacco in any form.

"In 1896 I was appointed commissioner of mineral statistics for the state of Michigan, a position I held four years, at the end of which term I resigned. I have also held various positions on civic boards in the city of Ishpeming.

FORMER ROOSEVELT MAN.

"Prior to 1912 I had been for many years a strong supporter of Theodore Roosevelt, recognizing him as the great Republican leader, and had frequently published editorials and other articles in 'Iron Ore' commending him and approving his policies and I had therefore assisted all his campaigns, not only by personal effort, but also by financial contributions. Even in the primary campaign of 1912, I supported him as second choice for the Republican nomiree.

"I mention the facts as indicating the impossibility of my harboring any feeling of personal malice against the plaintiff.

"Some time before 1912 I began to hear statements from various sources that Mr. Roosevelt was drinking wines and liquors to excess. During this period I took a trip throughout the western country, passing through the states of Montana, Nevada and Arizona, as well as the intervening cities. The statements of Mr. Roosevelt's excessive drinking were repeatedly made in my hearing in various sections by many persons whom I believed to be reputable, but notwithstanding this, I was loath to credit them. I felt that there was a possibility that these persons were mistaken and therefore thought the statements probably unwarranted.

"Later, during the winter of 1912, I took a trip to Florida, passing through Chicago and other cities en route and spent several weeks at Belleair and other Florida points.

SOME REPORTS HEARD.

"During this trip the same statements as to Mr. Roosevelt's habits were repeated, in a very circumstantial way, although no one was able to say that he had actually seen Mr. Roosevelt drink to excess or personally knew that he did so.

"During this period I also talked with various reputable people in Ishpeming and elsewhere than the places before mentioned who claimed to know the conditions as they existed in Washington, and in whose reliability I had the utmost confidence, both as to their reliability and their opportunity to know the facts.

"During the spring of 1912 newspapers came to me on our exchange list, various of which contained reference to Mr. Roosevelt's drinking habits. I saw and read these newspaper publications. From the statements so made in these papers and all the information which had come to me from the other sources mentioned, I felt that I could no longer doubt the truth of the statements which had been made, much as I regretted to believe them.

"When Mr. Roosevelt was nominated for president on the national Progressive ticket, I opposed his election, having been a lifelong Republican and believing that the success of that party would be for the best interests of the country. In October, 1912, Mr. Roosevelt made a campaign trip through northern Michigan and among other places spoke at Marquette on the 9th. I was present on that occasion and heard him speak. In the course of his address he made what I considered a most unjustifiable attack on candidate for congress, who was one of my lifelong friends.

WHEN HE WROTE EDITORIAL.

"This incident, together with the statement that had previously come to my knowledge, confirmed me in the opinion that Colonel Roosevelt ought not be elected president, and I concluded it was my duty in opposition to his candidacy to publish the statements which I then believed to be true.

"I thereupon wrote and published the article which is here complained of. This opinion was intended only as a blow to Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy for the position he then sought. In this publication I acted in entire good faith, believing that the facts stated were true, and believing that, as a publisher, I owed the duty to my readers to make that statement.

"After this article was published, on the twelfth day of October, 1912, neither the plaintiff nor any one in his behalf notified me that he claimed the charges made were unfounded, nor did they request me to make any correction of the same.

"On the contrary, this suit was commenced on October 25, 1912, and the service of the papers constituted the first intimation I received that the article was complained of.

"After the commencement of this suit there was nothing for me to do but to prepare to defend it, and I did so to the best of my ability. From that time I proceeded to investigate the actual facts which could be shown by witnesses who would testify under oath. As I have said, up to the time of the publication my information had been through persons who claimed to have knowledge of the statements which had been made, and I went forward to verify those statements and determine the witnesses by whom they could be proven. Additional information came to me from various sections of the country, as this case had been given wide publicity.

"Both my attorneys and myself went forward with the investigation of all this with great thoroughness, and in numerous places in various parts of the country we found reputable witnesses who were willing to swear that, from observation during certain of the addresses and public appearances of Mr. Roosevelt, they believed that he was intoxicated when they saw him.

"We have been unable, however, to locate or produce witnesses who will swear that they have actually seen Mr. Roosevelt drink to excess. Upon this phase of the case, when the statements attributed to such persons had been sifted, it was found in each instance that the witness did not himself know that Mr. Roosevelt had drank to excess or that, if he had made such claim, he was not willing to testify.

"It is fair to the plaintiff to state that I have been unable to find in any section of the country any individual witnesses who is willing to state that he has personally seen Mr. Roosevelt drink to excess.

"I have taken the testimony in the form of depositions of more than forty reputable witnesses who have expressed the opinion that on those occasions as to which they testify he was intoxicated. I believe all these witnesses were honest in making their statements. I have relied upon those witnesses but have recognized the lesser opportunities they have had to observe the plaintiff and his habits.

BELIEVES IN INNOCENCE NOW.

"I have been profoundly impressed during the progress of this trial by the nature and extent of the evidence produced by the plaintiff ton the effect that he did not in fact use liquor to excess on any occasion.

"I am unwilling to believe that these eminent men would purposely misstate the facts or that under the circumstances related by them and their intimate acquaintances with the plaintiff for so many years they could be mistaken as to his habits.

"I therefore have been forced to believe that those who have given depositions or made the statement that in their opinion on occasions to which they refer Mr. Roosevelt was intoxicated, had insufficient means and opportunity of correctly observing him and were mistaken.

"Up to the time of this trial I had believed that the statements made in the article which I published were entirely warranted. But in the face of unqualified testimony of so many distinguished men who have been in position for years to know the truth, I am forced to the conclusion that I was mistaken.

"I am unwilling to continue to assert that Mr. Roosevelt actually and in fact drank to excess. A as publisher of a newspaper I have never knowingly done injustice to any man and neither I nor any of my attorneys is willing now to make or continue the assertion of an unjust charge against the plaintiff in this case. We have reached the conclusion that to continue expressly or impliedly to assert that Mr. Roosevelt drank to excess or actually became intoxicated as set forth in the article would do him an injustice.

"Since publishing the article I acted honestly and in good faith. I propose at this time, and throughout the remainder of the case to occupy a like position. My position throughout the introduction of my defense is and will be that in the publication I acted in good faith and without malice."

JUDGE'S CHARGE.

Judge Flannigan's charge to the jury in substance follows:

"Gentlemen of the jury;

"The position which the plaintiff has now taken enables the court to dispose of this case finally at this time.

"This action, which is for libel, followed upon the publication by the defendant of the statement that the plaintiff was frequently drunk.

"Libel is a malicious publication expressed in printing or writing, or by signs and pictures tending to blacken the memory of one dead, or the reputation of one who is alive and expose him to public hatred, contempt and ridicule.

"In all actions for defamation malice is an essential element. But in such actions the word 'malice' is understood as having two significations. One its ordinary meaning of ill will against a person, and the other its legal signification, which is a wrongful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse.

"These distinctions have been denominated malice in fact, and malice in law. Malice in fact, or actual malice, implies a desire to injure. Malice in law is not necessarily inconsistent with an honest purpose but if false and defamatory statements are made concerning another without sufficient cause or excuse, they are legally malicious and whenever the natural tendency of the publication is to impair the plaintiff's reputation and the publication is not privileged, malice is implied from the defamatory nature of the publication and its falsity.

"The natural result of the publication of the charge we are considering was to bring ridicule, contempt and disgrace upon the plaintiff and, if untrue, it was plainly libelous, and malice is conclusively presumed from its publication unless we may say it was privileged.

"The plaintiff was formerly president of the United States. At the time of the publication he was a candidate for the office of the president of the United States and the defendant, by his plea, claimed that, the plaintiff being such candidate, and he, the defendant, being the publisher of a newspaper, he was privileged to comment upon the official acts, character and conduct of the plaintiff; that the publication was made in good faith and with an honest purpose to enlighten the public upon the character and fitness of the plaintiff for the presidency and that, therefore, the publication was privileged.

LIBERTY OF PRESS.

"The publisher of a newspaper may freely discuss the fitness of a person for public office; he may lawfully communicate to the public any fact within his knowledge respecting the official acts, character or conduct of the candidate and freely express his opinions on and his inferences from such facts, so long as he states as facts only the truth.

"But Michigan has not yet granted to any one, whether newspaper man or not, the privilege of writing or speaking of any candidate for an elective office, words which are both defamatory and untrue.

"When a newspaper attacks the character of a candidate for public office the publisher must, at his peril, be careful to ascertain the truth of the facts charged as in any other case of libel.

"It follows that the defendant's liability in this action depends solely upon the question whether the charge is true or false.

"Unwilling to rest on the presumption of law that the charge was false, and call upon the defendant to prove its truth or answer in damages, as was the plaintiff's right, the plaintiff proceeded before this court to show that the charge was false in fact.

COURT CONVINCED.

"And by his own, and the testimony of a long list of witnesses of high character and unimpeachable credibility, he has satisfied the defendant, the jury also I fully believe, certainly he has convinced the court, not only that he never was drunk but that he is now and always has been a temperate and abstemious man.

"After hearing the testimony of the plaintiff and his witnesses and defendant freely in the presence of the court concedes the mistake of fact in his publication. In this he has taken a just position.

"The law presumes that damages must actually, proximately and necessarily result from the publication of defamatory matter whenever the immediate and natural tendency of the defamatory words is to impair the plaintiff's reputation, the object of the plaintiff in bringing and prosecuting this action being the vindication of his good name and reputation and not the recovery of a money judgment. He has in open court freely waived his right to the assessment of his actual damages, it only remains for the court to direct a verdict in his favor for nominal damages, which, under the law of Michigan, is the sum of six cents.

"You are, therefore, gentlemen, directed to render a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for that amount."

abled to some extent and connections even at as late as 10 o'clock at night were made with difficulty, especially in the northern and western parts of the city.

An automobile belonging to J. Regenstein was passing along Luckie street where the paving has been removed, and the driver being unable to see clearly in front of the machine, ran into the ditch and the whole front of the car was stuck in the mud.

PLATE GLASS WINDOWS SMASHED.

Plate glass windows were smashed in Shelley Ivey's store at 97 Peachtree, and in Hanneman's bakery a few doors nearer the Candler building, while the large windows in that structure, usually the first to suffer on account of the high velocity of the wind, at this point, were not injured.

The cool rain which came along with the violent gale and thunderstorm was a distinct relief after the sultry heat which had prevailed during the day, when the temperature reached the maximum mark of 89 degrees. This was immediately before the beginning of the storm. At 12 o'clock the thermometers in the weather bureau office registered 88.

Possibly the biggest loss in the way of plate glass was in the store of the Biggs Antique company, next to the Masonic temple, where the large window in the showroom was smashed. The Cartercar company on the same block lost a plate window, while the plate door in the vacant building next door also was broken. A large oak tree in the front yard of a residence immediately across from the Ford company on Peachtree was blown down and fell across the street, blocking traffic for a considerable time.

tragedy. He had slept at 5 Craven street on Tuesday night, he declared, and had not been anywhere in the vicinity of the house.

Both the prisoners are held without bond and all visitors are denied them. That they will be put though a severe sweating, Chief Lanford admitted, but he would not say when the task would be taken up.

WHERE WERE THEY?

Neither Walter Wilkes nor Joel Maynard was able to satisfactorily account for his whereabouts on the night of the murder, which was last Tuesday night.

Wilkes said that he spent that night at No. 5 Craven's alley. Detective Rosser went to this address Saturday afternoon, but failed to find such a number on Craven's alley. Neither was he able to find any one who knew anything about Wilkes.

The negro Wilkes, the detective says, has had record. He is a giant in size, and was arrested over a year ago and accused of an attempted assault at Riverside. However, the evidence was insufficient to fasten the crime on him, and he was turned loose.

Joel Maynard's memory was very dim when it came to his telling just where he was on that fatal night. He could not remember what he did Tuesday night or where he was.

The Bible that was found in the negro's cabin after the fire was claimed by Wilkes, who told the detectives that he could read the Bible, but could not read a newspaper. He admitted that he marked the passages.

The two negroes are both in solitary connnement.

The detectives admit that they have little evidence so far against either of the two negroes, who do not know for what they have been placed under arrest.

THIRD ARREST.

Another negro, Dan Walker, was also arrested Saturday. He was found in Pittsburg, where he had opened a plumber's shop a few days ago. The negro is called a half-breed, and is said to be part Mexican and part negro.

This third arrest completes the list of all those who have been mentioned in connection with the murder. The men at work on the case admit they have very little evidence so far against any one of the three under arrest, but believe that they will be able to work up more tangible evidence before the case is ready for the grand jury.

FACES COMPLETELY BROKEN OUT

Children Had Terrible Sores on Face, Hands and Feet, Watery Blisters Turned to Running Sores. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In a Week Children Well.

Upper Marlboro, Md.—"My children suffered with terrible sores on the face, hands and feet. The trouble began with watery blisters and then turned to running sores. They seemed to irritate the children very much. They caused disfurnement, because their faces were completely broken out. They were very restless at night and the baby was very cross. They could neither wear shoes nor stockings.

"I used ——— salve, ——— ointment and ——— salve, but nothing seemed to relieve them until I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed the sores in lukewarm water with the Cuticura Soap and dried them well and then I applied the Cuticura Ointment. In a week my children were entirely well. I owe all to Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Maggie Coffren, May 22, 1912.

When you buy a fine toilet soap think of the advantages Cuticura Soap possesses over the most expensive toilet soap for men. In addition to being absolutely pure and refreshingly fragrant, it is delicately yet effectively medicated, giving you two soaps in one, a toilet and a skin soap at one price. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. A single set is often sufficient when all else has failed. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Feet So Sore Couldn't Walk Down Stairs

TIZ Cured Her Quick

Send at Once for Free Trial Package.

If you have sore feet, tired feet, sweaty feet, lame feet, tender feet, smelly feet, corns, calluses or bunions, read what happened to Mrs. Crockett, of Jeffersonville. TIZ did it. Mrs. Crockett says: "After the second treatment I walked downstairs one foot at a time. She had not been able to walk downstairs before in past five years; except by stepping down on each step with one foot at a time. This is remarkable. Send five more boxes."

No matter what ails your feet or what under heaven you have used without getting relief, just use TIZ. It's the only foot remedy ever made which acts on the principle of drawing out all the poisonous exudations which cause sore feet. Powders and other remedies merely clog up the pores. TIZ cleans them out and keeps them clean. You will feel better the first time it's used. Use it a week and you can forget you ever had sore feet. There is nothing on earth that can compare with it. If anyone offers you an imitation that is claimed to be "as good as TIZ" ask why, if it is just as good, they don't dare to come out and advertise it. Don't you be a victim—get the genuine. TIZ is for sale at all drug stores, department and general stores, 25c per box, or direct, if you wish. Money back if TIZ doesn't do all we say. FINE OUTLOOK NOW FOR SOUTH CAROLINA GRAIN

Government Expert Delighted With Result of Scattering Good Seed

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
COLUMBIA, S. C., May 31.—Professor [illegible] of the United States department of agriculture, an expert grain man, who has been introducing better classes of grains throughout the south, is now on a tour of inspection, checking up his work and seeing the results of the planting of the seeds. He has been in and around Hartsville, inspecting the Abruzzi rye planted by David R. Coker, and is highly gratified and much pleased with the results he found here.

Mr. Deer was taken by Commissioner Watson, of the state department of agriculture, to Marietta today. In Lexington county, to inspect some grain, largely rye, which came from seed introduced by him. He is elated over the results of introducing better grain and congratulated South Carolina on showing such marked improvement in this line.

Like others who have noticed it, Professor Deer was impressed with the large amount of grain planted in this state this year. The increased acreage in oats, wheat, rye and other grain is noticeable in every section of the state.

RECLAMATION COMMITTEE.

The National Drainage congress has appointed a committee to formulate a bill to be presented to congress to provide for the establishment of a department of public reclamation and drainage, either as a cabinet position or a separate division under one of the cabinet places, the new place to have charge of all forestry work, reclamation and drainage of waste lands. The committee consists of E. J. Watson, of Columbia, S. C., first vice president; F. B. Knight, of Chicago; Thomas Keevils, of Pittsburg; Reed Whitford, of Charleston, S. C.; L. L. Lawrence, of Laurel, Miss.; J. S. Spikler, of Vinegar, Ind.; Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, of Raleigh, N. C., and Thomas P. Littlepage, of Washington, D. C. The secretaries of war, the interior and agriculture are also to be members of this committee, and in case they cannot serve they are to designate their first assistants to act for them. This committee is charged with securing federal action and a bill for carrying out this purpose will be drawn up and be submitted to congress when that body assembles in December next.

In discussing this matter, Commissioner Watson, of the state department of agriculture, said that President Wilson, Vice President Marshall, Speaker Champ Clark, Secretary Bryan and the entire cabinet, and all the prominent men of both parties, were in sympathy with the movement.

"I did not hear a word of opposition to it," said Mr. Watson, who was in Washington last week, and while there called on President Wilson with a committee and laid the matter before him. Mr. Watson is sanguine of success for this undertaking.

SEED CRUSHERS TO MEET.

The South Carolina Cotton Seed Crushers' association will hold its annual meeting in Asheville, N. C., on July 1 and 2, and Commissioner Watson has accepted an invitation to make them an address on July 3. Chief Chemist Summers, of the agricultural department, will make an address before the seed crushers' convention on "Accordance of Results in Chemical Analysis," and on "Inspection of Food Products." B. F. Taylor, of Columbia, the president of the association.

Mr. Watson will make an address at Beaufort on June 4, before the tomato clubs and farmers' rally, and on June 6 goes to Charleston to deliver an address to the gathering of the national commercial secretaries, which will be in session in that city then.

Kansas Growers Think Wheat Crop Will Be Late.

WICHITA, Kan., May 31.—Wheat growers in southern Kansas and grain buyers in this city estimate that the growing wheat has been set back already 25 per cent by the heat and dry weather of this week. Each succeeding day is proving disastrous. Estimates from these same sources are to the effect that unless a general rain comes within a few days the 1912 crop will be 50 per cent short of predictions made ten days ago.

NEW PRISON SOON FOR COVINGTON COUNTY, ALA.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 31.—Another prison will be built in Covington county to replace the one condemned recently by the state prison department. This report has been made to Governor O'Neal by Dr. W. H. Oates, state prison inspector.

TALK OF IMPEACHMENT OF GOV. BLEASE REVIVED

Governor, However, Says He Isn't Afraid of Losing His Hold on Reins

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 31.—Since the statement of Governor Blease that he had appointed an extra member of the Columbia constabulary for each time the city fines his negro chauffeur, talk of impeachment proceedings against him have been revived. Just who is behind the alleged movement has not been publicly stated, but the governor himself, on being asked about the rumor, said there had been talk about impeaching him every year since he was first inaugurated, but nothing has been done. The governor is not in the least worried over the impeachment talk.

ATTITUDE OF LEGISLATURE.

When Cole L. Blease was first inducted into the governor's office in 1911 the legislature treated him as they did his predecessor, Governor Ansel, and the other governors. But it was not long before the legislature and the governor were at logger-heads, and by the second session of the general assembly, in 1912, they were at open and bitter warfare.

There was open talk during that year of possible impeachment proceedings, and an attempt to get the legislature to take a recess from March until the middle of May was looked on around the state house as a part of a program for instituting proceedings. However, the May recess was defeated, and it was following this that the Felder-Burns investigation, the bitter Jones-Blease campaign and the triumphant re-election of the governor ended impeachment talk for the time being.

When the legislature elected last summer organized for their first session this past January there was a marked disposition to bury the hatchet and get together with the chief executive. Although still anti-Blease, the administration forces in both branches had been increased, and the opponents were inclined to stay in the background and let harmony rule. However, it was not long before the scenes of the 1912 session were re-enacted. Numbers of the members elected as administration friends broke away for one cause and another, and by the time of the close of the session the legislature was fighting the governor as hard or harder than that of the previous year.

WHEN CHAUFFEUR WWAS FINED.

And now the impeachment talk is bobbing up again. The course of the governor in appointing three extra constables to the Columbia force in retaliation, as stated by him, for the action of the city of Columbia in fining his negro chauffeur three times brought forth a caustic denunciation at the hands of Mayor Gibbes. This is supposed to be the basis of the rumors of possible impeachment proceedings.

In his official comments on this case the mayor of Columbia says, in the year book: "So far as the police department is concerned it will attempt to carry out the ordinances against his negro employes (referring to the governor) as strictly as against any other law breakers, and the mayor does not consider that special privileges ought to be extended to such a person more than to the most lowly, and especially does not consider that the lives of the citizens of Columbia, men, women and children, and their property, should be permitted to be jeopardized by the chauffeur employed by the governor, Cole L. Blease, whether such chauffeur be white or colored, any more than as has been stated before, such permit should be given to any other law-breaker."

The mayor invites the governor to test the matter of whether or not he has the right to pardon municipal court offenders in the courts.

There has never, so far as is known, been impeachment proceedings brought against any governor in South Carolina, and none has been brought against any official since reconstruction days.

The next session of the general assembly convenes on the second Tuesday in January, 1914. Articles of impeachment would have to be voted by the house and presented to the senate, which body, sitting as a court, with the chief justice of the supreme court presiding, would try the case. A two-thirds vote would be necessary for conviction and removal from office.

NEW SALES MANAGER OF THE NUNNALLY CO.

WM. D. PHIPPS.

William D. Phipps, who has just taken charge as sales manager of the Nunnally company, with offices at the factory, 59-61 Ivy street, has filled a number of important and responsible positions. A native of Boston, he has been a resident of Atlanta the last seven years, representing as sales manager the Robert Gair company, of New York, with offices in the Candler building.

A rapidly growing and expanding business both in the south and in New York, where the Nunnally factory has a phenomenal success, and where its candies are now on sale in some 100 stores in the greater city, made necessary an increase in the force of the sales department, and Mr. Phipps was selected from a strong list of eligibles to fill this important position.

Although but a few weeks in charge, Mr. Phipps has taken hold with a hand trained in sales service, and is "making good." He is now a thoroughly acclimated Atlantan, has the Atlanta spirit and it is his purpose to spread the name and fame of the city of his adoption along with the Nunnally product.

Associated with Mr. Phipps is J. S. Jetton, advertising manager for the Nunnally company. Mr. Jetton comes from Memphis, where he was for a long time connected with the Phoenix Cotton Oil company, as sales and advertising manager. Both of them have made reputations as business builders wherever they have been, and many predictions of success are being made for them in their new fields.—(Advt.)

COMMITTEE COMPLETE FOLLOWING HOUSE CAUCUS

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 31.—Committee organization in the house practically was completed today when the Democratic majority of the ways and means committee met and approved the assignments proposed by the Republican and Progressive leaders. The full list will be presented to the Democratic caucus Monday for ratification.

The ways and means, rules, mileage, accounts and enrolled bills committees were appointed at the beginning of the extra session. Representatives Underwood and Murdock recently announced the Democratic and Progressive selections for the remainder of the committees and today Republican Leader Mann presented his slate to a Republican caucus and had it approved.

The Republicans were in session just 10 minutes. Representative Mann, referring to the outlook for the extra session, said the general understanding was that the Democrats were going ahead with the currency legislation as soon as they finished with the tariff.

MANY LOST CHILDREN ARE STILL UNCLAIMED

NEW YORK, May 31.—Forty-six children between the ages of three and six, who became lost in the holiday throng yesterday, were still unclaimed by their parents at the Children's society headquarters today.

In all eighty-five tots were lost in the crowds, but by patient work the police restored nearly half of the number to their homes by nightfall.

SAVANNAHIANS CONDEMN PESSIMISTIC REPORTS

Conditions in Pine Belt Are Good, Declares the Board of Trade

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 31.—The directors of the Savannah board of trade, at a meeting here today condemned as untrue, the reports recently published in New York and Philadelphia newspapers, which indicated that a condition of destitution and financial demoralization prevailed throughout the naval stores belt of the south.

The reports seemed calculated to create the impression that the entire turpentine and rosin industry in the south is practically in a state of paralysis, with producers of these commodities and their employes in a destitute condition and merchants refusing them credits.

A statement issued by the board of trade directors denounces these reports as "blankly pessimistic and wholly unfounded in fact."

"To those living in the long leaf pine belt of the south," the statement recites, "the absurd and misleading character of south reports is manifest, but to business men of other sections their publication carries an impression entirely false and erroneous and calculated to do widespread injury."

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE MAY HAVE MORE U. S. SENATORS

President Wants a Senator From Each State Holding 1914 Senatorial Election

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, May 31.—Increased senatorial representation on the Democratic congressional committee was discussed today at a conference between Chairman Lloyd and Secretary Page, of the campaign committee, and a committee of five senators.

President Wilson favors a plan to have on the reorganized committee a senator from each state where senators are elected by direct popular vote in 1914. According to the committee's information these states are:

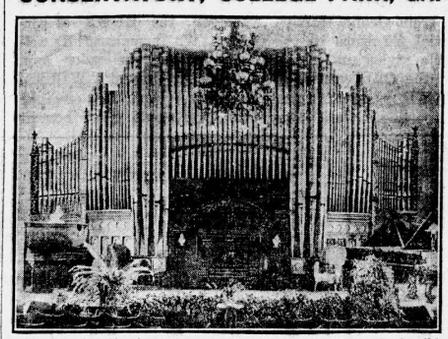
Kentucky, Kansas, Ohio, Oregon, Arkansas, Florida, New Hampshire, Oklahoma, Colorado, Alabama, Nevada, North Carolina, New York, Illinois, Indiana, South Carolina, Georgia, Maryland, Arizona, Missouri, Colorado and Louisiana.

POLICE HUNT KINDRED OF DROWNED WORKMAN

Atlanta police have been asked to institute a search for the relatives of B. Powell, a coffe-dam constuction man, who was downed accidentally in the Savannah river at Augusta Friday.

Powell was employed by the J. G. White Engineering company of Augusta, officers of which sent information here Saturday that he had relatives living in Atlanta.

GREAT ORGAN AT COX COLLEGE AND CONSERVATORY, COLLEGE PARK, GA.



The immense three manual concert pipe organ is considered to be the Largest and Sweetest-toned Instrument built for any Woman's College and is only one of the many interesting features of Cox College Conservatory and its beautiful tone has been heard to advantage in the recitals given by the college the past season and in the grand concert during the recent commencement. The equipment of Cox College is modern and thorough in every respect, including two Pipe-organs, pianos, orchestral instruments and a commodious and elegant concert hall. The artists who compose the faculty are of national and international reputation and have been chosen with special reference to their teaching ability.

There is no branch of a woman's education more ornamental and practical than the study of music, which may be brought into requisition in the drawing room, church, studio and concert hall. At Cox College Conservatory every branch of music is in charge of a specialist, and for years this institution has stood forth as the leading school of music in the South.

Everyone Likes Music

NEARLY everyone would like to play. And they could, if they had a CAROLA INNER-PLAYER. It is not enough that our Player with its eighty-eight fingers strikes accurately every note. Many other instruments do as much, but, the is the only one which has a Miniature Keyboard. It is this device which takes the stiffness out of the stroke. It enables you, or the child in your home, to play with a musicianly touch. Many other exclusive features assist in giving you perfect control of the expression.

To Prove It—Make this Test

Let us play your favorite composition. You will be unable to tell, unless you are looking on, whether it is being played by hand, or with the Player mechanism, so perfectly equipped is the CAROLA INNER-PLAYER with every device that controls expression.

If, heretofore, you have thought all Players mechanical, we can prove to your satisfaction that there is at least one which produces music as you like to hear it played.

LET US BUY THE PIANO WHICH YOU HAVE, BUT ARE NOT USING. IT WILL GO A LONG WAY IN EXCHANGE TOWARD THE MODERN CAROLA INNER-PLAYER. BALANCE ON EASY PAYMENTS.

First Day of June---Are You Ready for Summer?

June's first day brings us right up to summer.

Have you done everything for the apartment, the house and garden, the front yard, the porch, the bungalow, that the warm months require?

Have you met all personal needs and those of your family?

Look over THE JOURNAL'S advertisements. If you feel that you are ready for summer you will see some things that you have missed.

If you have not made your plans and purchases you will find a splendid guide.

THE JOURNAL'S advertisers are making some very interesting offerings today, apropos of the real arrival of warm weather.

And in fact there are many things you can't afford to miss, every day in THE JOURNAL'S advertisements.

Reading JOURNAL ads carefully is a fine habit to acquire.

SOME OF ATLANTA'S MOST PROMINENT CITIZENS ENDORSE NUXCARA FOR THE STOMACH

J. F. ADAMS.

J. F. Adams, merchant of Atlanta, Ga., says: "Nuxcara has been a boon to me. The first bottle that I bought I was unable to reach the drug store. I had suffered for twenty-five years with dyspepsia, part of the time in bed. Kept away from business for days at a time. Regard Nuxcara as the only cure for indigestion and mal-nutrition and always recommend it to those afflicted that way. I cannot say too much for this great medicine and am glad of an opportunity to bring it to the notice of some one suffering with indigestion and dyspepsia, knowing that it will cure them."

J. N. RENFROE, Atlanta, Ga.

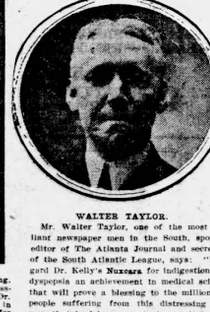
Mr. J. N. Renfroe, with the United Gas Works, Philadelphia, says:

"Dr. Kelley's Nuxcara is the only permanent and certain cure for dyspepsia. I have had trouble with my digestion for several years. My business carries me all over the United States—long trips on the cars, living at hotels, eating at irregular hours —my health became so wretched that I could not digest anything, and suffered all the agonies of the confirmed dyspeptic. I took treatment at the Johns Hopkins institute from the most famous specialist, also in New York City, but I never found a cure until I took Nuxcara. I consider it the greatest discovery for the cure of any form of dyspepsia or indigestion known to science."

DOLPH WALKER.

MR. DOLPH WALKER, Empire Building.

One of the most prominent and successful business men of the city, says: "Dr. Kelley's Nuxcara cured me of dyspepsia in its worst form after I had suffered for years, in spite of the fact that I took every digestive remedy that I could hear of I was almost an invalid, and so discouraged that I had about decided to give up all medicines advertised for stomach troubles, as I had about lost faith in drugs. My case was so bad that I could not see any improvement at all on the first bottle of Nuxcara, but by the time I had taken five bottles I had gained forty-five pounds and was stronger and in better health than I ever was in my life. It is certainly the most wonderful remedy known."



WALTER TAYLOR.

Mr. Walter Taylor, one of the most brilliant newspaper men in the South, sporting editor of The Atlanta Journal and secretary of the South Atlantic League, says: "I regard Dr. Kelly's Nuxcara for indigestion and dyspepsia an achievement in medical science that will prove a blessing to the millions of people suffering from this distressing disease that is doing more to incapacitate the American people for business than any other one cause. If one will keep the digestive system in a healthy condition, the mental forces are stronger, clearer and brighter, and physical endurance may be cultivated to a remarkable degree. There is no doubt that Nuxcara is a certain cure for dyspepsia. It had a most happy effect in my case, and I was delighted with the speedy cure and my restoration to perfect health.

A. J. DAVIS.

Mr. A. J. Davis, with the Atlanta Gas Co., says: "I feel that it is my duty to my fellowman to tell everybody in every way I can that Nuxcara will positively cure indigestion and dyspepsia, when by experience, I know what it is to suffer for years and years with dyspepsia, making life a burden; I want every one who suffers as I did to know about this remedy, I have bought it for others in a number of instances, knowing that it was the only cure known, and it has cured in all cases. I have no interest whatever in advertising this medicine, only to do my Christian duty to suffering humanity. I, like every one else, suffering with dyspepsia, tried everything, and am fully convinced that Nuxcara is the only cure known."

RICHARD WHITING.

Mr. Richard Whiting, connected with The Uncle Remus Magazine, Atlanta, Ga., says: "I consider Nuxcara the greatest remedy on earth for indigestion and dyspepsia; in fact, the only certain cure that I have ever heard of, and I have been hunting remedies for several years. Just something to get relief. Nuxcara cures to stay cured. Such a remedy is certainly a blessing to those who suffer with this terrible disease, and I would like to say to everyone suffering with dyspepsia: Just try it and see for yourself. The only returns to me for recommending this remedy is the pleasure in carrying good news to some sufferer."

J. W. BROOKS.

Mr. J. W. Brooks, traveling representative of The Atlanta Georgian and News, says: "For two years I have carried in my grip a bottle of Nuxcara, and would not think of going out on the road without it. I consider it the most wonderful discovery in medicine. The number of people who suffer with indigestion and dyspepsia, the terrible distress they suffer, no one knows but those who have had experience with it. When one remedy after another fails, when digestive agents seem to aggravate it. In the face of all this, Nuxcara cures in every case—truly it is a wonderful remedy.

Bryan Says Bird on His New Private Seal Is Real "Peace Dove"

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Secretary Bryan has just made for himself a private seal, of which he is especially proud. It is a reproduction of the design on a coin that was circulated in the time of Alexander the Great, which Colonel Bryan obtained while on his tour around the world.

The design disclosed a man holding a bird aloft. The bird is said to resemble a falcon, but Secretary Bryan, whose peace propensities are well known, insists it is a "dove of peace."

Mr. Bryan had not become the head of the state department long before he realized the onerous task of affixing his own signature to an enormous mass of correspondence. So he hit upon the scheme of a private seal and stamp bearing the words "William J. Bryan."

DR. L. E. BARTON TO BE JACKSON HILL PASTOR

West Point, Miss., Minister to Take Up Work Here July 1

While no formal acceptance has been received by officers of the Jackson Hill Baptist church, information has been received by individual members from Dr. L. E. Barton, of West Point, Miss., indicating that it is his purpose to accept the call of that church, made to him about ten days ago, and that his formal acceptance is being prepared.

Dr. Barton visited Atlanta and preached at the Jackson Hill church a few weeks ago, and the impression made on the congregation resulted in a unanimous call being extended just a week later.

Dr. Barton was born in Arkansas, educated at Union university, Jackson, Tenn., and was graduated in 1898 with the A. M. degree. He then attended the Southern Baptist Theological seminary. He has held pastorates in Tennessee, Arkansas, Virginia, Georgia and Mississippi, having for the past four years been pastor of the First Baptist church of West Point, Miss., which pastorate he will resign to come to Atlanta. He has had many calls extended to him since being located at West Point, but the Jackson Hill call is the only one that has appealed to him.

About two years ago the degree of doctor of divinity was conferred upon Dr. Barton by Union university. He is said to be probably the most eloquent of the younger preachers of the Southern Baptist convention, and is a member of almost every important advisory body of the Mississippi state convention. To him, it is said, is due a large share of the credit for the establishment of the educational commission, the most important step forward in the denomination work of Mississippi Baptists for many years.

Jackson Hill church is one of the leading Baptist churches of Atlanta and the state, its late pastor being Dr. Junius W. Millard, whose death occurred a few months ago.

It is expected that Dr. Barton will reach Atlanta to take charge of his new work about July 1.

MOTHERS' CONGRESS WILL MEET TUESDAY AFTERNOON

The Atlanta branch of the Mothers' congress will hold its monthly meeting in the lecture room of the Carnegie library at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Not only the members are urged to be present, but all women interested in the betterment of conditions surrounding the child are invited.

Dr. H. F. Harris, secretary of the board of health, will deliver a lecture on "The Reduction of Infant Mortality—Causes and Prevention."

Dr. Harris a few months ago read a paper on this subject before a distinguished body of men, and won great appreciation.

COL. J. L. COBB DEAD; WAS A WAR VETERAN

Colonel J. L. Cobb, a local attorney and a veteran of the Confederate army, died at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at his residence, 189 West Fair street, from the effects of a stroke of paralysis.

He was an old gentleman and had hundreds of friends in Atlanta who will mourn his death and remember him as a brave and valiant southerner. He was a member of Camp Tige Anderson, U. C. V., and was a Mason. Surviving him are his widow and two sons, H. H. and J. L. Cobb.

The body was removed to Harry G. Poole's chapel, and funeral arrangements will be announced later.

GIDEONS ORGANIZE CAMP AT ROME

A party of Atlanta Gideons, consisting of A. F. Tood, C. H. Burge, W. L. Hardin, L. C. Satterfield and C. W. Hatcher, left Friday for Rome, Ga., where they will organize a Gideon camp today. The regular meeting of the Atlanta camp will take place as usual at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Piedmont hotel. The services will be conducted by W. H. H. Phelps and it is likely that a visiting Gideon will make an address. The Gideons greatly enjoyed the lecture here last Friday of the Rev. George Stuart.

WOODMEN OF WORLD HONOR THEIR DEAD TODAY

The several camps of Woodmen of the World of Atlanta will observe their annual Memorial day Sunday when delegations will visit the different cemeteries and decorate the graves in the morning. At 4 p. m. they will meet at the McKenzie building, where they will form a line and march to Oakland cemetery. Services will be held and a monument unveiled, Judge Roan delivering the principal address. The Fifth Infantry band will act as escort.

ATLANTA SWEDES HEAR SERMON IN OWN TONGUE

Rev. A. A. Swanlund, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church at Thorsby, Ala., will conduct services in the Swedish tongue at the English Lutheran church here Sunday. He will speak at the church at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock Sunday night will address a number of Atlanta Swedes at the residence of A. Johnson, 96 Cherokee avenue.

Mr. Swanlund came to Atlanta for a couple of days after paying a visit to the Swedish colony at Fruithurst, Ala.

ORGAN CONCERT SUNDAY BLOCKED BY EXHIBITS

There will be no free concert at the auditorium-armory Sunday afternoon, owing to the fact that the amphitheater is occupied by a hardware exhibit.

The Music Festival association hopes, however, to renew the free concerts regularly, beginning with the following Sunday.

Genuine Reductions Range From 20% off to as Much as 50% off

Positively the Greatest Furniture Sale in the History of the South. No Housewife Can Afford to Miss It.

WE ARE GOING TO MAKE THIS SALE THE SELLING SENSATION OF THE YEAR. We are going to show you how a sale of this kind SHOULD be conducted—the EMPIRE FURNITURE COMPANY WAY. We are going to show you the most extensive line of the world's best Furniture that has ever been gathered together and offered at such unheard-of prices. Our business is yet but NINE MONTHS OLD, and we have not a single piece of old or shop-worn furniture in the entire house. Our stock has been brought here from Grand Rapids, Michigan, the HOME of the best and most substantial furniture in use today. We have carefully selected the most desirable styles and finishes, and placed our order soon enough to get them at the OLD prices, which were just about TWENTY PER CENT LOWER than the present prices. And the original prices we placed on these goods were lower than you could have bought them for ANYWHERE ELSE IN THE SOUTH. Notice, then, the tremendous reductions we have made on these original lowest prices. We have held the record for the lowest prices on Furniture, and now we're going to break our own record. Even if you don't need any Furniture right now; though you will not need any for months to come, you cannot afford to miss this great sale. Buy what you want, let us divide the payments to suit you, and store your goods until you need them. COULD ANYTHING BE FAIRER OR MORE LIBERAL?

Every piece of Furniture in our entire store will be marked in plain figures, giving the original price and our First Annual Discount Sale price. Compare the quality of our goods with what you see elsewhere at similar prices, and then compare our REDUCED prices with the original figures. You will THEN realize why we say that this is THE MOST EXTRAORDINARY FURNITURE SALE EVER CONDUCTED IN THE ENTIRE SOUTH.

JOURNAL WANT AD HOROSCOPE
JUNE 2.

If you are born on this date, the secret of your success in life will depend on two important things.

You must be honest with yourself.

You have faults which must be gravely and earnestly studied and corrected. Do this and the way is open to your desire.

These people have two distinct natures constantly at war with each other—in other words, they are always at war with themselves and, until higher nature wins out, there is unhappiness, unrest and discord.

Keep all personal matters out of your conversation when talking with others. To talk about your failures and your successes is very weakening.

This birth date is surrounded by wonderful planetary influences of the greatest help when the person is in a calm, spiritual state of mind.

The Journal Want Ads favor renting of rooms tomorrow. Advertise personal property for sale. Advertise building lots and manufacturing plants for sale. Mercury in a favorable planetary of this birth date and brings good fortune.

Telephone your ad to The Journal, or ask that it be sent for—whichever is most convenient for you. Main 5000 or Atlanta 423.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Southern International Poultry December 1st to 7th, 1913

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Southern International Poultry association arrangements were completed for holding its third annual exhibition December 1 to 7, at the auditorium-armory, where the two past successful shows were conducted.

This association has done more to help the poultry industry of the south than any one thing that has ever been connected with the poultry work in this section of the country. The association was organized to work for the benefit of the industry and the breeders throughout the entire country, and nothing has been left undone or will hereafter be left undone to build up this industry and have it appreciated as it should be. There is no one thing connected with the south's welfare that needs the support and attention of the public so much as does this line of work, and it is a hard matter to get the people to see the necessity of this and a harder matter to get some one to undertake to do the work or get up the money absolutely necessary to successfully conduct such exhibitions as are a benefit to this country.

There are but few people who know it, but Atlanta cooped at the Southern International Poultry association show last December probably the fourth largest number of fowls ever cooped under one roof in the United States, and it demonstrated the importance of this work being carried on in the interest that people are taking in this work, and it further shows that if the work is kept up and enough people lend a helping hand towards this work that it will mean millions of dollars to the south. The poultry industry represents a billion dollar industry. One of the biggest things connected with agriculture and one of the most important because it helps a larger number of people than any other one line of work that can be done towards feeding the nation. It has also been an uphill business to get enough people together or to raise sufficient funds to conduct such a show as the country really needs. It costs money to successfully operate and handle a large poultry show and have every detail connected with its success carried out as it should be and this work always falls on a few people and usually the ones who are willing to do the work and see the necessity of it are not financially in a position to give it the support that it should have.

It is no trouble for Atlanta to raise $50,000, to $100,000 to put on an opera or an automobile show or many other popular enterprises of entertainment for the people and they usually subscribe money readily, but handle a large poultry show and have every detail connected with it and there are but few people who realize the work that they are not only helping to feed the mass of people and helping to assist thousands of people to do something that will help make a living for them, but in addition will be helping themselves as well and helping the state to build up something that is sorely needed. It is impossible to get the people to see this work in this respect, but nevertheless it is a fact and if the people could once be aroused to the necessity of this and lend a helping hand and support this industry as it should be and as it is done in most other states outside of Georgia, in a few years the people would realize in dollars and cents the value this work would be to our country.

At a recent meeting fourteen breeders who were enough interested in this work to see the necessity of it carried out subscribed and put up $50 each as a guarantee fund to finance this show. A few people realize this much as a guarantee fund to successfully put on such a show as the association desires to do this year. The association is incorporated according to the laws of Georgia and has paid up stock to the amount of over $3,000. It required over $8,000 to conduct the first show, and about the same amount for the last one. Even with this enormous expense the last show paid expenses with the exception of about $400.

The third annual exhibition, if properly supported and this amount that is wanted, $3,000, is secured, this show can easily clear a nice dividend, and in addition build up something that means more for the south than can be estimated in dollars and cents. The stock in this association can be had at $10 per share, and those who are interested should at least own one or more shares, and those who are not interested except in the welfare of our country should by all means lend a helping hand and subscribe the remaining amount that is necessary as a guarantee fund for the next show. If this can be done the management will show to Atlanta probably one of the greatest poultry shows in December that will be cooped during the season of 1913-1914 anywhere in the United States.

The field is open in the south for this work. A few people realize this and will leave nothing undone to build this industry to where it is justly entitled, and every one who is inclined to help in any way possible should get in correspondence with the secretary, Mr. T. M. Poole who can be found at his office, 51 Inman building and will gladly cooperate with all. He will be glad to have any suggestions from any who are interested in the great work. Nothing will be left undone to push this work for all it is worth from now on as Mr. Poole realizes the importance of this to this country. The people of the south realize that we must pay attention to something besides cotton. We cannot afford to fall behind every year from $20,000,000 to $35,000,000 in debt for food products. Georgia would soon be bankrupt if this state of affairs continues. It gets worse every year, and must be corrected, and nothing will help more towards helping bring about a change than to give the poultry and dairy industry in the south the necessary support that it should have, and only through these public exhibitions can this work be done.

It is a duty that you owe as a citizen of this state to help in every way possible in this line of work. Some interesting matter can be had in this respect by either calling on or writing T. M. Poole, secretary, 51 Inman bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

Yours very truly,

POULTRY FEED POULTRY FEED

WHAT SUCCESSFUL POULTRY PEOPLE ARE USING FOR FEEDING

The most successful poultry raisers of today, are feeding their baby chicks and also their laying hens on dry mash. There are yet people who continue to feed heavy grain, because they can buy a 100 pound bag of Scratch Feed (Grain) for about $2.25 to $2.50 per cwt., while they cannot buy the best dry mash (Aunt Patsy) at that price per cwt., still they overlook the fact that it requires one pound of grain a day, per hen, which, at $2.50 per cwt., or 2 1-2c per pound makes the scratch feed or grain, very expensive feeding. A 100 pound bag of Aunt Patsy's Poultry Feed will run 20 hens 30 days, on full feed, and at the cost of $2.00 per cwt., figures 1-2c a day per hen against 2 1-2c a day per hen fed on scratch grain feed. And the scratch feed only fattens the hen and produces very few eggs, while Aunt Patsy is, in every sense of the word, AN EGG PRODUCER.

All we ask is that you give AUNT PATSY one trial as compared with grain feeding and convince yourself that you can get more eggs from using Aunt Patsy than you will from the use of Scratch Feed and at the same time feed your hens at about half the cost of feeding them grain. AUNT PATSY POULTRY FEED CO.

ASK YOUR DEALER FOR AUNT PATSY POULTRY FEED.

If you are a Hen Eat Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed—the Egg producer.
If you are a Baby Chick Eat Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed.
If you are a Rooster—Well! Be gallant and tell the hen she should Eat Aunt Patsy.

A. C. WOOLLEY & CO., Atlanta, Ga.

FOR SALE—FURNITURE

A BETTER HOME

DOES your home give you all the comfort and satisfaction you would LIKE?

There's a big difference in homes. Some have the cozy, inviting atmosphere which makes men want to hurry back. Others are pleasant enough, but they lack something.

Those little touches that make houses cozy and "homelike" are not hard to attain. They are not the expensive things. A new chair with the right atmosphere here, a new dresser, a new davenport, a new sideboard, a new china cabinet, a new table—just a few things and your home is transformed. All these and lots of other good things can be had here at from 15 to 25 per cent cheaper than in the high rent districts.

Just pay our store a visit and see how easy it is to buy furniture of us. Our Liberal Credit System is at your service.

FOR RENT FURNISHED HOMES

Ansley Park

TO A-1 PARTIES who want to spend their summer months with us, we have listed in Ansley Park a few houses that are just as modern and attractive as can be, and that would be ideal for even a lifetime. Say nothing of delightful comfort and freedom. Nine and ten rooms each. See us about these. $75 each, and without furniture they would rent for this.

Inman Park

HERE we can offer you a pretty, modern bungalow, neatly furnished, with all modern conveniences, fine neighborhood, high location; will be vacant about July 1st to 7th. In several other desirable sections we have listed with us some neat, attractive, furnished houses of from five to six rooms, and you must see them, if you can use a furnished cottage, or bungalow. Of course we will want the best of people, and good references for these.

Furnished Flats

ON LINDEN and on Highland we have two very tastily furnished flats of five and six rooms. These carry all of the modern comforts, and are very snugly furnished, with the exception of linen; and we can get possession of you on very short notice, and can rent you until the warm weather is over. These locations are high and the neighborhoods choice, and you get them at the price of unfurnished apartments.

Property Owners Attention!

DURING the past month we have recorded the largest increase in new business since our office was established over 20 years ago. We have added an unusually large number of new landlords, and practically all of this came unsolicited. They knew where to get the best results, and brought it in. We make a specialty of handling investment properties. We can guarantee you good results and a minimum of worry and expense. Think it over and let us hear from you.

LOTS! LOTS! LOTS!

WE ARE OFFERING at private sale the choicest lots in East Point for residence purposes. These lots lie elegantly and most of them are beautifully shaded. Some of them have frontage of 75 feet by a depth of 400.

THESE LOTS range in price from $350 to $900 and the terms of payment are 10 per cent cash and 2 1-2 per cent per month. Each lot in this subdivision either fronts directly on a street having sewer, water and electric lights, or can be easily and quickly connected with them.

EAST POINT is the largest manufacturing city of its size in the entire country. An investment in a lot in this subdivision will prove a moneymaker. While Atlanta increased its population 40 per cent in 10 years, East Point increased its population over 300 per cent. East Point is built up solidly to the lots we are offering.

IF YOU ARE interested in suburban property WITHIN THE CITY LIMITS there is nothing offered that will excel lots in beautiful "Brownwood Park." This property belongs to the Joseph E. Brown Co. The lots range in price from $7 to $14 per front foot, and in size from 50 to 70 feet frontage, and all have good depth. These lots have front and side building lines, which assures home builders of ample protection. If you want a pretty home directly on the car line, with sewer, water and electric lights, we will arrange to have one built for you in this subdivision.

OUR "GRAND VIEW" LOTS, just to the right of Ponce de Leon, at North avenue and Bonaventure, are unexcelled by anything on the North Side. In fact, they are the cheapest lots in the city, considering the location and their commanding view. Look these properties over and talk with us about them.

ACREAGE

106 ACRES, between Decatur and Stone Mountain, on new car line. This tract fronts the highway for a distance of 1,000 feet. Price $150 per acre. Here is something extra good for subdividing into 5 and 15-acre tracts.

226 1-2 ACRES south of Decatur at $75 per acre. This is a beautiful tract, with a lake covering 6 acres of ground; excellent fishing. Will trade for Atlanta property.

150 ACRES on Powers' Ferry road at $80 per acre. When the Powers' Ferry road is widened and cherted, this property will be worth $150 per acre.

HERE IS A GOOD CHANCE FOR AN INVESTMENT IN A SMALL WAY OR AN EXCELLENT PROPOSITION FOR A PERSON WANTING A SMALL HOME FOR A LITTLE MONEY:

NO. 217, 219 AND 221 BELLWOOD AVENUE are 3-room cottages built so that you can add two additional rooms at a very little cost, with lots 35x108; all city improvements on this street. These cottages would be cheap at $2,000 each, but for a "quick turn," $1,429 will buy them.

(THE ABOVE IS AN OPPORTUNITY THAT YOU WON'T GET AGAIN SOON, SO DON'T LET IT PASS YOU.)

NO. 215 BELLWOOD AVENUE is two small stores on a lot 40x108, with room enough in the rear to build two small cottages. This rents for $14 per month as it stands. It is at the corner of BELLWOOD and OLIVER, which makes it very desirable. All city improvements on the street. This can be bought for $1,499.

NO. 161 BELLWOOD AVENUE is a 5-room, 1 1-2-story house, on a lot 26 1-4x108. The lot is elevated to 8 feet above the street and is a beautiful lot. A person wanting a nice little home for a little money will do well to investigate this. $1,478 will buy it.

(ALL of the above are within two blocks of the city schools, and there are two car lines within one block, AND WE CAN ARRANGE TERMS TO SUIT PURCHASER.)

WALTON STREET

THIS IS "DIRT CHEAP" compared with prices of other property all around this: Lot 20x73, 90 feet East from the corner of Bartow street. Only $650 per foot on reasonable terms. Other people selling property adjoining this at $750 per foot.

COOL, COMFORTABLE, EAST LAKE BUNGALOW

ONE of the loveliest and best arranged bungalows in East Lake, right on car line, is now for sale at a sacrifice price. The lot is beautifully situated, with South and East exposure, being 119x314 feet, and having fine shade and lawn. Back from the car line in front, far enough to give comfort and privacy is the house, with 9 rooms, 3 porches (all screened) and a sleeping porch, and furnace. All conveniences, servant's house, chicken runs and fine garden spot. This place is worth $6,500, but we will sell it for $5,850 and give good terms. See this property at once, or you'll miss it.

IF YOU are looking for a home in any part of the city and will let us know your wishes, we can suit you, from a 2-room cottage to an apartment, giving you any class or any type of house that you may want, and will appreciate an opportunity of convincing you we can do this. If you have any real estate, either central or semi-central, residences, cottages, bungalows or suburban property, list it with us and let us show you how quickly we can dispose of it for you.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Myrtle Street Residence and Other Sales Reported Yesterday. Applications for Office Space Continue Brisk—Several Sales Scheduled at Court House Next Tuesday—Lots Offered at Brookhaven—Building Record a Surprise

Some small real estate sales, including a residence and some building lots, were announced yesterday.

W. L. and John O. DuPree have sold for Henry A. Coles to Mrs. Peter F. Smith No. 286 Myrtle street for $9,500.

This property consists of an eight-room, two-story house on a lot 50x190.

OTHER SALES.

R. L. Turman, of the Turman, Black & Calhoun agency, has made the following sales:

For J. B. Daniel to a client, a vacant lot on the south side of St. Charles avenue, west of Fredrika street, for $2,500.

For the Lacy estate, four lots on the west side of Lawshe street between Fair and Greensferry, for $2,000 cash, to J. H. McCord.

For the Lacy estate to W. H. Chivers, one lot on the corner of Mildred and Greensferry, for $650.

Also for the Lacy estate to S. S. Horne, one lot on the west side of Lawshe street, between Fair and Greensferry avenue, for $450.

For the Bisbee estate to Z. W. Sanders, one lot on Grand street, for $390.

Sales made by Mr. Turman closed during the month of May amounted to $161,515.

OFFICE BUILDING NOTES.

The renting business continues strong whether it applies to residences and apartments or to office buildings.

The Hurt building, now under construction, has applications for space to fill over 150 of its offices. With the exception of probably a dozen or so, the applicants fant two or more offices each.

The tenth floor has already been leased to one concern, and negotiations are on, with another applicant, for a whole floor. These applicants alone will use fifty offices.

COURT HOUSE SALES.

There will be a number of public sales at the court house on next Tuesday, the first Tuesday in June.

Forrest & George Adair will offer for the Lawrence Thomas estate a lot on the west side of Capitol avenue, north of Georgia avenue. The lot is 43x209.

The same agents will offer parcels on Elizabeth, Wilson and Richmond streets, and Nos. 14 and 16 Ponders avenue, north of Marietta street, two houses on a lot 75x100.

BROOKHAVEN SUBDIVISION.

The Charles P. Glover Realty company is offering at private sale a subdivision of residence lots facing the Brookhaven Country club, which is now leased by the Capital City club, which will take formal possession today.

The lots are on Brookhaven drive and Peachtree road and face the club grounds. They are under reasonable restrictions, and offer all the inducement of lots in an exclusive community and facing country club grounds.

BUILDING RECORD.

The May buildig record was a pleasant surprise for those who had feared that the month would fall far behind the record of May, 1912. As it was the total was close to $800,000, less than $30,000 behind the corresponding period a year ago.

There is enough big building going on now, left over from last year, to keep things pretty busy for a large part of the year, and a good deal of medium-sized business is going on.

Permits from $100,000 to $40,000 are frequent enough these days not to be very conspicuous, and a feature of building is high class residence jobs.

Out on Peachtree road, in Druid Hills and around the club communities like Brookhaven and East Lake, permits are being taken for residence soating anywhere from $10,000 to $30,000.

AUCTION NEXT SATURDAY.

Six up-to-date homes and nineteen "ready-to-build-on" lots will be auctioned off Saturday, June 7, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon by Foster & Robson, agents. The property is located in the Tenth ward, and is only a step from the best car service in the city.

The houses and lots front on the following streets: Arlington avenue, Princess avenue and LaRosa Terrace. Arlington avenue runs off Lee street at the home of Colonel Ragsdale, and Princess avenue runs off Avon avenue, between the Baptist church and Captain E. R. Ryan's residence.

One of the features of this property is that all city improvements are down and paid for.

To reach this property one may take either the "Hapeville," the "College Park" or the "East Point" cars, and get off at Avon avenue. All of these lines start from town at the corner of Alabama and Forsyth streets.

SENATE BEGINS PROBE OF W. VA. COAL STRIKE

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—The senate investigation of conditions in the strike district of the west Virginia coal fields got under way today. A subcommittee named of the education and labor committee will begin the probe Monday and Chairman Swanson said every effort would be made to expedite the investigation.

It is probable that Governor Hatfield, of West Virginia, and the militia officers who took charge of the affected territory will be the first witnesses.

The subcommittee probably will go to West Virginia.

American Leads Mexic Federals In First Battle

(By Associated Press.)

LAREDO, Tex., May 31.—Federal forces numbering 250 men surprised a Carranza force of nearly 200 at Columbia, twenty-five miles above here on the Rio Grande, this morning. They poured upon them deadly fire from machine guns, killing twenty-five rebels and wounding many others, and won a complete victory.

The rebel forces, which had been stationed near Columbia for months, conducted a government of their own, collected customs duties on cattle and in general carried out their plan of separation from the Hjerta government.

Taking the offensive the federal forces under the command of General Villa Real, silently left Nuevo Laredo last night for Columbia, arriving at 7 o'clock this morning before the rebels realized the federals were in the vicinity.

The rebels soon became demoralized and fled precipitately.

Twenty rebels crossed the river at Minerva, Tex., and were arrested by the Fourteenth cavalry patrol.

It is said that among the federal forces is one American, Paul Mason, who, with Lee Christian, has been identified with several revolutions in Central America. The American, it is said, took an important part in directing the federals.

Later in the day the rebels were reinforced by 300 men from Hidalgo. When the fresh forces arrived the federals are reported to have abandoned many of their prisoners and to have returned to Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, leaving Columbia again in the hands of the rebels.

Gen. Mercado Named Chihuahua Governor

CHIHUAHUA CITY, Mex., May 31.—General Samuel R. Mercado, recently recalled from Parral, today was appointed military governor of Chihuahua state. He succeeds General Antonio Ravago, who has been called to Mexico City.

Colonel Romero with 1,800 Federals is marching south in an effort to restore rail and wire communication along the Mexican Central railway as far as Carrizon.

In a fight with insurgents at Saucillo, the government reports twenty-five rebels killed and several taken prisoners.

The government column is carrying several pieces of heavy artillery. The insurgent strength is estimated at 1,400, well mounted but poorly armed and with no heavy artillery.

YOU CAN FISH IN PIEDMONT LAKE DURING JUNE, BUT YOU CAN ONLY TAKE OUT BIG 'UNS

The lake in Piedmont park is open to the public for fishing through the month of June.

If anybody thinks this invitation is a joke, he's badly mistaken. The lake is full of fish. A few years ago the United States government stocked it with bream. They have grown and fattened until now they measure eight inches or more in length and are wide and plump in proportion.

Only one proviso attaches to the invitation, and it is this: No person will be allowed to leave the park with more than six fish. The person who tries to get by with a larger string will stand a poor chance. Park employes are throughout the park. They will stop such a person, take away all of his fish, even the six allowed, and have him arrested.

Also, though this is not an ironclad proviso, persons are requested to throw back small fish. Naturally, if a man is limited to six he will want those to be large ones. Hence the park authorities expect no great difficulty in persuading the fishermen to be good sports in this particular.

EVERYBODY IS WELCOME.

Everybody is welcome from the small boy with a stick, a piece of string and a bent pin, to the fisherman of elaborate paraphernalia who rents a boat and proceeds with fancy reel and alluring fly to tempt the frolicsome bream.

You may start today, if your religious scruples permit, and you may fish every day through June. On July 1 the fishing stops, as by that time the supply will have been reduced to the point where the fish that are left must be "saved for seed," as the farmers say.

Letting the public fish in the lake is a part of the policy of increasing the number and variety of outdoor activities in the parks, in which policy the park board and Park Manager Coleyare in hearty co-operation. They hope to allow fishing for one month each year.

Perhaps it is not generally realized how many different forms of amuse*ment are to be had in Piedmont park.*

First, and foremost in the summer months, is the swimming in the lake. Probably second, while it's on, is the fishing. Then come boating, baseball, tennis, track and field sports, the speedway for motorcycles and horses, the bridle path, and the children's playground.

JURY MAY INVESTIGATE LONG BEACH DISASTER

(By Associated Press.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 31.—The Los Angeles county grand jury will decide today whether further investigation shall be made of the Long Beach pier disaster, in which thirty-seven persons lost their lives last Saturday.

District Attorney John D. Fredericks said he would present to the county grand jury the verdict returned by the coroner's jury at Long Beach, and would ask whether it desired to make an investigation for the purpose of fixing the responsibility.

The coroner's jury held that the disaster was caused by decayed timbers, but did not place the blame.

ARMY ORDERS

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31.—First Lieutenant Guy E. Manning, Twelfth infantry, has been retired by the president, and will proceed to his home. Colonel John Mills, corps of engineers, in addition to present duties will relieve Colonel Frederick V. Abbott, on duties pertaining to Boston engineer district.

Colonel Abbott, Corps of engineers, will proceed to New York for duty, relieving Colonel William T. Rossell, Corps of engineers.

Leave granted First Lieutenant George R. Guild, Twenty-second infantry, April 22, extended tow months.

Blistering Temperatures and Absence of Rains Caused Rise

Buying Force in Wheat Had Greater Momentum Than at Any Time Since the Beginning of the Adverse Weather

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, May 31.—Buying force in wheat today had greater momentum than at any time since the beginning of adverse weather and crop reports from the southwest. Notwithstanding setbacks due to heavy profit taking, the market closed steady at an advance of 1¼@⅞c to net. Corn finished ⅛c to 1¼c up; oats with a gain of ⅛c to ⅝c and provisions varying from 5c down to an increased cost of 20c.

Blistering temperatures and absence of needed rain worried not only Kansas, but Oklahoma and Missouri and Nebraska as well. What was worse, no forecast gave the slightest hope of a general rain. A material cut in the official wheat crop of India tended further to disturb bears and there were also predictions of small world shipments. Floods of selling on tops from sensationally bullish reports of late that prevented considerably higher prices than were reached in the wheat market. On all hard spots the offerings invariably grew to such volume as to turn the course of trade, but only quickly lessened. A notable feature of business was improvement in cash demand, especially by southern millers.

Primary receipts of wheat (two days) were 737,000 bushels, a year ago 250,000 bushels. Exports of wheat and flour equalled 217,000 bushels.

Belated covering by shorts in corn advanced. May sharply at the close. Otherwise demand was not urgent and prices merely followed the action of wheat.

Severe damage reports from the southwest carried oats higher.

Provisions were helped upward by an advance in the hog product, but offerings were liberal. There was uncertainty as to what might be expected in the monthly statement of stocks on hand.

AUSTIN & RAIT GRAIN LETTER

NEW YORK, May 31.—The spring wheat market has regained its prominence and activity as a factor in public interest, and, as was natural with the sharp rise in prices, the last two weeks has based upon mammoth crop predictions, has found investors conservatively buying movement that advanced prices several cents yesterday. Whether the advance, large crop promises and a further advance of equal proportions is to follow, depends entirely upon crop conditions were evened up. Unlike the corn and oats situation, which has been so long drawn to expect but moderate advances and sell out the material strength of coffee, Brazilian sacks, on hand.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: Wheat—We are inclined to look for further buying orders, as short sellers will probably be disinclined to go over Sunday with conditions southwest as they present themselves this morning.

Corn—The rains and the undertone of firmness. Weather conditions continue fine for the growing crop.

Oats—With the passing of to May delivery today the market will lack any possible strength which has been afforded the deferred futures from the strength in that month. There is considerable talk of some increase in the acreage account of damage to crop thus far. Recent conditions in the way of weather should demonstrate to the trade that the crop has improved during the past ten days.

Provisions—Market shows a firm undertone and on all good recessions we believe purchases should be made.

The Omaha World-Herald has the following from Hastings, Neb., May 29: "The winter wheat crop is in need of a rain; want of moisture and several fields are already so dry that the blades rattle and in a few days more many of them will be so dead they will burn if there is much hot wind and sun without rain."

Kansas City says: "Corn and wheat region bulletin shows high temperatures all over the belt last night. Many points over 100 and several over 104."

Chicago cloudy; Minneapolis cloudy, 70; Terre Haute clear, 75; Peoria clear, 85; Springfield clear, 78; Toledo clear, 72; Kansas City clear; Omaha part cloudy, 80; no rain.

Quite a few scattered buying orders in December corn this morning. We could get any report when would indicate general confinement in oats condition. In fact the extremely high temperature which has been general over the southwest can scarcely have been anything but detrimental. It cannot further, see anything but bright prices in prospects.

Winfield, Kan., it was 102 here yesterday and day. The wheat is in bad condition here.

H. W. Snow says: "My reports yesterday and this morning from Kansas and Oklahoma continue fairly covering both states, show crop damage already severe and getting worse daily. Areas where conditions have been uniformly good up to this time, have now report that the crop is going back and it looks as if these may have over 25 points and Oklahoma still more since May 1.

My reports to date from country agents indicate a decrease in acreage of at least three quarters of a million acres. Apparently the average condition is the lowest on record.

The prospects is good in Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois, however, the latter state has good gut decidedly poor in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas. The June report is usually the highest of the season and I think as if this report may not forecast much if anything above a billion bushels.

John Inglis wires from Great Bend, under date of May 29: Eastern Fund, Astwood, Pawnee and Kansas, Barton counties describing more serious, fields burning up rapidly.

Kansas City wires: "Have talked to various Kansas points and Oklahoma, brought about a one seriously alarmed over crop outlook." Hutchinson, Kan., wires: "Hot, dry, hot, consider situation very serious."

Minneapolis country receipts quite a little better. Mills only bidding 1¾ over for No. 1 northern. North Dakota blue stem. Offering at 2c over.

New Orleans continues to sell corn, just sold 100,000 more.

Cudahy, Kan., reports hot winds yesterday. Virtually no rain. Crop and wheat going back ward every day.

Atwater's forecast:

Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Michigan and Dakota, generally fair, warmer.

Indiana, probably showers.

Wisconsin, Mississippi, Iowa and Nebraska, unsettled, cooler.

AUSTIN & RAIT GRAIN LETTER

NEW YORK, May 31.—The spring wheat market has regained its prominence and activity as a factor in public interest, and, as was natural with the sharp rise in prices, the last two weeks has based upon mammoth crop predictions, has found investors conservatively buying movement that advanced prices several cents yesterday. Whether the advance, large crop promises and a further advance of equal proportions is to follow, depends entirely upon crop conditions were evened up. Unlike the corn and oats situation, which has been so long drawn to expect but moderate advances and sell out the material strength of coffee, Brazilian sacks, on hand.

TEXAS CROP SUMMARY

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 21.—Cotton crop summary week ending May 30:

By J. B. Turner.

The week's weather was very favorable over 95 per cent of the cotton-growing area of the state. Over the remaining 5 per cent moisture is needed, and because of a lack of it, the seed having been existent for some weeks, there is some decrease in the contemplated acreage. This territory is along the coast from Winston southwest. In northern, the greater part of central and throughout western counties very nearly approach the ideal, the soil having an abundant supply of moisture and being in excellent till. Throughout all this territory chopping is making very rapid progress and the warm weather of the week was highly beneficial. The crop in these sections is much early nor late, and the farmers feel that the promise is a very good one.

In the southern part of central Texas and in the southwest and along the coast the crop is not so well advanced as is usual for the season, but during the week rapid growth was made, as rains have supplied moisture, except districts above noted, and higher temperatures, the needed stimulus to growth. The crop appears fully to have maintained its condition of one week ago, when my reports gave it as 86, with some tendency toward raising the percentage.—Miller & Cotter.

"FIRST LADY" OF CANADA AND HER NEW OHIO ELECTRIC

MRS. R. L. BORDEN.

Wife of Canada's prime minister. Recently she was honored by her husband's political confreres with the kift of an "Ohio" electric limousine, as a token of the esteem in which they hold her. Here she is shown standing beside the car.

In the honor accorded Mrs. R. L. Borden, wife of the prime minister of Canada, when she was made the recipient of a handsome "Ohio Electric" brougham by the members of the Conservative party of Canada, tangible evidence was given of the esteem in which the first lady of Canada is held.

In view of Mrs. Borden's enthusiasm for outdoor recreation, it is needless to say that the Conservative members made a most fortunate and appropriate selection when they chose for their gift the luxuriously appointed Ohio electric, the most exclusive and efficient electric car obtainable—the pleasures of which Mrs. Borden began to enjoy on Saturday in the course of a trip to the Royal Ottawa Golf club.

K. T. McKinstry, manager of the Firestone-Columbus Southern company, drove to Marietta and return last Sunday in an Ohio electric, an exact replica of the car presented to Mrs. Borden. In addition to that, he covered twenty-nine miles more in miscellaneous trips, including one to East Lake and return. With him was H. R. Fisher, of the Golden Eagle Buggy compan. Another trip on one charge was made formerly by Mr. McKinstrey to Stone Mountain and return, and then thirty miles additional, including a trip to East Atlanta. Mr. McKinstrey expects to drive to Stone Mountain next Sunday, and is planning a trip to Douglasville later.

SENATOR BURTON DEFENDS CENTRAL RESERVE ASS'N.

Claims This Plan Far Superior to Proposed Reginal Reserve

(By Associated Press.)

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 31.—Senator Burton, a member of the national monetary commission, in an address tonight to the Youngstown Association of Credit Men, came to the defense of the Central Reserve association, proposed by the commission in its plan for financial reform, and criticised as inadequate the regional reserve associations favored by Democrats in congress. Senator Burton declared that all the benefits that might lie in the regional reserve plan could be found in the central reserve plan and insisted that only through some such central, authoritative agency could stability be assured in times of financial storms.

"The objections to the regional plan in the first place that it is not truly national," said the senator. "All our banking business, like transportation and many other commercial and industrial operations, is more and more becoming national, and this applies with special emphasis to the utilization of banking reserve. Separate and unrelated organizations would seek to maintain their own credit and supply their own customers without regard to the needs of others. There would be no effective unity of action in facing a financial storm.

CENTRAL PLAN EXPLAINED.

"All the advantages which can be obtained from the separation into different regional associations can be as adequately and far more fully secured by the establishment of branches of one central institution.

Under the regional plan, in case any one bank should be in trouble, it could have ready resort to the banking resources of but a fraction of the country; whereas, under a central association plan it would have the immediate support and backing of all the banks of the country. In times of slackness when a bank has a surplus to invest, under the central association plan, it could seek the very widest field for investment and add which under the regional plan would be very much limited. The two objects, viz., an adequate and elastic currency and the proper utilization of reserves, can be best obtained by a central association."

SCARES COMPULSORY GUARANTEES.

Senator Burton attacked the proposal for the compulsory guarantee of bank deposits as a 'tax upon well managed institutions for the delinquencies of bad judgment, imprudence or dishonesty in the conduct of other institutions for which they were in no way responsible and whose errors they would have no power of proving."

He replied to the argument that under the monetary commission plan, money would flow to the great centers of trade by declaring that such a flow could no more be controlled than could the tide of population and that money would naturally seek places where it was in demand. Control fo deposits so that they can not be diverted to speculative uses, he said, was necessary and feasible.

108,000 VISITED LAST U. C. V. MEET

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 31.—Figures compiled from conductors' reports estimated by officials of the roads which enter Chattanooga boost the figures of the reunion attendance even beyond those primarily arrived at. The estimate, though rough, is compiled from reliable figures and will probably stand as the final detailed test within a margin of one or two thousand in total. The aggregate attendance stands 108,000.

NAVAL CAPTAIN DEMANDS PROBE OF HIS FITNESS

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Rear Admiral Robert M. Doyle, the commanant of the Norfolk navy yard, recently made an unfavorable report upon the fitness of Captain J. B. Quinby, commanding the receiving ship Franklin, at the Norfolk yard. Captain Quinby demanded an investigation and the navy department has ordered a court of inquiry to meet at Norfolk next Monday to examine and report upon the case. The court is composed of Rear Admiral W. B. Capron, Captains W. I. Chambers and W. S. Benson, with Lieutenant Commander J. M. Luby as judge advocate.

NEGROES PARDONED.

Governor Blease has paroled Ganes Saxon, a negro, who was convicted at Barnwell of murder in March, 1907, recommended to the mercy of the court, and sentenced to thirty years in the state penitentiary. Attorney General Peeples indorsed the petition for clemency, stating that the negro lived on his plantation for several years and that the father of the negro was killed by the Peeples in the time of slavery. Saxon killed another negro named Jack Peleas.

Frank Stevenson, colored, who was convicted before Magistrate Bueschel in Richland county, February, 1912, of petit larceny, and sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment, was pardoned for the reason that restoring citizenship so he could be used as a witness by the state in a case, he having served the sentence imposed.

Ben Barkeley, colored, convicted of manslaughter at Laurens in October, 1910, and sentenced to two years imprisonment, was pardoned by the governor. The judge and solicitor recommended clemency, while it was also shown that the negro had killed a woman accidentally.

WILSON CHEERS TEAM WHEN BOSTON IS BEATEN

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—President Wilson demonstrated today that he is a real baseball fan. In the ninth inning of the game with Boston Washington tied the score by an exciting batting rally and the president jumped to his feet along with the crowd and cheered. Later when the home team won the game his face was beaming with enthusiasm. The Washington players have won every time the president has been in the grandstand and he has missed few home games.

The president put in a day of recration.

LITTLE BOY DROWNED; SISTER BARELY SAVED

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 31.—While a large number of children were on a picnic three miles from town, the small boys played in the creek. Seymour Thornsbury, aged twelve, got into deep water. His sister, Dorothy, aged fifteen, went to his assistance. Seymour threw his body around her and both sank. Alma Pressler, aged fifteen, sprang into the water and succeeded in saving the girl, after an heroic struggle, witnessed by many persons. The boy's body was recovered.

Prince at the Wheel

BERLIN, May 31.—The Prince of Wales, who is greatly enjoying his sojourn in Germany, has arrived at Stuttgart, where his royal highness was heartily greeted by the king and queen of Wurtemberg and other members of the royal family. The prince, during his motor car ride though the Black Forest on his way to Stuttgart, drove the car himself for some miles under the guidance of the chauffeur, who is a Lancashire man named Powell. At Heidelberg, the university town and the prettiest in all Germany, the prince climbed Heiligenberg and visited the Church of the Holy Ghost, a fourteenth century structure. He also visited the famous old castle and saw a giant wine cask made to hold 50,000 gallons. Near the wine cask in the castle cellar, which is the largest in the world, is a dummy clock made by a dwarf named Perkeo. The prince was much amused to see that when the pendulum is pulled the door of the clock flies open and a fox brush is dashed in your face. Perkeo had the reputation of being able to drink fifteen quarts of strong wine daily. The most unconventional incident of the prince's visit to Heidelberg was his taking coffee at an excursionists' holiday resort outside the city. This place was formerly a mill attached to a monastery and is well known as Stiefsmühle. The proprietor did not recognize the prince till his royal visitor was leaving. He says he will always treasure the cup from which the prince drank his coffee. With Major Cadozan, the prince sat at a small table like an ordinary visitor. Before leaving Heidelberg the prince visited the rooms at the hotel Prince Karl, where King Edward celebrated his engagement to Queen Alexandra in 1901, and the residence of Professor Ihne, where both King George and the Duke of Clarence studied.

When the prince arrived at Darmstadt with the Grand Duke and Duchess of Hesse he made his first acquaintance with the most important word in the German language, "verboten" (forbidden), during his trip up the Rhine from Bingen to Rudesheim. The prince wanted to be the first to leave the steamer on returning to Bingen, but was waved back by the man in charge of the gangway, to whom he attempted to hand his ticket, and motioned to take his place in the line and give his ticket to a sailor. Duly intimidated, the prince withdrew, and for a minute or two the young man found himself sandwiched between a motly crowd of market women, tradespeople, priests and navvies.

TWO KNOTTY PROBLEMS FACE MERCER TRUSTEES

Board Will Be Called Upon to Decide Petition Abolishing Fraternities

MACON, Ga., May 31.—The board of trustees of Mercer university will have two knotty problems to solve when they meet next Monday afternoon to wind up the business of the present term. The question of completely abolishing the Greek letter fraternities from the college, and the investigation of the friction that is said to exist between President S. Y. Jameson, the faculty and student body and prudential committee, will demand their attention.

Last February a hearing of the alleged discord between the head of the university, the faculty and prudential committee was held here and the finding of the investigation was left to a committee, who will submit their report at the trustees' meeting Monday afternon.

The question of abolishing the Greek letter fraternities will be squarely up to the trustees for final decision. The faculty was recently presented with a petition from the non-fraternity students at the university, asking that the faculty petition the trustees to abolish the fraternities. Nearly 200 non-fraternity student signed the petition. Later President Jameson presented a set of resolutions he had drawn up himself, favoring the abolition of the Greek letter fraternities, stating in the petition that the Greek letter fraternities were undemocratic in their very constitution as well as management, thereby creating class distinctions based on other grounds than merit and ability.

The faculty heard the resolutions that were drawn up by President Jameson, but refused to recommend them.

After it had been announced that the non-fraternity men were exerting themselves to have the college rid of fraternities, the fraternity men now attending college and the alumni members of Greek letter fraternities sent a petition to the college faculty, asking for a hearing before the final issue was taken.

France's New Cabinet

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 31.—Premier Barthou's new cabinet, with M. Barthou as premier, already finds its position precarious. In introducing the ministerial program in the chamber of deputies M. Barthou said that the government has taken over the project of Premier Briand ministry to increase the period of active military service to three years, and the bill for the supplementary credit of $100,000,000 for the reorganization of the military armaments. These huge efforts, he said, were necessary, in view of the increase of the other armies of Europe.

A reference to the question of electoral reform, which caused the fall of the last ministry, was received with a howl later from all parts of the house. M. Barthou said the new government would appoint an inter-parliamentary committee with a view to finding a solution acceptable to both the senate and the chamber.

The ministerial declaration was coolly received, especially by those on the Radical benches. The part referring to the proposed increase of armaments was loudly cheered by the center and by the monarchist right.

The new cabinet was immediately interpellated by the extreme Radicals, who object to the new ministry chiefly on the ground that it contains very few members of their party. M. Franklin-Bouillon led the attack. He reproached the new ministry with being, after the Briand cabinet, a third edition of the Poincare government. It was the least radical government France has had for fifteen years. Amid prolonged applause from his Radical friends and the Socialists, he continued: "We are all ready to vote what is necessary for the safety of the country, but you must prove to us that the measures proposed are absolutely necessary. The campaign of 'artificial patriotism' has been started by reactionary and Nationalist papers. We do not want to be duped by it."

In his reply, M. Barthou emphasized the importance of reverting to the system of three years' active military service, and declared that he was convinced that the three years' system alone could assure the defense of the nation, its security, and its honor. When the life of the nation was at stake half measures were impossible.

A vote of confidence was then carried, but only by 225 votes against 162, a large number of deputies, about 200, abstained from voting. Most of them were Socialists or Radical Socialists.

SPLENDID PECAN CROP PREDICTED BY GROWERS

Georgia and Florida Association Names Officers at Thomasville Meeting

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 31.—After being in session for two days the South Georgia and Florida Pecan Growers' association adjourned yesterday afternoon to meet in Thomasville again next year. This place was chosen by unanimous vote of the members, who reported one of the most successful and enjoyable meetings in the history of the organization.

The officers chosen for the coming year were: President, B. W. Stone, of Thomasville, vice president, R. C. Simpson, Monticello, Fla.; secretary, W. W. Bassett, Monticello; treasurer, D. L. Williams, Cairo.

According to the reports of the members of the association, who are all actively interested in the pecan business, the crop this season will be a fine one, much better than that of last year. As showing something of the standing of the pecan industry in this section it was reported that within a radius of not more than sixty-five miles from Thomasville there were ten thousand acres planted in groves and the number next year is expected to be materially increased. More than a hundred thousand trees were sold by the nurseries in this section last season and large advance orders are already reported for the coming season.

The crop of 1912 shows that the average price obtained for the nuts was about 47 cents per pound. This means that while some of the very large nuts netted the growers $1.25 and some of the very small seedlings only from 15 to 20 cents, the average price of the crop for the season was 47 cents.

Among the visitors here at this meeting were C. A. Vanduzee, president of the National Nut Growers' association; J. B. Wright, of Cairo, and H. K. Miller, of Monticello, both ex-presidents of that organization; Editor Wilson, of the "Nut Grower;" W. W. Carroll, of Monticello; C. A. Snedeker, of Waycross; H. C. White, H. W. Smithwick, H. H. Hume, R. C. Simpson, A. A. Rich and a number of others.

Typist's Downfall

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 24.—A sad story of the downfall of a young typist, Mademoiselle Blanche Compoint, who was unfolded after her arrest a few days ago. She earned $30 a month, and with this supported her parents, her grandmother, and her lover, a ne'er-do-well scoundrel named Gaston Gunther, who, though living on the blood-boiled, preferred to live on the charity of his hard-working fiancee rather than earn his own living. She soon found her salary too meagre to meet all the demands made upon it, and took a boarding house to try to help the family fortunes.

The venture was unsuccessful, and her downfall was the result. She took the name of the "Countess de Briance," which her good appearance enabled her to carry off, and in this guise visited many of the principal Paris shops. As she examined goods which she proposed to purchase she skillfully pilfered smaller articles, which she afterwards sold. She was caught in the act the other day, and after examination of her belongings showed the extent of her depredations. It is estimated that within three months she stole goods to the value of $6,000, and there is no doubt left in the minds of the authorities that her first fall was due directly to sympathy for those dependent on her.

Going Away?

YOU WILL SAVE TIME, AVOID delays, have your money always safe, and, practically, enjoy the many benefits of having a bank account in every country in which you may travel, if you carry with you a Letter of Credit or Travelers' Cheque. It will enable you to know exactly the relative worth of your paper in foreign countries, and enable you to keep an accurate account of your expenditures.

And yet the cost is very small. A mere nothing compared with the innumerable benefits they afford.

We will be glad to have you come in and talk the matter over with us.

EXAMS AND MILITARY DRILLS WILL MARK LAST WEEK AT MARIST

BY HOWARD M'CALL, JR.

One more week and Marist boys will leave for the summer. Next week is exam week. All cadets will take the final exams and at the same time, they will have several military events.

For Wednesday afternoon the Marist officers' club has planned an interesting program. It starts at 4:30 with dress parade. Then comes guard mount, company exhibition drills and last of all, a promenade.

Sponsors and maids of honor have been chosen for the company A and B and for the staff. This is expected to be a gala event. Booths will be erected and will be gayly decked.

Thursday afternoon there will be the company competitive drills and a military field day. The cadets will drill in a competitive individual drill for the Silverman and McCall medals.

On Friday evening at 8:30 the graduating class will receive their diplomas, and other students will receive their prizes. The graduating class is very small this year, and is composed of Charles Allen, Gilbert Cheves, Rhodes Haverty and Ralph Lewis.

Invitations have been sent out for the week's exercises and every cadet is looking forward to the last week.

FORMWALT STREET

The seventh and second grades are in the lead for the beautiful picture for attendance.

The fifth will carry off the prize in spelling. The speling in this class has been most satisfactory to teacher and principal.

We are all interested in the race for Mrs. Sams' prize, a gold medal. The two honor boys are Frank Huskin and William Johnson. They have been honor boys ever since they entered Formwalt, Frank seven years ago and William eight. This month's marks will decide the winning of this great honor.

The seventh grade is very proud of the fact that the beautiful plaques which they won have their name engraved on them first.

We are very much obliged to Dr. Toepel for the beautiful basketball.

Miss Graves visited the fourth and first grade A and allowed them to play ball because of their good work. It was the first time the little people of first grade A had played this game and it proved a joyful and interesting game to them.

Miss Milledge gave the first grade A excellent music. They have received excellent every time this year in reading one, and then they received very good.

We are finishing our examinations this week and all are anxious to see our marks, for some of the children's promotion depends upon this month's marks. We sincerely hope those children will not be disappointed.

On last Thursday our baseball team held a regular reception and received the congratulations of the entire school. Every boy on the team did his duty, and each one separately is to be congratulated on our victory, for it was largely due to their team work that Formwalt still holds the championship.

We feel also that the efficient help and coaching that they received also helped them to win the pennant and we wish to thank them by name, those who were interested in our success. It was very fortunate for us that three of the boys on the Boys' High school team were old Formwalt boys and they were still loyal enough and anxious enough for us to succeed it give us valuable help. We wish to thank Sam Armistead, Lawrence Fox and Comer Weaver, our own Formwalt boys, for their help and loyalty to their alma mater. Besides this, Deck Wallace and Jack Baldwin, two other high school boys and players on our 1911 and 1912 pennant winning teams, stood by us through our entire 1913 season and gave the boys so much help and encouragement that we can never thank them enough.

We are sending four boys who are now on our team this year to the high school, and while we hate to part with them, we know that they will not forget us and that they will always be ready to help Formwait when we need them.

Our boys played Marist on Thursday and were beaten by the score of 7 to 6.

If Marist wants to play again we are ready to beat her now, and just look out for the 1914 Formwalt team. We will show you what we can do again.

HILL STREET SCHOOL

On Friday, May 23, the Hill Street School Literary and Debating society held its yearly elocution-declamation contest. The program was:

"Face on the Floor"—Bessie Jones.
"Psalm of Life"—Mamie Norton.
"The Recessional"—Catherine Alexander.
"Spectacles"—Rosa Goldstein.
"The Ballad of Splendid Silence"—Rosie Siletzky.
"Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight!"—Annie May Cooper.
"How Tom Sawyer Painted the Fence"—Lizzie Douley.
Music.
"The Murderer's Secret"—Harmon Perkins.
"Duty of the American Scholar"—Earle Carter.
"An Appeal to Arms"—Sanford Bell.
"An Appeal to Arms"—Ernest Smith.
"An Appeal to Arms"—Willis Grist.

Although everyone tried his best and each deserved a medal, there were only two medals to be awarded. The judges rendered their decision in favor of Lizzie and Willie Grist.

After writing the compositions on "Fly Prevention," we feel that if all the methods we have given be carried out, we could prevent the fly, after all.

We received answers to the letters we sent to Woburn, Mass. Each child received two or three letters in answer to the one he sent. The letters were very interesting, and we were delighted to find out so many things about Massachusetts and its schools. One thing we were surprised to hear is that they are not taught any grammar, spelling or penmanship. Wouldn't you like to have a week's vacation once in every eight weeks? That is what they have in Massachusetts.

BANQUET AT PIEDMONT FOR BOYS' HIGH SENIORS ON JUNE THE SIXTH

There will be big doings for the members of the graduating class of the Boys' High school on the night of June 6, immediately after the closing exercises have been held, for the members of the class have appointed a committee composed of Roy Manning, chairman, Guy Lipscomb, Charles Cotney, and William Wash to make arrangements for a banquet and it was announced at school Friday that the Piedmont had been selected as the place most suitable for such an affair, and the final details have been completed and all that remains now is for the three dozen boys in the classical division to pay their assessment of $3 per between now and next Friday night. To represent the faculty, the members have selected Prof. J. W. Simmons, the instructor of physics, to be present. Mr. Simmons has been one of the faculty who has done his utmost for the benefit of the boys under his instruction, and who has taken a kindly and personal interest in the school work of the class as a whole, besides acting as treasurer for the athletic association, and assisting the managers of the several athletic associations in putting forth the best in the school. The boys appreciate what he has done for the class as a whole and individually, and think this the most opportune time to express their thanks.

EDGEWOOD SCHOOL

But eight days remain before we get our annual summer holidays, when all childish cares will be forgotten, books cast aside and sport and recreation take the place of study. For many of us it means the severing of school associations, where ties of friendship have been cemented, and our entry into other fields, either of work or renewed studies in higher schools. The eighth grade pupils, while appreciating the return of the season that ushers in their holidays, look with regret upon the time when they must bid farewell to their teachers and school friends, and take up the still harder studies that are before them.

The Edgewood baseball team, though they failed to win the loving cup in their contest with Formwait, are well satisfied with the showing they have made throughout the season. It meant a lot of hard work to win the championship of the north side, and honor of representing this section in the final championship, and the class of ball they put up, where the entire nine innings of the final game were necessary to show the winning mettle, and making this score in the very last inning of the game, shows that they met foemen worthy of their steel. Edgewood showed that they were as good losers as they had been winners, and they have been congratulated from every side on the showing they made.

Miss Albert, the teacher of the fifth grade, gave a party at her home Friday night in honor of the Edgewood boys, the latter being accompanied by their girl friends, which insured a pleasurable evening, refreshments a-plenty were played, and the prizes were won by Catherine Foote and Gibbs Fowler. A hand-painted fan and a gold stick pin were the prizes offered.

The two first grades gave a delightful entertainment last week to enable them to purchase some more to procure pictures for their rooms. The program was as follows:

Greeting—Hazel Grubbs.
"When Visitors Come 'Round"—First grades.
"Three Little Toadstools"—First grade girls.
Cap Drill—Twelve boys.
Songs—First grade girls.
"Dolly Rose"——Myrtle Guest.
Recitation—Howard Bentley.
"Sunbonnet Babies"—First grade.
"The Sick Doll"—Three girls of first grade.
Songs—First grade.
"I Wish I Were a Lady"—Dell Fife.
"Little Fine Ladies—Six little girls.
Doll Drill—Sixteen girls.
"I Wish I Were a Grown-up"—David Parrish.
Recitation—Hazel Braswell, Floy Baird.
Miss Mary's rose garden.
"I'm the Little Bird That Tells"—Ruby Lewis.
The Bachelor Tableau.
Good-by"—Six boys.

MILDRED REILS.

BOULEVARD

The annual spelling match is in progress and is now in the seventh grade. Two children of the primary grades, Clarence Bone, of the second, and Gregory Griggs, of the fourth, succeeded in reaching the sixth grade. The champion speller of the school will soon be announced.

The last meeting of the Parent-Teacher club will be held at the school at 3 o'clock Thursday. Dr. Daley will give them a lecture at 3:30.

The following, written by Inman Carroll, captain of the ball team, sums up the work of that prosperous team for 1913:

The Boulevard baseball team has certainly had a good season. We went 11 out of 14 of the games played in the School league. We finished second, while Edgewood took first place. Edgewood beating us by only one game. In the championship series we were only too sorry to see Edgewood lose, but Boulevard held the north side honors by winning two of the three-game series and tying the third one. The championship games at Marist college were very thrilling, and those who did not get to see the games missed a treat.

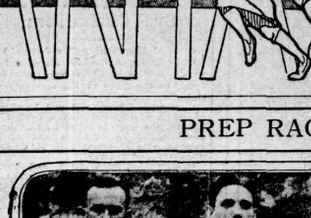
This being Boulevard's first year in the school league, and considering the showing they made, next year we expect to come out pennant-winners.

The score in the first of the championship games was 7 to 4, the second game was a clean-up, 7 to 0, the last fray being the tightest and most interesting of them all, 6 to 6.

PREP RAG WINNERS



The team of the Boys' High school which made such a clean sweep in the race for the championship in the Prep league this season. They were not defeated a single time. Left to right, top row: Weaver, Lipscomb, Fox, Ewing, Spurlock. Below: Sams, Smith, Floyd, Johnston, Reynolds.

STATE STREET

Last week we had a "peace day" celebration. The origin of the day, the cost of war, and the progress toward a world peace were each discussed. Miss Pitts gave us a description of the "House in the Woods," where the first international peace congress was held in 1899. She visited there three years ago. It is about a mile from The Hague. A broad driveway through a densely wooded park leads from this historic house. Such beautiful woods! Enormous trees of linden and elm and beech, with the sunlight filtering through their spreading, leafy boughs, and casting a twilight shadow over all. One might expect the road through such a forest to lead straight to the gates of Paradise, where perpetual peace prevails.

The G. Y. Pierce society of the eighth grade held its final meeting for the year last Friday. Our guests were the children who have been perfect in attendance for the term. We stress attendance here, for without it no good work can be accomplished. The pupil who is absent one day and out the next can never be properly taught, say the least.

That our pupils and patrons realize the prime importance of regularity, is broadly attested by our high weekly per cent of attendance.

GERTRUDE BREWER.

PEEPLES STREET SCHOOL

Last week head marks in spelling in the second grade A were made by Lois Bolles and Lula Barton. The picture given in the third grade for the best work in spelling went to Katherine Culberson.

Dr. Toepel paid us a visit last Tuesday. The different grades played games for him, and he helped us with our athletic work.

Just seven more days before school closes. We hope that everybody will be promoted—most of us have worked hard this year, and succeeded, but some of us worked just as hard and have not been burdened with overwhelming success. Maybe those who have tried and failed have shown stronger than those whose efforts were crowned with success. It takes more courage to meet failure than it does to receive praise. In the words of Ella Wheeler Wilcox:

"There are songs enough for the hero
Who climbs on the heights of fame;
I sing for the disappointed
For those who have missed their aim."

Anyhow, we have been happy together in dear old Peeples, and we are sorry to separate, though it is only for a few months.

FRYOR STREET

The entertainment at our school which was to have taken place Thursday night and Friday afternoon, has been postponed Monday night, June 2, at 8 o'clock, and Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. No tickets will be sold at the door, so anyone desiring to come had better obtain a ticket now. The reason of this is the death of one of our former teachers, Mrs. Edwin Winn. She came to our school when it was first built, five and a half years ago, and she was a faithful worker, as our school grew in usefulness. All the present higher grades have been taught by her, and a vacant place will be left in our hearts. She was married to Mr. Winn on June 5 of last year, and now as her first happy married year was nearly over she was snatched away. We can scarcely realize that our beloved teacher is no more. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved husband, mother and sisters. May our kind Heavenly Father comfort and sustain them in their great sorrow.

We must brace ourselves to bear this sorrow and so live that we shall be prepared when that day shall come to us, and live so that we shall go to a land that is fairer than the earth where we live.

CHARLES EARLE DEAN.

TENTH STREET.

On Friday, May 23, the fourth grade had a very hotly contested debate on the question of, "Resolved, That the cow is of more use to man than the horse." The judges decided in favor of the affirmative. The rebuttal was the most interesting part enjoyed by the victors. Although the negative side lost, the speeches on that side were all good. Dodson Choate and Dunbar Ogden had by far the best two speeches for their sides.

THE EVENING STORY — Two Viewpoints

(Copyright, 1913, by W. Werner.)

JESSICA WEST'S troubles began at an early age. Ordinarily women probably would have called them "fate." But Mrs. West, Jessica's anxious mother, was not ordinary. She defined them "naughtiness" and strove to eradicate the last shred of a root.

Mrs. West's married life had been desperately unhappy. In the beginning of it Philip, her husband, in her opinion, had been without a fault. She had delighted in his carelessness, but after a little she saw him in another light. He was boyishly impulsive, unmethodical, lacking in dignity, and a thousand other things that fretted her almost into nervous prostration. Finally, as the years saw no change for the better, a determination to bring about reform took possession of her.

Philip, neither excusing himself nor promising anything different, laughed; then he remonstrated, and then the end came because there was no other way.

"When you are willing to grant me the peace that is mine by right I will come back," he told her one day, and went out. Later an arrangement for Jessica, his child, to visit him when he should be in the city was made, but Mrs. West had never seen him again. In her heart she accused him of grossly misunderstanding and of putting her in a false position. Forgiveness, she felt, was out of the question, a reconciliation even more impossible.

That all had been years before, but with his failings constantly in mind she guarded Jessica with zealous care. She studied her every mood, repressing here, encouraging there, but in spite of it all Jessica's small feet would somehow stray from the well marked path. Apparently her intentions were of the best and the things that happened appeared to be without malice aforethought, but she could never account for any of them, nor could she see any other possible course of procedure.

When she started to Mabel Fraser's birthday luncheon Mrs. West watched her off, calling after her the never omitted injunction: "Don't stop on the road." Jessica promised and in a few minutes returned, her hair and bows missing and her pretty dress smudged and torn. A policeman escorted her and made her apology.

"A boy was beatin' a dog, ma'am," he managed to articulate, "an' she sailed into him."

"Jessica!" her mother groaned. "How could you?"

Jessica's eyes opened, looking shocked surprise through their long lashes. "Why, I had to," hse said. "He needed it."

Washed and refrocked, she was presently en route to the luncheon again, and Mrs. West gave an unhappy hour to reviewing a disheartening situation. Jessica's love for dogs was, of course, responsible for the broken promise, but Mrs. West believed that the twig intended to make a straight tree should at all times be kept upright. The conclusion she reached was that her commands had lost force from repetition and that she had excused too easily.

Consequently, when Jessica, who loved company above everything in life, arrived, bubbling with the happenings of the afternoon, she was ordered to her room to reflect on the evil of her ways.

That had been Saturday. Monday morning she emerged, subdued and thoughtful, and Mrs. West congratulated herself that at length she had found an efficacious remedy, only at the end of the week to almost lose faith in it.

Happening to glance out of the window she discovered Jessica in the back yard ministering to the wants of five starving kittens and bartering with the dog catcher for three lame dogs. There had been a special edict on the subject of cats and dogs, and Mrs. West decided upon heroic measures. Accordingly, Snowball, the Angora, and Topsy, the spaniel, were despatched to the fancier's. Jessica missed them at once.

"I have sold them," her mother informed her. "I saw that you had provided yourself with other pets and supposed you had tired of them. You may go to your room."

Jessica's eyes, wide and startled, flew to her mother's face; then she turned and rushed blindly out.

The lesson seemed to be efficient, for days swelled to weeks and then to months, and still, so far as known, there was no lapse. The habit of obedience seemed firmly fixed.

But one day Mrs. West's confidence was utterly shattered. While waiting for a blockade to clear from the entrance to a narrow, dingy street, she saw Jessica come from one of the houses and start off, swinging her bag of books. At the crossing she passed close to the carriage, and Mrs. West motioned her to a seat. Jessica offered no explanation, and when they reached home Mrs. West looked into her eyes.

"I told you never to go to that part of the city alone," she said. "Why did you do it?"

Jessica's teacher could have explained that the particular street was an attrac-

"Mamma loved me, and papa is coming."

tion to her companion class, and that the child's errand was, in a way, hers. A colony from the famed Black Forest lived there, with a whole world of legends and traditions, and in their tiny shops there were behind porcelains and violins. But Jessica only dropped her frightened eyes and stammered a few incoherent sentences which served to confirm her mother's opinion of deliberate guilt. And the whole of the Easter vacation was spent in her room.

"Jessica reads too much," Dr. Potter, the family physician and next door neighbor, remarked. "I see her at the window with a book for days together. Better keep her out of doors more, Mrs. West. She seems very nervous, and you know she doesn't come from over-strong stock."

"Jessica is well," Mrs. West told him. "She is like me—like my family."

Dr. Potter looked up from the bed he was folding. "Oh, I beg your pardon, yes," he said. "Otherwise, she's all West. A peculiar family, those Wests. I know them root and branch. They can be broken, but they won't be bent."

The doctor had spoken with an emphasis which Mrs. West chose to resent. She thanked him coldly and left the window, but his words rankled. He had spoken truth. He did know the Wests, and he knew Dr. and Mrs. Phillip's trouble. His sympathy was with Philip, she had always felt, and she had not cared. Men were clannish she knew, and, besides, he and the Wests were friends. Resentment would be a very natural thing.

As for Jessica, she was well, of course. She had run to her mother and had thrust upon her clung, and she wandered about the house vaguely uneasy. Presently she found herself at the child's door, and started with dismay when Jessica, at her unexpected entrance, sprang up with a gasp of fright.

"Jessica, I have come for a moment's impulse, "I want a message taken to my seamstress. Be sure to hurry back," she added a moment later, when she had scribbled a note. "I am going for a drive, and you may go with me."

The carriage came and waited, one hour, then another. Mrs. West pacing from window to window, each moment more and more sick at heart. It came to her that her discipline had failed utterly. Such a simple thing it had seemed to mould the character of a child, and her attempt had shown the one impossible thing. Or was it impossible? Tomorrow she would begin all over again, and her lips thinned in a way that promised ill for Jessica's shortcomings.

But when tomorrow came Jessica lay in a darkened room, babbling in delirium. For days she bent over raving laid bare a heart overfull. The fire in the building where she waited for the steamstress, the little child that had followed her there, the deprivations that had meant punishment, the honors she had conjured all told over and over again. Dr. Potter listened grimly, and with each repetition Mrs. West's heart bled afresh. When the crisis was past and Jessica was in her first restful sleep, the doctor asked for an interview, and Mrs. West came from it looking like a dead woman, but her head was high in determination.

At the door the doctor turned. "Thing well, Mrs. West," he said. "A man's Father-in-law. A child wrecked in health and happiness are your handiwork. Your way—and has it paid? I hope better. She must be quitted."

A door above the stairs opened. The nurse, anxious and pertruded, looked relief at sight of the doctor. "I was just coming for you," she cried. "The child is awake, moaning and talking of her father. She must be quieted."

The door opened again to admit the doctor, and a woman fled down. With it was a something that gave Mrs. West another vision. She saw, not the woman she had known and herself, the womanly woman, tender, self-sacrificing, warm of heart, tolerant, but the martinet, the tyrant, the self-righteous.

"I have made a mistake, a terrible mistake," she shuddered. "I didn't understand. Oh, God! I didn't know."

A week after the doctor, going up to the sick room, stopped outside of the open door. Jessica, propped against pillows, was crooning the words of a letter. Presently she laid it down, laughing softly.

"I'm so happy," she murmured. "Mamma loved me, and papa is coming." Then shamedly: "The baby was so heavy that day and the fire and smoke—awful. I thought I was going to die, and I was glad. Now I'm so glad that I didn't."

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR ENGLISH - COMMERCIAL ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION

We have been very busy girls this month, not only on account of the things that have happened, but also because of the many other things that have to be done.

On the first Friday in the month the graduates of the school held a reunion, having the senior class as their guests. An alumnae association was formed, with Miss Ruth Kohler as president, Miss Lillie Belle Smith, vice president; Miss Ella Lee Cobb, secretary, and Miss Clio Dobbs, treasurer.

The next Friday was Peace day, and it was celebrated jointly with the Girls' High school. Dr. David Marx spoke interestingly on "Peace."

On Friday, May 23, the juniors entertained the seniors with a delightful picnic luncheon. Unfortunately, the rain fell in torrents, as we say in our themes, but we enjoyed a merry indoor spread in Lanier hall. On the same day Dr. Merominger lectured to the school on "American Art." This was the last of Dr. Momminger's art lectures. The entire series has been greatly enjoyed.

On the last Friday in May the senior class will hold a reception, to which their mothers and a few friends have been asked. I will also be "Appreciation day," each girl inviting one of her grammar school teachers by way of showing her appreciation of their efforts in the past. Our senior year has been a very happy one, and we shall always look back upon it with pleasure.

ATHLETIC HONORS IN PREP LEAGUE ARE WELL DISTRIBUTED

With the close of the baseball season in the Prep league, a review of the winners in football, basketball and baseball respectively, shows that the rags were pretty well distributed so far as going to different schools. First, we see the honors in football not very well decided, with Tech High school, Boys' High and G. M. A. having about an equal claim for first place, although no team was noticeably better than the other two, as the games with the heavier teams in the Georgia Prep Athletic association will go to show. In basketball the Culverites went through the league like a house afire, although the final winner was never fully decided until the last minute of play in the final game with the Boys' High five. The Marist team, which defeated the other teams in 1912 by such overwhelming scores, was decidedly below form this year, probably due to a certain lack of material in the Ivy street institution. This was the first pennant for the Tech High school since its entrance into the Prep about four years ago, and everyone was glad to see such a surprising awakening in athletics in the school.

In baseball the team from the Boys' High school was without an equal in any department of play, although several very close games were played. The Peacock team was a surprise to every other team, and the form that they displayed in the last game with the E. H. S. was a revelation. The Fourteenth street lads have not met with any marked success in athletic matters since the establishment of the league, and a pennant snatched from the Prep ranks and in the halls of the school would mean a big boost for the athletic ranking of the school.

LEE STREET

School news will soon be a thing of the past, for we are all looking forward to vacation now.

Last week the fifth, six, seventh and eighth grades wrote compositions on "The Fly." Every child has promised to give his earnest effort to rid his home and premises of these objectionable insects.

All of our pupils are very busy selling tickets for our entertainment to be given Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week. There will be many attractive features this year, which give promise of a delightful time to the audiences. The entertainment which was given at the last of school last year was a splendid success, and we feel doubly encouraged this year.

Our auditorium is spacious enough for every mother, father, pupil and friend of Lee street school to enjoy one or more of these delightful evenings. We invite every friend of Lee Street school to come.

We have replanted our banana tree. Last year the trees had green bananas on them when we were compelled to take them up on account of the cold weather. This year we are looking forward to some ripe bananas.

Second B is fine in spelling. They had a spelling match several days ago on the year's work. Those who remained standing were Mary Binns, Cecil Young, Lenora Dodge, Ruth Brewer, Ada Nichols, Edwin Eubanks, Marion Hope, Tom Kenaday, John Griner, Gardner Dickinson, Robert Johnson, Roy Coleman, J. P. Steed, Willard Christian, Ernest Evans, Thurstan Smith, Marvin Green and Robert Lacy.

RIVAL SUNDAY SCHOOLS WILL PICNIC JUNE 10

Grant Park Selected for First Christian-Second Baptist Joint Affair

There will be some 2,500 people, of all ages from babyhood up, at the picnic of the First Christian and Second Baptist Sunday schools when those two big champion organizations get together in their joint celebartion of the recent great contest between them. It will be the first picnic in Grant Park ever saw, undoubtedly. It will be so big that it will have to be protected by the police, and city officers in uniform will be there to keep out all intruders.

The loaded baskets will be carried out in vans by the Southern Express company. The baskets will be delivered by their owners at their respective churches, and from there will be carried out to the tremendous feast.

At 2 o'clock the program of games, songs, etc., will begin. Thereafter until such hour as suits them to go home, the picnickers will have the time of their lives. Committees representing the churches have been at work together upon the details of the program.

This is the picnic which was the prize of the contest that ended recently between the two Sunday schools. Originally, the plan was that the loser should be host to the winner, but this was lost from sight before the contest was half over. The only penalty the Second Baptists will pay will be to furnish the band and lemonade, etc. And the Christian school members are determined to more than compensate the difference ,it is said, in good things to eat.

Sunday School Contest

Members of the Baptist Tabernacle Sunday school are urged to be present Sunday, June 1, at the morning service, when a three-months contest for new members will be launched.

To School Page Correspondents:

The next issue of the school page, that of June 7, will close the last of the 1912-13 school year, and the editor wishes to make of this one of the best of the number which have appeared so far. Therefore, the correspondent from each school is requested to send in a short resume of the work in your school for the term. That is, any especial work that has been undertaken or any features that have been inaugurated outside of the regular prescribed line of work. Thus the penny lunches that are a feature of certain schools would be a good example, while the work of the several literary and debating societies is another. Several of the schools have been successful along athletic lines, in winning baseball championships, and plaques for good field day work.

New Communion Service

At the regular morning hour at the First Methodist church, next Sunday, the pastor, Dr. H. M. DuBose, will preach and introduce the handsome new individual communion plate and cups manufactured by the Deitz company of Chicago. This service consists of a cabinet of 432 crystal cups in twelve trays, and was manufactured with a view to securing all points of advantage and convenience in the new order, and of enhancing the letter and spirit of solemnity in the administration. The attendance upon the communion at this church is large and is steadily grown, the additions to the membership of the church have been increased by more than 150 during the past six months.

All-Day Singing Sunday

Everybody is invited to an all-day sacred harp singing at Stone Mountain, Sunday, June 1. This singing will be organized for every year on the first Sunday in June. The train leaves Atlanta at 7:30 a. m. Singers are coming from all sections of the country.

ADDITIONAL NEWS FROM ATLANTA SCHOOLS

Closing Exercises of Grammar Schools Will Come Thursday

According to the usual custom in the grammar schools of the city system, the last two days of school will be marked with the closing exercises of the several institutions. These affairs generally take the form of a meeting of the literary and debating society of the school, with the usual program of declamations, debates, and songs by the children, with the entire roster of the patrons of the school invited to attend. While the last day in the grammar schools is Friday, June 6, the exercises are announced for most of the schools for the day before, on account of the fact that the schools are dismissed at 12 o'clock on Friday, and the time from eight until then is taken up with arranging the final details of promotion, leave-taking, etc.

While it has been the custom in the past for the graduating class of the Boys' High school to feature their exercises with some kind of spectacular gymnastic drill, the large number of the class for the term of 1912-13 precludes this idea, and the boys have been forced to contene themselves with the mere receiving of their diplomas, the speeches by members of the class, and the graduating address by the president of the school board, the Hon. W. R. Daley, and according to the expressions on the faces of certain of the senior class during the week just past, when final examinations were in full sway, this will exceed their fullest expectations.

BAPTISM SERVICE AT CONGREGATIONAL TODAY

Holy Communion Will Also Be Observed—Musical Program for Today

At Central Congregational church, Ellis street and Carnegie way, Sunday morning the ordinance of baptism will be administered to new members and the holy communion will be observed. The minister, Dr. George Loring Hanscom, will have for the subject of the communion address, "The Meaning of the Lord's Supper." Members of all evangelical churches are free to partake of the communion in the Congregational church, and strangers in the city are especially invited to attend this service.

At the evening service the subject of the sermon by Dr. Hanscom will be, "The Heart of a Spring." The regular Sunday evening services at this church are evangelistic in character and the sermons contain a stirring appeal to the audience to aspire to better deeds and nobler lives.

As the church is located in the heart of the city, the Sunda yevening audiences are made up largely of transients, and this fact, with the hearty welcome extended to all, gives the church its favorite name, "Sunday Home for Strangers."

The program of music for the services of the day, under the direction of Miss Ethel Byer, follows:

ELEVEN O'CLOCK.

Organ, nocture (Dethier).

"Sanctus" (Ch. Gounod)—Miss Askew and choir.

"Savior, Source of Every Blessing" (Sealy)—Mr. Hubbard and choir.

Organ, festal postlude (King).

EIGHT O'CLOCK.

Organ, intermezzo, Sonata A Minor (Rheinberger).

"The Sands of Time Are Sinking" (N. H. Allen)—Choir.

"Lord of All Being" (F. S. Shepard)—Miss Milledge and Choir.

Organ, postlude (Peterson Hagg).

Constantine "Swelled Headed"

ATHENS, May 31.—It is remarkable fact about the new king of Greece is that he as the biggest head in all the courts of Europe, and he takes such a large size in hats that they have to be specially made for him. On one occasion, a few years ago, a certain high personage who had been invited to the court at Athens happened to leave just at the moment when the crown prince was about to set out for a walk. By mistake he took up the crown prince's silk hat and put it on. Instantly his entire face and head disappeared from view, and he was extinguished both physically and morally when he heard his royal highness say, "Excuse me, but it is my hat you have taken."

People here are saying just now that despite the size of his majesty's head, it is showing some tendency to swell to even greater dimensions. Only the other day a little incident occurred which goes to show that perhaps they are right. A deputation of the chamber presented itself to convey to the new king the condolences of parliament on the assassination of his royal father. The president took the opportunity of reminding his majesty of the great respect King George had always manifested for the constitution. The king replied: "I will never forget my duties, but I shall also be mindful of my rights." The phrase has provoked much comment, and his majesty's ministers already see rocks ahead.

All the signs indicate that King Constantine's autocratic policy will be strongly backed by his consort. Queen Sophia, since ascending the throne, has lost no time in asserting her dignity, and one of her first acts has been to close the palace doors to all persons who sided against her husband at the time of the revolution in 1909. She gave orders that no replies were to be made to their letters of condolence on the death of King George. Needless to say, all these incidents are the subject of much comment and speculation, and people are asking themselves whether Greece is reverting to the autocratic rule of King Otho and Queen Amelia.

Princess' Wedding Stopped

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

BOMBAY, May 31.—The projected marriage between Princess Indira, daughter of the Gackwar of Baroda, and Prince Jitendra, brother of the Maharajah of Kach Behar, has been broken off at the last moment.

It appears that the prince made a formal proposal for the hand of Princess Indira but the Gackwar and the Maharajah did not assent to the request. Prince Jitendra, however, still hoped to induce them to reconsider their decision, and meanwhile preparations for the marriage were in full progress. Officials declare that the Gackwar will never consent to the match, for various reasons into which it is not necessary to enter. The Gackwar and his daughter have left for England.

The Barodas and the Behars are the last known to England of all India's sovereigns. The sons of the present generation of both houses are Etonians or varsity men, and the daughters owe their splendid educations to the cream of our girls' schools. In the circumstances it is interesting to read that "the Princess Indira learned the ways of English courtships with the result that on her return to India in 1910, her engagement to the Maharajah Gwalior of Scindia, whom she had never seen, was at once broken off." The princess, who is twenty and a beautiful girl, holds a Bombay university degree.

RUSSIAN OFFICER IS KILLED IN AEROPLANE

Lieutenant Ralabuchkin Dies in Fall, but Passenger Escapes Death

(By Associated Press.)

ST. PETERSBURG, May 31.—Lieutenant Ralabuchkin, of the Russian army, was killed today by a fall from an aeroplane. A passenger with him escaped with a broken arm.

PARABLES OF KINGDOM SUBJECT OF SERIES

Dr. Dunbar Ogden Begins Series Sunday Morning at Central Presbyterian

"Parables of the Kingdom" will be the subject of a special series of sermons which Dr. Dunbar Ogden will deliver at the Central Presbyterian church, beginning this morning.

The first of these will be on the subject, "The Word of the Kingdom," and will be followed Sunday evening by the second of the series, on "The Sons of the Kingdom."

In delivering the series, Dr. Ogden will put into the practical ministry of the present day the genuine and universal philosophy of life contained in the parables of Christ, finding application of the same thoughts in the modern world of industry and science.

Beautiful Tiles Vanish

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 24.—Stolen almost tile by tile from the mosque of the market place at Kashan, the greater part of a Persian Mehrab, to which every Mahommedan worshiper makes obeisance, will shortly be exhibited with other Persian antiques at the Vincent Robinson golleries in Wigmore street.

Rectangular in shape, measuring nine fet, four inches by six fet, the antique consists principally of silver and gold lustre tiles for which the Persians were famous, and was built into the wall of the mosque pointing directly towards Mecca.

The bulk of the Mihrab has now come into the hands of Mr. John Richard Preece who was formerly consul genral at Ispahan.

Mr. B. W. Stainton who was associated with Mr. Preece in forming his collection said that in 1879 this Mihrab was intact but on inspecting it again in the following summer he saw that a ptece had disappeared. Portions continued to disappear mysteriously despite the presence of guards until it was nearly all gone. Probably the watchmen were in league with the robbers. One special guard was killed mysteriously at his post and three others were drugged.

Diphtheria Discovery

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

BERLIN, May 31.—Details have been published of the new diphtheria serum of Professor Behring, who announced at the medical congress at Wiesbaden that he had discovered a method of producing prolonged immunity from the disease by the injection of a serum consisting of diphtheria poison and antidote.

The discovery appears to be considered by the medical faculty as a highly important development, which may possibly affect the whole method of treatment in cases of infectious diseases. By vaccinating horses with the poison from diphtheria bacilli, Professor Behring obtained a secondary poison which contains its own antidote. This, injected into human beings, produces a slight, non-dangerous, feverish reaction, but renders the patient not only immune against immediate infection during a diphtheria epidemic, but also maintains its value for a period of a full year.

Professor Behring reports over a hundred successful vaccinations, and all the vaccinated inmates of a hospital where diphtheria raged were immune throughout the epidemic. The treatment is expected to be valuable in schools and hospitals, especially lying-in hospitals.

Importance attaches to the fact that Professor Behring's method renders harmless the so-called "germ carriers" —persons who are always infectious, though they have recovered from the disease.

Chicago Officially Puts Ban "Smut" Song

CHICAGO, May 31.—Chicago officially put a ban on the "smut" song today when an amendment to the city ordinances went into effect prohibiting all public acts of indecency, suggestive, gestures or songs or abusive or threatening words or acts in any public place.

Superintendent of Police McWeeney sent out an order calling attention to the amendment and instructing that all violations be followed by arrest and prosecution. The penalty for violations is a fine ranging from $5 to $100.

"The new amendment is broad and is especially good for the suppression of 'smutty' songs," said the police chief. Strict enforcement of the amendment is promised and the board of "censors" expects to keep a close watch on all vaudeville and cabaret shows.

TULANE MAN QUALIFIES FOR MEET

ST. LOUIS, May 31.—Athletes from fifteen colleges in the Mississippi valley had qualified for the finals in the Missouri valley conference meet which began here this afternoon. In the first semi-final heat of the 100 yard dash, Coleman, of Tulane, was first. His time was :10 2-5.

YOUNG KING ALFONSO FIRST AID TO INJURED

Jumps From Moving Train to Go to Rescue of Unknown Child

(By Associated Press.)

MADRID, May 31.—According to General Azena, chief of King Alfonso's military household, the young king recently figured in a tragic incident near Utrera, while traveling in the royal train. One of two little girls, who had been playing on the railway line was struck by the train and badly injured.

King Alfonso looked from the window and upon seeing the wounded girl jumped from the window of the still moving train and was first to give aid to the injured. When others alighted from the train they found the king with the little girl in his arms, endeavoring to stop the flow of blood, but she died in a few minutes.

The king was profoundly impressed and endeavored to console the mother of the child, who was the woman in charge of the railway crossing and he gave her a sum of money.

They're Puttingthe Lid On Charleston Now

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 31.—On orders of Mayor Grace, the police department has closed several pool rooms and upon the removal of these establishments to the suburbs, the rural police suppressed them, putting an end to the operation of those places. The police department also has inaugurated a vigorous campaign against blind tigers. The gambling establishments have been forced to quit operation and attention is also to be given to the tenderloin district with the result that Charleston is not as wide-open as it has been.

A Law and Order league was recently organized, but the mayor and Chief of Police Cantwell will make no statement on the situation.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT RECEIVES WALTER PAGE

LONDON, May 31.—The duke of Connaught received the American ambassador, Walter H. Page, this afternoon.

ATWOOD MAKES FLIGHT IN HYDRO-AEROPLANE

Starts Across Lake Ontario, Gas Gives Out, He Is Picked Up

(By Associated Press.)

SANDUSKY, O., May 31.—Harry N. Atwood, of Boston, the aviator who flew from St. Louis to Boston in an aeroplane two years ago, left this city this afternoon in a "flying boat" of his own manufacture. He was sighted over Put-In-Bay island at 3:30 but nothing more has been heard of him at 10 o'clock tonight.

A telephone message received here at 10:15 o'clock stated that Atwood had made a safe landing this evening near Amherstburg, Ot., on the Detroit river, a few miles south of Detroit. No details of the flight were given.

Atwood Is Picked Up On River Near Detroit

(By Associated Press.)

DETROIT, Mich., May 31.—Harry N. Atwood, en route from Sandusky to Cleveland across Lake Erie in a hydro-aeroplane, was picked up near Amherstburg, Ont., this evening. His gasoline had given out and he is spending the night at Amherstburg.

Atwood told his rescuers that for and wind, when he was about thirty miles out of Cleveland, caused him to change his course for Put-In-Bay. He said that while flying about a thousand feet up his gasoline ran low. When he reached the water he appealed to passing freighters, and one summoned a tug from Amherstburg which picked him up. Atwood said he would attempt another trip up the river to this city tomorrow. The machine was not damaged.

Paris Poet's Crime

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS, May 31.—The Parisians are discussing the gay city's latest passionate crime—the murder of his young divorced wife by M. Henri de Betouzet, a poet and litterateur, author of a volume of poems called "The Wheel of Houra," and a series of novels entitled, "Under the Patina." The motive for the tragedy is found in his statement that since his marriage his happiness has gone to ruin. His wife was the handsome and wealthy daughter of an army officer, and they were married four years ago. A year later came a separation in consequence of the wife's friendship with a young man, and a divorce followed. The husband went to live with his parents, his father, M. Roger Beyre, being a professor at the Lycee Charlemagne. The wife went to reside with her parents in another part of the city. The custody of the child was confined to the parents of the husband.

The mother called at the house to see her little daughter, and a dispute between her and the father took place. M. Beyre de Betouzet was in a state of great excitement.

Great Talent

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 31.—The different talents of the royal ladies of Europe are always interesting. Queen Mary's essay in painting on china during her recent visit to the potteries has been extensively written about, but a French newspaper has remarked that most of the present day queens could earn their living at a pinch. "Carmen Sylva" is a very talented authoress, and could make an income from her literary abilities. Should this fail her, she might live by secretarial work, for she knows several languages, writes shorthand, and is an expert typist. The queen of the Belgians has taken a medical degree at Leipsig, and before she was married she used to help Duke Theodore of Bavaria in his practice as an oculist. She is also a skilful motor car driver, and could easily compete with any high class milliner. She is very clever at book binding, and her versatility extends to painting, which she does uncommonly well. The German empress and Queen Wilhelmina of Holland are not really so accomplished, but both are fairly good at miniature painting.

THE GAVEL THAT CAME OUT OF THE BATTLESHIP MAINE AND ITS MAKER

The gavel shown in the picture was made from the seat of an officer's chair which was raised with the battleship Maine. Its maker is Dr. Montague Hart Tuttle, an Atlanta dentist. This gavel will be presented to the Stone Castle chapter, D. A. R., of Dawson, Ga.

When the meetings of Stone Castle chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, are called to order in the future the gavel which begins them with its thud will be formed of a seasoaked piece of wood that lay for fifteen years in the debris of the battleshiu Maine in Havana harbor.

Its surface is oily with ocean brine and rough from the work o fthe sea insects that ate into the wood to the core; but its very appearance of service will make it precious to the daughters of the Stone Castle chapter.

The gavel is formed from pieces of an officer's chair which went down with the ill-fated Maine. From 1898 to 1912 the battleship rested in the waters of the Cuban harbor.

When it was raised last winter, there were scores of applications from people all over the United States for souvenirs from the famous old vessel. Mrs. J. S. Lowry, of Dawson, Ga., was lucky enough to procure an officer's chair from the commander of the navy yard at Washington.

Mrs. Lowry sent the chair to Dr. Montague Hart Tuttle, a local dentist, who has had some experience in turning out wood from a lathe. From the mahogany seat of the chair the doctor formed the gavel.

The gavel will be presented to the Stone Castle chapter some time in the early part of June by Mrs. Lowry, who is the chapter's regent. The gavel bears this inscription, "Presented to the Stone Castle chapter, D. A. R., by Mrs. Jno. G. Lowry, organizing regent, 1911-1913. 'Remember the Maine!'"

PALMETTO STATE HAS LIVELY TOGA RACE ON

Governor Blease Opposes Incumbent, E. D. Smith—Stevenson May Enter

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 31.—"I will positively announce on May 1, 1914, whether I will make the race for the United States senate or not, and that is all I have to say at present," said Representative W. F. Stevenson, of Chesterfield, to The Journal correspondent this morning.

A dispatch from Washington crediting Mr. Stevenson with preparing to enter the senatorial race created much interest throughout the state, but he announced that the dispatch had been published without his knowledge.

Representative Stevenson is a leader of the anti-Blease forces and a bitter political enemy of Governor Blease, who always refers to him as "Seaboard Bill." Mr. Stevenson comes from Chesterfield county, which, despite the fact that it gave a majority for Governor Blease last summer, returned Representative Stevenson by a handsome majority. He was bitterly fought by the administration forces.

TWO CANDIDATES ALREADY.

Governor Blease has already announced that he would be in the race for the United States senate next summer against E. D. Smith, the present incumbent. The entrance of Mr. Stevenson would further enliven that campaign.

Mr. Stevenson was associated with former Attorney General Lyon in the trial of the dispensary graft cases, and his speeches to the juries always drew great crowds. He was attorney for the state at the same time that Colonel Thomas B. Felder, of Atlanta, was attorney for the dispensary winding-up commission, which was making the liquor houses disgorge the overcharges that they had made against the old state dispensary.

SCARBOROUGH MAY ENTER.

That former Congressman R. B. Scarborough, of Horry county, is figuring on entering the senatorial primaries next summer is also known. Mr. Scarborough formerly represented the Sixth District in congress and prior to that served in the state legislature.

WHAT BLEASE SAYS.

"You can just say that I am going to be sworn in as junior senator from South Carolina on the fourth of March, 1915," said Governor Blease when all these possible opponents were brought to his attention.

"I am daily receiving assurances from former opponents that they are going to support me for the senate, and I am certain of election," he declared. His friends think some of the anti-Blease faction would like to get Senator Smith to retire so they could bring out a new leader, but that Mr. Smith is going to stay in and make the race. The governor is confident that he is going to make a runaway race of it with Senator Smith, and that after the first few meetings it will be a regular picnic.

Wealthy Man's Sacrifice

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, May 31.—A politician of some note, of considerable wealth, and of good family, has startled his friends by announcing his intention of acting an the Scriptural injunction, "Sell all thou hast and give to the poor." In this case the "poor" means the Socialist movement and those who are furthering the cause of "Votes for Women," and the generous politician is Mr. H. D. Harben, of Newlands Park, Bucks, son of the late Sir Henry Harben, president of the Prudential Life Assurance company. Mr. Harben has decided to part with his horses, land and other luxuries as the preliminary step to entering upon something nearer to the "simple life."

GOV. BLEASE ISSUES ENCAMPMENT ORDERS

He Upsets Some Plans That Had Been Made by Adjutant General

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 31.—Peremptory orders for the First regiment of the South Carolina national guard to encamp this summer at Aiken, for the Third to go into camp at Anderson, and the Second to encamp on the state rifle range near this city if the men desire, but advising against their doing so because the camp site cannot be placed in the proper sanitary condition in time, were issued this morning by Governor Blease to Adjutant General Moore, in his capacity as comander-in-chief of the state militia.

Arrangements for holding the encampments of all three regiments on the rifle range which had been made by the adjutant general were abandoned on receipt of the governor's orders.

No comment was made by Adjutant General Moore on the action of the governor.

In his letter to General Moore the governor said:

"You will please issue the necessary order for the First regiment, national giard of South Carolina, to encamp at Aiken, S. C., at such time during the month of July or during the month of August as is most convenient to said regiment.

"You will please issue the necessary order for the Third regiment, national guard of South Carolina, to encamp at Anderson for ten days, at such time during the month of July or during the month of August as may suit this regiment.

"You will please issue the necessary order for the Second regiment to encamp at Columbia, S. C., for ten days during the summer, provided the men of said regiment are willing to take the risk of fever at the new camp. If they are not willing to take said risk, I will designate another place for their encampment.

"After investigation and inquiry, I am thoroughly convinced that it would be very injurious to the health of the men from the up-country to place them in the swamps of what is to be known as the new rifle range at this time, just after the boring of the well, when it will not be known whether this well will supply the necessary amount of water, and, even if it does supply the necessary amount, when it will not be known whether it is pure or not. With fresh ditches dug, fresh earth turned up, the clearing away of the underbrush, the exposure to the sun of the fresh and new cleared ground that will be necessary in making proper preparations at the new camp site, I am convinced that it will probably be very injurious to the health of men camped there, and the strong presumption will be that if the men from the upper tier of counties are forced to go there and use the water and live in daily contact with this fresh-turned earth and the other conditions that they will leave the encampment with chills and fever or possibly some more serious disease, and I cannot give my consent for these men to go there under these conditions.

"You will, therefore, abandon the idea of holding an encampment there this summer unless the companies in the middle tier of counties, who are used to the climate and the water of this section, are willing to run the risk. And my advice to them is not so to do.

"I hope you will push the completion of the camp site, have everything in good order, give the ground time to be sunned out and thoroughly cleared off and dried out, give full opportunity for the test of the water, and have everything in readiness for the next encampment, but I think it would be very injurious to order these men there now, on this cleared ground, over this fresh, upturned earth, with untried water, and in case the water supply should not be sufficient you may readily see what a terrible predicament the men would be thrown into.

"Therefore, looking at the matter from a sanitary standpoint, no encampment should be held there this summer."

SOME PUPILS OF THE JACKSON HILL BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL

Little folks who on Friday afternoon attended the party at the church given by the Woman's Missionary society to the forty-one pupils who on last Sunday graduated from the primary department. There are 260 children in this department, which boasts the largest primary roll of any Baptist Sunday school in the city.

GRANDSTAND BURNS AT CHARLESTON, S. C.

(By Associated Press.)

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 31.—During the progress of an amateur baseball game this afternoon at Hampton Park, the baseball grounds of the Charleston club, the grandstand caught fire and burned. There were many spectators in the stand at the time the blaze was discovered, but no one was hurt. The theory is that a lighted cigarette or match was dropped between the cracks of the stand and thus caused the fire.

Owner Walsh, of the local club, states that the six games scheduled with Columbus and Jacksonville next week will be played here. A new grandstand will be erected at once.

MUSCOGEE JURY PAYS ITS RESPECTS TO SPEEDERS

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 31.—The Muscogee county grand jury paid its respects to the speeders in the regular presentments returned to the court late Friday, and some timely recommendations for legislation are made. Following paragraphs appear in the presentments on the subject:

"We wish to heartily concur in the resolutions passed by the county commissioners and previous grand juries calling upon the sheriff, constables and county bailiffs to enforce the law relative to the operation of automobiles and similar vehicles and to present to each grand jury all violators of this law that they may be dealt with as by statute made and provided.

"We would recommend to our senator and representatives in the general assembly that a law be passed regulating the speed of automobiles, etc., upon the public highways, believing there is urgent need for such legislation."

DISSOLUTION PLANS ARE STILL IN AIR

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Attorney General McReynolds today said he had not reached a conclusion as to the adequacy of the proposed plan for dissolution of the Union Pacific merger by which $126,650,000 in Southern Pacific stock held by the Union Pacific would be sold to the highest bidder like city bonds. He declared, however, that he was opposed to the alternative plan by which the stock would be placed in the hands of trustees.

The alternative plan is practically the same as one submitted to the attorney general some time ago. He objects on the ground that it would place the Southern Pacific stock under the control of Union Pacific interests for an indefinite period.

PLAYERS GIVE LETTER PERFECT REHEARSAL

Society Players Will Present Oscar Wilde's Comedy at Grand Tuesday

In a special rehearsal Saturday night the Players' club cast presenting Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Ernest" went through the entire play without manuscript, developing many unique touches in the manner of interpretation.

Monday night they will hold their final rehearsal in preparation for the rehearsal Tuesday night at the Grand opera house. This last rehearsal will be on the stage of the Grand, with all the scenery set in place and the players in costume.

Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, who will take one of the leading roles in the play, will lend the club many of her fine rugs and other furnishings to adorn the stage at the performance. Practically all the properties will be from Atlanta homes, which will give a savor of individuality and refinement about the setting that cannot be found in the ordinary stage settings of the traveling companies.

Other well-known Atlanta people in the cast are Miss Hildreth Burton Smith, Mrs. Henry Bernard Scott, Mrs. William Owens, Lamar Hill, Marsh Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and R. Frank Taylor.

TOM DONALDSON JOINS CAST.

Tom Donaldson, who is well known for his former success in amateur dramatic circles, has been secured for the minor part of one of the English butlers. Frank Taylor, who plays the other butler, was formerly president of the Players' club at Norfolk, Va. The pair are very unique in the different roles of the austere English servants.

Mrs. Scott's interpretation of the old maid governess, Miss Prism, is one of the features of the play. Although in real life very, very much different from the character she portrays—and she frankly says she doesn't like the roles she has thrown into her acting a versatility that is remarkable. She has been highly praised by Warren A. Rogers, stage director of the club. Mr. Rogers has been working with almost superhuman energy on the rehearsals of the play. He knows the entire action, line for line, and is able to throw himself into the various parts with his whole soul, working with each of the players in turn to attain the highest art in the interpretation of the lines.

The performance is confidently declared to be one of the finest amateur performances ever given in Atlanta. "After the show" the entire cast will be entertained at supper on the lawn of the Piedmont Driving club, together with the officers of the Players' club, and with the other people gathered on the lawn this will probably be one of the most interesting society events of the summer.

Fire Destroys Docks

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 31.—St. Mary's, Camden county, was visited by a destructive fire this afternoon, the entire water front being consumed. The loss is estimated at $50,000, the Brandon lumber company being the heaviest loser. The railroad docks of the Atlanta, Waycross and Northern railway and the municipal docks were totally destroyed.

"A Perfect Woman Nobly Planned To Warn, to Comfort and Command"

Nature never intended woman to be delicate, ailing, or a sufferer from "nerves." Women in middle age complain of "hot flashes." Many women suffer needlessly from girlhood to womanhood, and from motherhood to middle life, with backache, or headache, dizziness, faintness, or bearing-down sensations. For a permanent relief from these distressing symptoms nothing is so good as

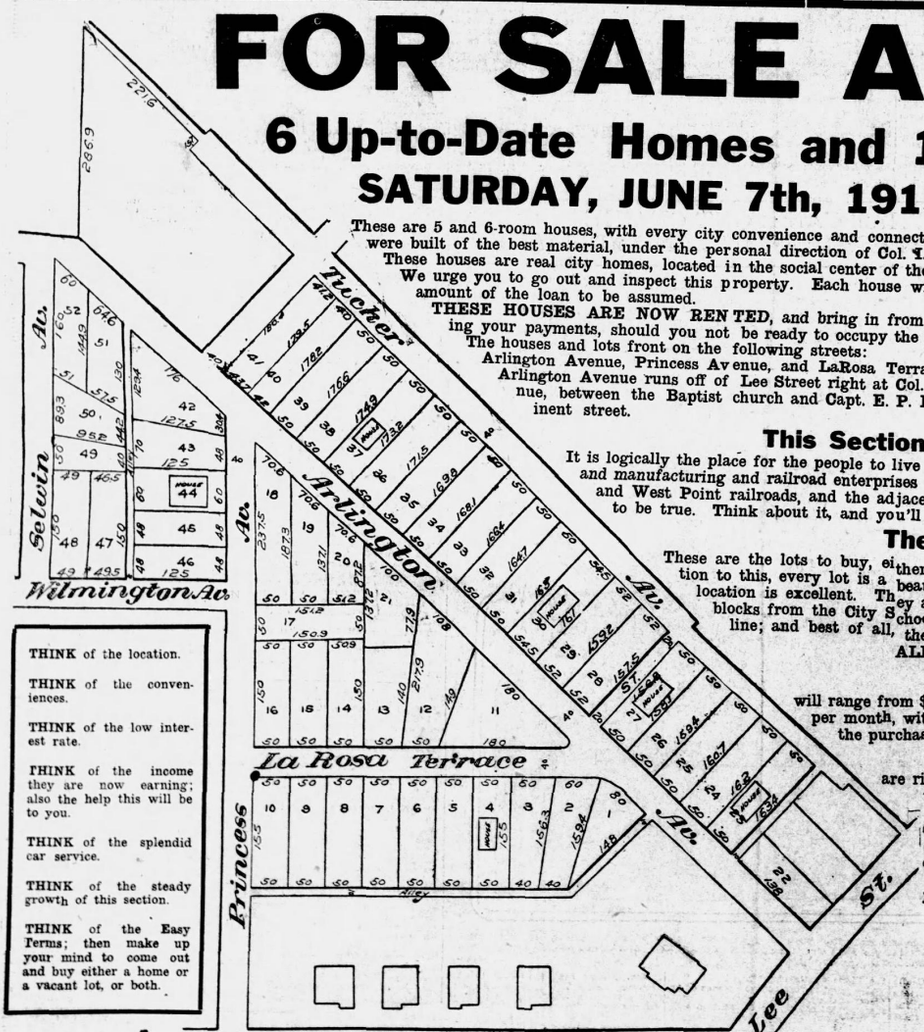
FOR SALE AT AUCTION

6 Up-to-Date Homes and 19 Ready-to-Build-On Lots

SATURDAY, JUNE 7th, 1913, at 3 P. M., on the Premises



These are 5 and 6-room houses, with every city convenience and connection, including furnace in several of the houses, but no gas as yet. These houses were built of the best material, under the personal direction of Col. T. N. Ragsdale, who could not be induced to build a shoddy house. These houses are real city homes, located in the social center of the Tenth Ward, and only a step from the best car service in Atlanta. We urge you to go out and inspect this property. Each house will be plainly placarded, showing cash payment and monthly payments; also the amount of the loan to be assumed.

THESE HOUSES ARE NOW RENTED, and bring in from $18.50 to $30.00 per month. Think of what a help that will be to you, in meeting your payments, should you not be ready to occupy the house.

The houses and lots front on the following streets:

Arlington Avenue, Princess Avenue, and LaRosa Terrace.

This Section Has No Objectionable Feature

It is logically the place for the people to live who are engaged in business, or who are employed among the many industrial and manufacturing and railroad enterprises around the Terminal Station, Whitehall Street, Mitchell Street, and the Central and West Point railroads, and the adjacent territory. The car service and the way the streets run prove these statements to be true. Think about it, and you'll see it as we do.

The Lots Are Ready to Build On

These are the lots to buy, either for home sites or for speculation, because they are ready to build on. In addition to this, every lot is a beauty, with nice young oak shade trees scattered over them. Also, because their location is excellent. They are only a short distance from the business center of Oakland City. Only two blocks from the City School, and near the churches; and the farthest lot is only two blocks from the car line; and best of all, they are socially in the swim, and

ALL CITY IMPROVEMENTS DOWN AND PAID FOR.

The Terms on the Houses will range from $150 to $250 cash, and the payments will range from $22.50 per month to $32.50 per month, with 6 per cent simple interest. Small loan on five of the houses, to be assumed by the purchaser.

The Terms on the Lots are right. Every lot will be sold on terms of $50 cash, and the balance $15 per month, with only 6 per cent simple interest on the deferred payments.

HOW TO GET THERE—Take cars at the corner of Forsyth and Alabama streets, marked "East Point," "Hapeville" or "College Park." Get off at the corner of Avon (Oakland) Avenue. You will then be only a step from this property.

COME AND BE SURE TO BUY—You will never regret it if you do, and you will be sorry if you don't. Get plans from

THINK of the location.

THINK of the conveniences.

THINK of the low interest rate.

THINK of the income they are now earning; also the help this will be to you.

THINK of the splendid car service.

THINK of the steady growth of this section.

THINK of the Easy Terms; then make up your mind to come out and buy either a home or a vacant lot, or both.
